We are not alone. Many other communities also are struggling because of the lack of adequate funding from the state. The Selectmen, the School Committee, the Parent Advisory Committee, our Town Manager and Superintendent have all been meeting with our elected representatives to urge them to get us the relief our community needs. The good news is - they are listening. The other night, during a meeting with Selectmen and the School Committee, Mary Jeanette Murray provided us with a total of 31 new bills that are currently pending either in the House or in the Senate. All of these bills seek to provide funding relief to schools districts. However, the bad news is that this sorely needed funding relief will probably not be available for another two or three years.

So here we stand, at a crossroad. We, like so many other towns, need to decide whether we will take the first road and tough it out for two or three years until we receive our funding relief or whether we will take the other road, the easy road and start to dismantle our school system. I say the "easy road" because it is easy to say no to higher taxes. It's hard to say yes. I say dismantle our school system because if we take the easy road, by the time we receive funding relief, it will be too late. We will have gone down the slippery slope to mediocrity from which we can never return.

We must remember what it is that we are trying to maintain by voting for all three override questions. We are trying to maintain what, very simply, is one of the top school districts in the entire Commonwealth of Massachusetts. We ranked 19th out of over 200 school districts in the recent MCAS testing. We consistently send over 90% of our high school graduates to four year colleges. Our advanced placement course selection and our sports programs far exceed those available in similar systems. Our no cut policy for Middle School sports provides every student who wants to participate in athletics the chance to do so.

We, like so many other towns, need to decide whether we will take the first road and tough it out for two or three years until we receive our funding relief or whether we will take the other road, the easy road and start to dismantle our school system.

We have been criticized for the teachers' contract, the maintenance of the schools and the air conditioning at Joseph Osgood. I will briefly respond to these issues:

1) We have negotiated a very fair contract for our teachers. This contract provides that our teachers will be paid only the average pay received by teachers in area. Our teachers are the backbone of our school system and they are entitled to an average wage. The continued criticism of the teachers' contract is nothing more than teacher bashing and it must stop.

2) The School Committee is committed to working with the Town to ensure that the Schools come under the umbrella of the maintenance division of the Department of Public Works. We have begun discussions with the town on this issue and I am confident that we will reach an agreement in the near future.

3) This override has absolutely nothing to do with the air conditioning of the Joseph Osgood School. That air conditioning is a capital item that was approved by a recent town meeting so that the school could be used during the summer months by groups in our town or rented out to outside organizations. Funds that were voted by town meeting will be reimbursed by the state at a 60% level and cannot be used for any operational items that are covered under the budget and this override.

Whenever we talk about a tax increase, we are always concerned about the effect that it will have on our senior citizens and others who have a limited income. Age and economic diversity is important but so is the maintenance of an excellent school system. Our senior citizens currently have available to them a tax deferral program that can benefit those with incomes of less than $40,000.00. The School Committee urges the Selectmen to continue to work to find other programs to help our senior citizens. I for one would be willing to pay more taxes for programs that would help ensure that we maintain age and economic diversity.

So here we are, at a crossroad. For an average of 61 cents a day we can choose the right road for Cohasset and our children while we continue to fight for the state funding we need. Many other towns are also at this crossroad. Most will choose the easy road and allow their school system to slip away. I believe Cohasset is different. I believe that Cohasset is willing to tough it out for two or three years until funding relief is obtained. I believe that if we do, a few years from now, when that relief finally arrives we will look at our school system and reflect back to this week and know that, in the words of the poet, we took the road less traveled and that has made all the difference.

Mark DeGiacomo is chairman of the Cohasset School Committee.

Gene Sarazen - an appreciation

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I tell you, it ain't all peaches and cream, this business of traipsing around the country in search of information that may or may not titillate or educate readers or viewers.

I was reminded of this last week when Gene Sarazen, my favorite golfer, died at the age of 97.

Now my having a favorite golfer is worthy of explanation since I'm not sure it qualifies as a sport to beat up on a defenseless white ball, then hop on a cart while some kid carries your clubs to the next hole where you assault the ball again.

But Gene, whether he was aware of it or not, rescued me from what could have been one of the worst and most embarrassing weekends of my life.

But Gene, whether he was aware of it or not, rescued me from what could have been one of the worst and most embarrassing weekends of my life.

We were doing a series of stories based on the recollections of celebrities who were celebrated in the Roaring 20s. Since I had once tried out for the Thomas A. Watson School baseball team, I was chosen to handle the sports installment.

My man was picked for me. It was Gene Sarazen, who qualified as a celebrity by winning the PGA championship three times, the U. S. Open twice, the British Open and the Masters in the 20s and early 30s.

I called Gene at his estate in upstate New York. He couldn't see me right away, he said, because, at the age of 60-something, he was playing in a tournament in Philadelphia. We made arrangements to have breakfast in his hotel room at 7:30 Saturday morning before he teed off.

I checked into the hotel Friday night so that I could have a good night's rest before confronting an expert on a subject of which I knew little. It was at that precise moment that the whole weekend started falling apart.

When I turned from the registration desk, there stood the Boston golf writing contingent, Joe Looney of the Herald, Nick DelNinno of the Traveler and Roger Barry of the Ledger.

Naturally, we went to dinner at Bookbinders Restaurant where, I recall distinctly, I had broiled scallops with French fries and tomatoes. That's the last thing I recall distinctly.

Roger, who doesn't drink, and Joe, who quits after one or two, dropped away and it was Nick and I wallowing in the fleshpots of the City of Brotherly Love.

We crawled back to the hotel after closing every bar in Philadelphia and the first person we saw was the night manager. Nick, it turned out, had gotten him tickets for the Philadelphia-New York World Series 10 years before and, even at this late date, there was nothing he wouldn't do for us.

For one thing, he reopened the bar just for the three of us and when I reeled off to bed it was somewhere between five and six in the morning. I was to meet Sarazen in his room after, at best, a couple of hours sleep.

I woke up with the grandmother of all hangovers. That wasn't a ball of cotton in my mouth, it was a whole bale. John Philip Sousa's band was playing in my head. I'm not sure but I think my teeth itched.

Now there are two types of interviews. One is when you ask a question and the subject says "Yes" or "No." and looks to you for the next question. In the other type, you ask a question and you have trouble shutting him up.

Gene was the latter type, for which I was eternally grateful. I asked a question and all I had to do was take notes frantically while holding my head in one hand and occasionally lifting a forkful of scrambled eggs to my mouth. My reputation, maybe even my job, was saved. Eventually, I recovered from my disability and wrote a pretty damn good story, if I do say so myself.

You can see now why, after nearly 40 years, Gene Sarazen, rest his soul, is still my favorite golfer.

Debate is disheartening

TO THE EDITOR:

The May 17 Town Meeting was much like the one in March - a single point of view being predominant, but one that, like after the last election, may very well not be representative of the majority sentiment in town.

True to the campaign since the last override election, this predominant view, for the maximum override, has been expressed through emotion and scare rhetoric, the express or implied premise that quality is solely a function of money, and the express or implied labeling of anyone not in favor of the maximum override as anti-education and anti-teacher. It also perpetuated the unsavory but common American notion that everything in life is a competition, and that being in 4th place (by only $2000) in local salaries is somehow a badge of shame.

Maybe it would if we had Hingham and Hanover's commercial bases, but we do not. Most hurtful to me personally is that people I thought were friends, who are smarter than that, chose a path that mocks and twists words rather than a path that engages in reasoned and objective discourse.

Fortunately, I have a thick skin and don't hold a grudge, but this debate has been very disheartening. On the other side, the no override camp bears its share of its express and implied invective and satire, directed mostly at the School Dept., which likewise is neither warranted nor productive.

This vote is not a referendum on education - it is a vote to decide how to deal with a difficult fiscal situation in large part of our own making while trying to do the greatest good for the greatest number of people. Both sides need to realize that we live in a community, with varying opinions and needs. Education is the most important service we provide, but it is not the only, or only important, service we provide.

Our citizenry includes no-holds-barred spenders, the stereotypical New England thrifty and those who just can't pay all we're asking them to pay.

All these views have some validity, but none can claim the absolute righteousness they do. Sometimes on an issue, accommodation of views is called for, and we have that opportunity in this election with a mid-level override. Compromise is the hallmark of American democracy. It is how our whole system works, from Washington down to Cohasset. Always has, always will.

With such diametrically opposed views in town, compromise is absolutely needed here, and those elected to represent the whole town, not just a narrow interest, needed to remember that. Thus my support of the mid-level $380K override.

Regardless of how the vote turns out, I truly hope we can get over the nastiness that has built up in this election and over the last couple of years since the Osgood School votes. It is not voting yes or no on Saturday that will be difficult as some argued the other night, it is coming together that will be our most difficult task.

Freedom of expression

TO THE EDITOR:

Tolerance for the views of others is a keystone for the freedom of expression, which is guarded by the First Amendment.

In an earlier letter, I stated the reasons that I thought the 2.5% override in Cohasset should not be passed. Specifically, I think our schools are not being fiscally responsible, nor particularly focused on the quality of education of our children. I think there is a need for a wake-up call to the town in general and the school board in particular. A first step might to have an independent audit of both expenditures and quality.

I recognize that others may feel different than I do. There are certainly lots of "vote yes, yes, yes" signs throughout Cohasset. Supporters of the override are entitled to express themselves. However, I am disappointed and saddened by the tearing down and destruction of "vote no" signs throughout Cohasset. Signs at homes on Pond St and Jerusalem road have been replaced 3 times, and I have heard of other cases of "vote no" signs removed. Monday night, when I returned after the Town Meeting, I found that my own sign had been torn down.

The supporters of the override who committed these acts should respect the rights of those who feel differently, and avoid using storm trooper tactics to suppress dissent. The end does not justify the means.

Full disclosure needed

TO THE EDITOR:

In reference to your articles covering this year's override debate and the town meeting on Monday night, I have a few comments.

First, it is clear that the school committee has lost the confidence of an important segment of the town. In spite of impassioned pleas from the committee supporters, the first override failed and there are many who believe that the committee and administration are not managing the school system efficiently. Committee supporters encouraged this belief by agreeing to an additional step increase in teacher pay at the same time they are claiming that we have a fiscal crisis caused by a shortfall in state aid. If the committee seriously believed we had such a crisis, I am sure they would never have tried to implement this increase at this time. I cannot understand why with 2% inflation and a declining enrollment, school spending is galloping ahead by 6% to 7% and we cannot afford to buy necessary supplies or properly maintain the buildings.

Furthermore, the school committee apparently wants more money from the state, seemingly forgetting that the voters in Cohasset would then have to pay more in state taxes. As far as I am concerned, I am indifferent whether the state or the town taxes me and I fail to see the wisdom of beseeching the state elected officials to change the state funding.

If as some argued the problem lies in funding for Chapter 766 programs, we ought to be seeking reform in appropriate legislation. Surely there must be some people with creative ideas about how to reduce the cost of educating these children without sacrificing their learning and preparation for a productive and satisfying life.

I believe that many voters lack confidence in the committee and administration due to the secrecy of school department budgetary and spending details. Secrecy breeds suspicion. The best antidote to suspicion is full disclosure.

I support the call by Richard Avery for people to come forward with creative ideas for dealing with the budget problem. Full disclosure of expenditures would certainly help citizens to study the figures and propose solutions. In any organization, there are ways of cutting expenditures without sacrificing attainment of goals. There are many people in Cohasset that have substantial experience in organizations that have reduced expenditures and their insights could prove to be valuable. For example, a few years ago there was a proposal to save money by going to centralized purchasing with other towns. Buying in larger increments is a well known money saver. This proposal was rejected by the school committee for reasons that were never made clear.

Lastly we should remember that Proposition 2 1/2 was passed when federal, state and town taxes were racing ahead faster than citizens' incomes. The reform movement addressed town taxation by limiting the ability of town governments to raise taxes without direct input from the voters. Before Proposition 2 1/2, taxpayers were at the mercy of activists and special interests who pushed all sorts of spending initiatives with little concern for the ability of people to pay. The current debate about the override is one of the major benefits to this proposition, for which we should all be grateful. However, before we focus too much on the ratio of taxation to property values, we should remember that people pay taxes out of income. We are not able to sell of an itty-bitty piece of our property to pay the taxes. If property taxes consume too much of a person's income, that person has to sell the property and move elsewhere.

Support $380K override

TO THE EDITOR:

Please consider voting "yes" on question 1c ($380,000) and "no" on questions 1a ($612,895) and 1b ($509,554).

The town manager, elected/appointed officials and, to a very limited extent, the school district have begun to make progress on many neglected issues. We should not pull the rug out from under them. It has been clear for two to three years that an override would be necessary to maintain level services. However, the voters clearly stated that a $766,000 override was much too much.

Town and school officials still have two major alternatives by which to mitigate negative impacts of approving a compromise override budget. During recent years, the "town-side" has annually certified more than $750,000 in "free-cash," that is redistributed during the fall town meeting. At least $380,000 in "free cash" will be available for redistribution at this year's fall town meeting. School officials can revise their contract proposal.

Unfunded mandates, particularly Chapter 766-special education, have made it unrealistic to expect school district budget increases of less than two and one-half percent. However, a clear message must be sent to school district officials that the electorate insists upon fundamental change. I have reviewed the last three Cohasset teachers' contracts and pay scales for FY00 in the school district budget. We will never attract the "best and the brightest" with low starting salaries while ignoring market dynamics and merit as "drivers" of financial compensation. Since FY 93 starting teachers' salaries have increased only $7,100 (3%/annum) while senior teachers compensation has risen $18,700 (4%/annum). The proposed FY00 school budget proposes an increase of 2.7% for starting teachers and 6.5% for senior teachers (new step). Actually, increases may be greater based on step increases, classification adjustments (education incentives) and other contract provisions. The private sector would have an inverse relationship wit entry level increases of greater than 4% and senior level increases of less than 3%. It is even more egregious to ignore market dynamics and pay art/social studies teachers the same as calculus physics and technology teachers. Finally, teachers' unions that have resisted inclusion of merit in contract negotiations have precipitated the current plethora of parental and government dissatisfaction with the quality of public education.

Please support the Advisory Committee's Chairman, Dick Avery, in his quest for systematic reform and a benchmark of 4-4.5% increases per annum, depending on inflation. Please approve override question 1c for $380,000.

Vote yes, yes, yes

TO THE EDITOR:

At the Cohasset Town Meeting on Monday, May 17, selectman Tom Callahan said we shouldn't compare Cohasset to our neighboring towns of Hanover, Scituate, Hingham, and Hull because that's just comparing apples to oranges. Well, Cohasset may be an apple and our neighboring towns oranges but the apple cannot maintain its current status or move forward without taking into consideration what the oranges are doing.

When a Cohasset home goes on the market, it is competing with homes for sale in neighboring communities. Potential homebuyers are evaluating and comparing community spirit, town services, school systems and housing prices. When the town of Cohasset, the Cohasset School system and local businesses need to fill employment vacancies, they are competing with a pool of applicants our neighboring towns are also trying to attract. When the children of Cohasset apply to colleges, they are competing with and measured against the children and school systems of our neighboring towns for admission to a wide-range of academic institutions, including the very best.

It is incumbent upon us all to demand and support the highest level of excellence in our town services and school system as we cast our vote on May 22. If we don't, our neighboring towns will still be oranges but Cohasset may end up a lemon.

Vote yes, yes, yes!

In January we visited Brittany and Normandy in Northern France and purchased a small company skilled in making 17th & 18th century French provincial and French Country furniture. Their work is completely handmade using old hardwoods — predominantly antique French cherry and is complemented with limited inlays of mahogany, walnut and ebony. Each step of the century old process; turning, carving, fitting, joining and finishing, is done by hand with only the original timber cuts of these vintage woods done by machine. These craftsmen specifically focus on dining pieces; tables, sideboards, pot-boards and servers. Along with this new line we offer a collection of antique country French tables purchased on the outskirts of Rouen, Reims and Brittany. The primary woods are cherry, apple, walnut, chestnut and pine. Fine quality continental antique country furniture is becoming quite rare and extremely expensive. Our selection is one of the finest you will see anywhere and we offer the best quality for the best price.

Private school exodus

TO THE EDITOR:

Many thoughts went through my head after listening to the town meeting on Monday, May 17. First of all, I was very impressed with the truly passionate pleas made by the members of the school committee, the selectmen, advisory board and concerned citizens. It is obvious that everyone is motivated to do what is right for the children and the town.

The more I thought about it however, the more I feel that we are missing an opportunity here to correct what , in my opinion, are some of the biggest problems with the system at Cohasset High School. The most disturbing news that I continue to hear is that... "CHS is very effective for the highest level and the lowest level students, but there is not much incentive for the middle majority." I believe that the high amount of transfers to private schools, over 20 freshmen this year alone, are a direct result of this deficiency. Since most of our grade sizes are between 60 to 100 students, the percentage should be alarming to people. This is not just a move being made by those that can easily afford it. I know several parents personally that could use the money for many other necessities but they feel that this is the only way to get the discipline in school that their child needs to be successful. My nephew started school at Xaverian Brothers this year and for the first time he has made the honor roll every term. He has become very disciplined with his work, not only because he enjoys it more but also because he has no choice in the matter. If he misses a couple of assignments or falters in a course, it could mean a trip to the office or suspension from a couple of lacrosse games and the parents are notified immediately.

With our class sizes, teacher student ratios and competitive salaries and benefits, we have such a great opportunity to create a more disciplined and productive atmosphere at CHS. It should rival the private schools. I'm not overly surprised to hear that our town scored 19th in the state on the MCAS exams. Our town is made up of residents that are very concerned with the success of their families and with these grade sizes we should be able to do much better. I'm not opposed to an increase in spending on the school budget but I'd like to first be convinced that we will get more for our money!

'The Override Elevator'

TO THE EDITOR:

The May 17 town meeting held no surprises. We were again reminded by Selectman Tom Callahan and Advisory Board Chairman Dick Avery that if we do not make some substantial changes in the way we conduct business that we are going to be faced with more and higher overrides for everyday operations.

Selectman Tom Callahan has come up with some innovative ideas for the town side that will mean cooperating and regionalizing with other communities. Cohasset cannot afford to keep itself isolated, it is time to look to share resources rather than having expensive duplications in all of the surrounding towns. Services, in reality, can be expanded at much lower costs to the taxpayers.

Unfortunately the schools are looking in the other direction. In one breath they condemned our Republican Senator and Representative because of the unfunded mandates caused by this Democrat controlled state, then they were eager to accept the unfunded lower class size plan of President Clinton.

To the School Committee the only way we can have diversity is continue with the METCO program that is running at a $260,000 deficit to the taxpayers. School Choice that will bring in diverse students from other towns plus their tuition costs is not an option for them.

For the schools there are no plans for considering any type of regionalization or doing business in a cost conscious manner. Instead they would like to expand on staff especially in the administrative level. When Town Manager Mark Haddad requested that they try to stick to a 6-percent budget increase as they began the school budget process, they came up with a 25-percent increase and insisted that the least they could settle for was in the area of 10 percent.

Selectman Chair Merle Brown suggested that they double the lunch prices for teachers to $5 a lunch to help cut down ongoing lunch deficits. The schools did not comment.

When Joan McDonald noted that we have a 9:1 student teacher ratio, former selectman Michael Sullivan implied she was wrong. Of course Superintendent Ted Malvey could not fathom how anyone could say we have that low a ratio. He then mumbled of much higher numbers for class sizes which of course is not the same thing and is misleading. Page 214 of the 1998 Town Report and page 195 of the 1997 Town Report both submitted by the School Committee indicates the 9:1 ratio.

For next year the teachers' raises will cost the taxpayers $400,000. Over the three-year contract that cost will be well over $1.2 million. When Advisory Board member Leland Jenkins asked the school what we will be getting for this money the answer was that it is a matter of taking care of our friends, the teachers, rather than what they can give to us or the children. It was mentioned that we will be supposedly saving $3,000 from the teachers' Golden Handshake but it will cost more on the other side for higher retirement payments.

For the current '96-'99 contract the mandated seven-hour workday was eliminated and instead "flex time" was instituted which means there are no longer a specified number of hours in a teacher's workday (it used to be seven) and the upper teachers arrive when their classes start which varies everyday. The elementary teachers are demanding extra substitutes be hired in order to alternate the times their days start so they will have this same benefit even though the lower schools are not scheduled that way. We do not know if this expensive clause is included in the newest contract. It is unconscionable that we must blindly fund this contract without knowing how much it will cost. How many of us commit to any contract without knowing any of the clauses or the bottom line figure?

If we do not demand some type of accountability by voting "no" Saturday, May 22, we will be forever on this "Override Elevator."

300 attend opening reception at Atlantica restaurant

Restaurant void in Cohasset Harbor

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

It's official. Atlantica is now open for business.

Monday's opening was heralded last week with a gala reception for about 300 invited guests including town officials, neighbors, contractors and their families and friends of the staff.

The restaurant and function hall will fill a void in Cohasset Harbor created when the Chart House at the site closed 18 months ago.

Manager Dennis Nee said the phone hasn't stopped ringing.

"There's not a bad seat here."
— Dennis Nee, manager

"There are no weekends free in 1999 and 2000 is filling up rapidly," he said about the function business.

The dining room and grill each seat about 100 and the function hall seats 200. Meal prices in the grill range from $7-$17 and in the dining room, which is described as a destination spot, prices run from $19-$37 per person.

The menu is eclectic New England with an emphasis on seafood, Nee explained.

Atlantica is open seven nights and five days, including Monday through Friday for lunch and Monday through Sunday for dinner. After 4:30 p.m., parking is by valet only.

The restaurant employs a staff of 80, half of whom are full time.

Town assessor Cheryl Pooler estimated the annual real estate taxes for Atlantica to be $30,000-$35,000. That doesn't include any taxes on personal property.

"It's a great place," Nee said. "But any lavish praise starts with (owner) Peter Roy who had an ideal of what he wanted to see and turned that into something great."

Nee said the restaurant lends itself to its harbor location.

"There's not a bad seat here," he said.

Guests marveled at the beautiful décor and enjoyed the open bar and a delicious sampling of hors d'oeuvres at the reception.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown was impressed.

"They did a great job of making the place look real nice," Brown said. "It's an asset and will be good for the rest of the town.

"And there's nothing cheap about it at all, even the prices."

SAFE seeks resident comments on CHL

The anti-landfill group, Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE) is lobbying the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to allow a public hearing and a 30-day public comment period on the Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill's closure and post-closure plan. CHL submitted the plan to DEP earlier this month. Currently, and there are no laws requiring DEP to hold a hearing or allow a 30 day public comment period.

John K. McNabb Jr., vice president of SAFE, testified at the state house on May 17 before the Legislature's Natural Resources and Agricultural Committee in favor of House Bill 2384, which is an act to force DEP to conduct a public hearing with a 30-day comment period for the CHL closure plan.

SAFE is asking the water commission, the board of health, the conservation commission and the selectmen to discuss CHL's closure plan in open sessions. SAFE is also asking town boards and residents to contact new DEP Commissioner Lauren Liss in writing and ask for the public hearing and comment period. Residents can contact Liss at the following address: Lauren Liss, Department of Environmental Protection, 1 Winter Street, Boston, MA, 02108.

Absentee ballots for special election

Absentee ballots for the Special Town Election Saturday, May 22, are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime Friday, May 21.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, by fax or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

Food Pantry appreciates support

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Food Pantry, I want to thank all those who had a part in the very successful food collection in Cohasset on Saturday, May 8—including the Mariner for its advance publicity.

Thanks go first of all, of course, to the Cohasset Post Office workers, particularly to the carriers who picked up over 4,200 pounds of food and staples, topping last year's collection. Once again, Richard Leach organized the drive with the support of Postmaster Francine Winters.

Thanks go as well to the scores of residents who remembered the date, and our "wish list", and contributed a bounty of good and useful items that will be distributed to Cohasset families to supplement their household needs over the summer.

We're grateful also to the volunteers who brought the items from the Post Office to the Pantry in the basement of the Second Congregational Church and helped Jean and Bob Thompson stow them on the shelves. These volunteers included a number of high schoolers.

The successful collection shows that Cohasset cares about those in our community who need a little extra help. I'm sure they, too, appreciate the wonderful effort by all involved.

HOW MUCH OF YOUR HOME COMPUTER CAPACITY IS BEING WASTED?

Oh sure, you've got a nice computer. Maybe two or three or more. With a jillion giga-whatsis and scads of mega-stuff.

But are you getting all you paid for out of your home computer system?

Can your computers talk with each other, for example? Can they all access the same printers? Can more than one user interface with your MediaOne Express line?

Is your computer able to control the lighting or heating and air conditioning in your home? The security system? The call answering system? Can you watch what's happening in your home while you're away?

Now, it's all possible. Resi-Net can make it happen.

Special election expected to draw a crowd

Opponents and proponents of the controversial override issue are gearing up for a last-minute push for voters.

"We feel the response has been positive and we have been active with our ads and our town-wide mailing," said Rob Spofford, spokesman for the Committee for Quality Town Services, which backs the overrides.

"We're taking this seriously and believe this is an important issue for the town as a whole and we're actively working on it," he said.

Lynn Eisenhauer, treasurer of Stop It Now (SIN), a new committee opposed to the overrides, said she has a big sign on the back of her car.

"I've been driving around in town and to work and back," she said. "And I plan to be at the polls Saturday with a truck.

"I just hope the silent majority comes out and says 'enough is enough,'" Eisenhauer said.

Advisory Committee chairman Dick Avery takes a few notes at Monday's session of town meeting.

"It is important that the community understands how the citizens really feel whether that's yes or no."

— Rob Spofford, override proponent

Depending on which — if any — override passes, there is a consensus among a majority of selectmen and the school committee on how the money should be divided between the schools and the town. The first two overrides are split about 48 percent to 52 percent for the town and schools respectively. If the highest override passes, the schools are expected to get a slightly higher percentage of the override.

But town meeting can have a mind of its own and can even decide to approve a budget less than the amount authorized by an override, Town Manager Mark Haddad told this week's town meeting.

Due to the controversial nature of the overrides, Town Moderator George Marlette said Monday's town meeting will be prepared if those in attendance decide to fix the method of voting by secret ballot for the budget.

What happens with a secret ballot is voters get one "yes" and one "no" ticket when they check in. When it's time to vote they place their ticket in a ballot box.

Marlette said if town meeting opts for a secret ballot, voters will be checked in twice, once when they arrive and a second time when they vote, to ensure the process goes smoothly.

Spofford, the spokesman for the pro-override group, urges everyone to vote at the election Saturday so the message is clear.

"From our perspective it is very important that everyone get out and vote," he said. "It is important that the community understands how the citizens really feel whether that's yes or no."

Override opinions aired at special town meeting

week later. That session, which is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. May 24 in the high school gym, will vote a budget according to which override — if any — is approved on Saturday.

Town Moderator George Marlette warded off any attempt by town meeting to turn the tables and vote the budget at this past Monday's session by appealing to the gathering's sense of fairness. Town meeting had the authority, if it so chose, to pass a budget (or several budgets) this week contingent on a successful override vote.

Ray Kasperowicz of South Main Street asked for a secret ballot on the motion to defer voting on the substance of the budget article, which was defeated by a voice vote.

Marlette explained this session of town meeting had been widely publicized that it would be for discussion purposes only. He was concerned that those who are unfamiliar with town meeting — but comfortable they could cast an informed vote Saturday — might have stayed home.

"Therefore, it would have been unconscionable to have a vote today," Marlette said after the meeting. "I felt it best to make my fairness pitch and see if town meeting would go along with it."

Town meeting agreed with the moderator and established the rule that the meeting would continue with all the reports from the boards and discussion from the floor and then adjourn to May 24.

What's at stake at Saturday's election is whether the town will vote to override Prop. 2-1/2 to make up a sizable deficit in the proposed fiscal year 2000 budget. The $20.3 million budget approved at the annual town meeting March 27 is about $766,000 in the red. By a 60-40 percent margin, voters turned down an override to make up that amount at the town election April 10. Selectmen subsequently decided to bring back a menu of override options to the voters to see if they would support a lower figure.

The overrides and tax impacts are as follows: $380,000 (tax rate $15.34 per $1,000 of assessed valuation); $509,554 (tax rate, $15.88) and $612,895 (tax rate, $15.99).

If none of the overrides passes, the taxes on the so-called average Cohasset home valued at $341,000 would increase $133 in fiscal year 2000, which begins July 1. A tax rate of $15.34 per $1,000 of assessed valuation is needed to cover the town's operating budget without an override.

Officials told town meeting Monday that cuts are inevitable no matter what. But the cuts get deeper depending on which override, if any passes muster at the polls. If no override passes for example, cuts on the town side include the seasonal police officers, library aide, funding for senior center programs and the youth coordinator's position.

With no override, cuts from the school side include athletics, supplies and textbooks, transportation, custodians, a grade 6 teacher, a world language teacher and a guidance counselor.

At Monday's session of town meeting, various items will be restored depending on the override results and town meeting appropriations.

The school committee told this week's session it blamed the state and federal government for the school budget woes. Unfunded state mandates and soaring special education costs are budget busters of which the schools have no control, the committee said.

School committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo evoked the poet Robert Frost, when talking about how the town is at a crossroads.

"Cohasset stands at a crossroads," he said. "The road we choose will determine whether we maintain the Cohasset school system or allow our schools to slip."

DeGiacomo said the state and federal government are discriminating against Cohasset because it is perceived as an affluent town.

"It doesn't matter that we're all not affluent, it doesn't matter that we're 90 percent residential," he said. "We are viewed as affluent so the funding we receive is horribly, horribly inadequate."

His remarks were echoed later by former long-time school committee member, Ralph Kidder of Cushing Road.

Kidder called on Cohasset citizens to accept some of the responsibility for the plight the town is in by not letting the local legislators off the hook.

He said that state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is always welcomed to town meeting with a round of applause and so is state Sen. Robert Hedlund, who attends occasionally.

"You should be on the phone tomorrow and the next day until they change the funding mechanism for mandates the biggest of which is special education, which the state requires," Kidder said.

Kidder's remarks prompted former selectman Martha Gjesteby to respond that the town's local legislators are both in the minority party and that citizens must pressure the Democratic leadership on Beacon Hill if they want results.

"It doesn't matter that we're all not affluent, it doesn't matter that we're 90 percent residential."

Mark DeGiacomo, School committee chairman

Advisory committee chairman Dick Avery appealed for civility but encouraged those in attendance to share any creative ideas. The committee voted 6-2 to back the highest override figure.

"I encourage everyone with creative ideas to have the courage to speak up," he said. "And all set an example by being courteous to one another."

Avery said the hard work would follow Saturday's vote.

"Emotion and rhetoric can sway a vote but can't do the hard work that follows a vote," he said. Avery said the school department could provide a quality education at any override level.

"It just takes more work, more follow through and more coordination."

Jack Creighton, 22 Cushing Road, urged a no vote on Saturday. He said Cohasset has been generous to education and the students do well.

"Just because you don't support a tax increase, does not mean you don't support education," he said.

Ann Brophy of Beechwood Street, an override supporter, said teachers are not overpaid and that class sizes are not small.

"There are 24 in my second-grader's class and the teacher makes $30,000 a year," she said. "Textbooks alone don't teach a child, teachers do."

'Great Hill' harks back to grand era

Part of historical society house tour

By Constance Gorfinkle
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

To enter the home known as "Great Hill" is to pass into another era. Magnificent wood paneling, highly polished floors, large rooms and elegant furnishings echo a grand lifestyle that's almost unknown in today's hectic world. A colonial-revival Queen Anne-style residence built in 1898 by Francis Williard Brewer and lovingly restored by its current owners, Peter and Rose Scanlon, "Great Hill" is a highlight of the Hingham Historical Society's 75th annual house tour, June 16.

Never before open to the public, the house presented a challenge to the Scanlons, who were determined to preserve its original charm and beauty while at the same time adding late 20-century amenities. The result is a comfortable home that resonates with history, and the sense of those who once lived there as well as their guests—among them Theodore Roosevelt when he was New York City's chief of police, and General Custer's wife, who made a gift to the Brewers of a pair of Colt 45s, which once had belonged to the general.

It is not surprising that contemporary people of note frequented "Great Hill". For, the Brewers were a prominent family whose roots go back to the American Revolution. Their connection to Hingham began in the mid-1800s, with summers spent by Francis Willard Brewer at World's End, an idyllic tract of land on Hingham Harbor that the Brewer family eventually gave to the Trustees of Reservations to manage. The town itself received from the Brewers such important sites as the Old Ordinary, Brewer Woods and More-Brewer Park.

"Great Hill" again will be filled with guests when the Hingham Historical Society holds its gala there to kick off the Diamond Jubilee house tour.

By the time the Scanlons first saw the house in the winter of 1997 "it was tired," Rose Scanlon says. The 30 acres of land planted with trees and shrubs from all over the world that had once surrounded the Brewer homestead—with its panoramic views of the Blue Hills—had been reduced greatly by development. But the prospective buyers could see its potential.

STAFF PHOTOS/ALAN CHAPMAN

"Great Hill," a Queen Anne style residence built in 1989 is a highlight of the Hingham Historical Society's 75th annual house tour.

The master bedroom at "Great Hill" resonates with history as does the rest of the Brewer residence.

"It had not been updated since it was built, except for the heating system, I believe," Rose Scanlon recently told a visitor to "Great Hill". "But the house was in pristine condition, structurally," as was the woodwork, which is a prime feature of the house, from its outsize pocket doors to the eight fireplace mantels, each one unique in its carving and materials.

The Scanlons, who had been planning to build a new house in Hingham, "fell in love" with the Brewer House the moment they saw it.

"I had a vision," says Mrs. Scanlon. "I knew exactly what I wanted to do with it.

What particularly attracted her "was the quality of the craftsmanship and the artistry that you just don't find today."

So determined were the Scanlons to maintain the integrity of the house that during the renovation, done by Sally Weston of Weston-Hewitson Architects, nothing ever was thrown away.

"Any time we took a wall down or moved a window, we reused it. I saved every nut, bolt, screw—you name it," says Mrs. Scanlon.

Prime examples of that are two matching Palladian windows. Both originally were part of the house, but one had been a storm window for the other.

Another example of the new owners' ingenuity is the floor in the entrance foyer, which is composed of Portuguese tiles they discovered in the basement, wrapped in hay, still in their original boxes. A second feature of the foyer is a fireplace, whose hearth is surrounded by hundreds of rounded stones. While reading Francis Brewer's autobiography, Rose Scanlon learned that those stones were beach stones collected by Brewer's mother and eventually set into the fireplace, with the figures 1898—the year the house was finished—as part of the design.

Magnificent wood paneling, highly polished floors, large rooms and elegant furnishings echo a grand lifestyle that's almost unknown in today's hectic world.

"Great Hill" is 10,000 square feet, including a new, roughly 3,000-square-foot addition, which encompasses a family room, a three-car garage, and a breakfast room off the kitchen—which has gone from "dark and gloomy" to state of the art.

But, despite its modern conveniences, the house still has a turn-of-the-century ambience that the Scanlons have achieved by decorating the home with Tiffany-style lamps; richly patterned wallpapers, reminiscent of William Morris designs; oriental rugs; unusual window treatments sewn by Rose Scanlon herself; and carefully selected pieces of furniture, such as the antique four-poster bed in the master bedroom that's so high a footstool is needed to climb over the side.

Particularly striking is the circular music room, whose most distinctive feature is gracefully bent beams that spread across the domed ceiling like the spines of a fan.

Standing in the center of this embracing space, Rose Scanlon says softly, "This is my favorite room."

The Hingham Historical Society's 75th annual tour is June 16, from 1 to 8:30 p.m. Besides "Great Hill," the tour includes the General Benjamin Lincoln House, which has been designated a National Historic Landmark; Shipcote, a 1792 colonial with views of Hingham Harbor, and the Cyrus Clark House, an early Italianate home overlooking Hingham Square. Other stops on the tour are the Old Ordinary, Old Derby Academy, the Old Ship Meeting House, New North Church and Fountain Square, also known as Lincoln Square.

Light refreshments will be served. No cameras or spike heels are allowed on the tour.

Tickets are $12 in advance and $15 the day of the tour. They are available at Bowl and Board in Hingham Square and at the Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St. Tickets on the day of the tour will be sold only at the Old Ordinary, 21 Lincoln St., after 10 a.m. At that time tickets also may be exchanged for tour books.

To order tickets by mail, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a check in the amount of tickets required to Hingham Historical Society "House Tour," P.O. Box 434, Hingham, MA 02043.

Competition means no horsing around for this teen

She's part of a team but they don't come complete with a catchy name or mascot. She wears a uniform but it isn't of any two colors alone. There's no locker room where this girl practices, nor pep-rallies or screaming fans for that matter. But still this extraordinary teen athlete is satisfied.

She is Emily Keefe of Cohasset—local horseback riding superstar, and while her sport of choice is both non-traditional and little recognized, she'll be the first to tell you she wouldn't trade it for all the glory in the world.

"Horseback riding is a passion I've always had," says the decorated equestrienne as she dismounts her latest companion. "And I still love it. I love riding, I let my mind free when I'm on a horse."

Speaking with this self-described simple lover of horses and riding, one might never know about the countless ribbons and titles she's racked up in her 12-year career behind the reins. But while Keefe will only tell you she genuinely relishes her sport, her coach has no qualms about listing her accomplishments.

"She's a natural talent—a very versatile and well rounded rider," explains Keefe's long-time trainer Kim Devers of Norwell. "She's a good listener and she learns very quickly. She also has a lot of dedication. Emily has really spent the time needed."

Like most young girls, Emily Keefe's childhood dream was to own a horse of her very own. Beginning at age five, already under the spell of books and movies like Black Beauty among others, all the youngster wished for was a pony to ride bareback on the beach.

Emily's parents, also like most, responded by saying while their youngest could certainly learn how to ride, her dream could not be fully realized until she grew mature enough to take care of her four-legged friend.

Emily was 13 when the day finally came, and from the first gallop aboard "Showdown's Dilemma," little more than a few days here and there have been spent out of the stirrups and away from the stable. Young Emily was hooked from day one.

Now 17, the Cohasset High School junior admits there's still no place she'd rather be than in the barn. And when not busy preparing for shows and tournaments, Emily makes a point of taking the time to enjoy a carefree sprint in the shallow water along the shore of Sandy Beach by her home.

But a sport is still a sport, and riding horses is both as competative and time consuming as any. Currently trotting along the show circuit, (and past the competition), riding trusty partner "Straw Zippo," those back at the homebase barn, Jetset Endevers of Norwell warn both horse and rider are on their way to becoming a force opponents should fear.

Be it English or Western saddle, "Showmanship" or "Halter" classes, Keefe makes it all look easy. Winning laurels as one of the country's top ten for her age bracket (in multiple events mind you), Keefe is certainly the star of the stable.

"She's the best rider here," offers an awe-struck Mai Lombardi, age 12, from Norwell. "I hope one day I'll be as good as she is."

Baseball postseason bid comes up short

By Jim O'Sullivan
CORRESPONDENT

"The game is designed to break your heart." Those words, from the pen of the late A. Bartlett Giamatti, have been quoted before in this very space, but never with such conviction. If the game was indeed designed to break hearts, then Alexander Cartwright (right-thinking historian's answer to Abner Doubleday), succeeded.

The Cohasset Skippers have been eliminated from prospective postseason play. At the hands of the Norwell Clippers, the Boys in Blue dropped to eleven losses with a mere three wins, none of them coming against South Shore League teams. Cohasset's mathematical inability to finish above .500 makes it impossible for them to gain a tourney berth.

But Cohasset made one last run at it. With a 3-9 record, they headed to Hyannis two weeks ago, where they would board a ferry to Nantucket. After spending a productive night ruining their hitting mechanics with a hotly contested game of Wiffle Ball Home Run Derby (Ryan Story smacked the game's only dinger, hoisting his team to victory), they arose the next morning to face their hosts in a doubleheader.

After last year's two-loss debacle, Cohasset guarded against early overconfidence. But they soon jumped out to an early lead.

Everybody hit, as Joe Pergola drove in early runs and freshman Robin Murphy rapped a key single, and started a nifty double play with a nice catch of a line drive to second base.

Sophomore T.J. Bilodeau earned his first varsity hit, squeeze bunting a painfully slow, anonymous runner in from third.

Seniors Ben Ketchum, Al Schwerin, Greg Taylor, and Jim O'Sullivan all continued to hit well. Ketchum has found the RBI knack, coming up with big hits with runners in scoring position.

As the Skippers' clean-up hitter, he has more than filled the job description. And in centerfield, Ketchum shows the outfield experience he's gained over four arsity seasons. From the fifth spot, Schwerin uses an excellent batting eye to help him remain disciplined at the plate.

Rarely swinging at a bad pitch, Schwerin is difficult to strike out. Schwerin has played both shortstop and third this year, and has perfected picking balls out of the dirt at the hot corner.

Taylor's torrid hitting didn't skip a beat on the island. Batting lead-off, the shortstop seems to find a way to get on base regardless of the game situation.

He's been hit by more pitches than anyone else on the team and will be right there with the league leaders in batting average at the end of the season.

With a high on-base-average, Taylor is often leading off first when O'Sullivan, who used Nantucket as a sort of hitting rehabilitation assignment, comes to bat.

Mired in an ugly "ofer" slump, he struggled out, scattering three hits over the two games. He pitched well also, holding Nantucket to three hits and no runs in the first game, then chucking the first three innings of the second game.

When O'Sullivan was yanked in the second contest, John-Paul Laugelle came to the mound for Cohasset. The football team's center and the wrestling squad's heavyweight, Laugelle cuts an imposing figure on the hill. He did his job, too, earning the win in Nantucket by throwing strikes and changing

REC. NEWS

The Cohasset Recreation Department announced the Osgood School gym will be supervised Wednesday evenings, from 6-9 p.m., for grades 7 - 12 boys and girls who wish to play basketball on a pick-up basis or work on skills.

Andy Fitzsimmons and J.L. Williams are volunteering their time, under the direction of Ron Ford, keeping the gym open and available to grades 7 - 12 students.

The first session is Wednesday, March 31, and each Wednesday evening through June 16. The exclusion to this will be Wednesday, April 21, school vacation week.

There is no charge for this opportunity due to the volunteer efforts of everyone involved. All players must be picked up by 9 p.m. sharp at Osgood School.

Cohasset looked good coming back from Nantucket, looked like a ball team with a shot at the tourney. Unfortunately, A. Bart was right. And the game broke some more hearts last Tuesday when Norwell knocked off the Skippers in a hard-fought, 6-5 game.

Cohasset played hard and left everything on the field, but couldn't come through with the victory when it counted. Again, Pergola pitched a magnificent game and lost due to spotty fielding.

The downward spiral continued with losses to Carver and neighboring rival Hull. In spite of impressive indivual performances, Cohasset can't seem to put it all together.

Cohasset hosts Abington today for the season's nineteenth, and second-to-last game of the season. Saturday, they will travel to Provincetown for the twentieth.

For some of the seniors, it will be their final game of organized baseball.

ring, it's hard to believe the duo met less than two years ago. A mere four years young, "Zip," as he's known is still feeling out his own legs. But he's having help along the way from seasoned rider Emily.

While Keefe attributes the horse's youthful energy to occasionally rendering him difficult to instruct, whatever she's whispering in "Zip"'s ear is working.

According to those who know best at Jetset, though Emily and "Zip" are still getting to know one another and their own respective style, it's already proving to be a winning combination. The proof is in the pudding (or perhaps oats), for this past March the pair performed impressively at the "Sweet 16," a week-long national competition in Florida. Then again, just two weeks ago at a show in Maine, the dashing couple again turned judges' heads.

"He's still learning and she's learning on him," offers coach Devers, "but so far they're doing great. You have to know what you're doing, and more so the horse has to know you know what you're doing. It's all about communication."

"You really do have to get to know your horse," agrees Keefe. "Each one has its own personality. 'Zip"s young so I don't always know what to expect, and he does have some attitude. He's a baby and he doesn't always want to listen."

But the two are growing more at ease with one another with each competition, and the relationship is progressing right on course. Keefe might be lucky in some respects, for the rider actually purchased her new partner without ever even stroking his mane.

Last year Emily was living abroad in Budapest for a spell, and when it came time to choose a new steed she let friends and family pick Texas-born "Zip" after viewing him in action via video cassette. Emily laughs when she remembers her mom selected the able-bodied Appaloosa for his long and majestic blonde tail.

"I knew when I heard about him he was the one," explains Emily. "I just kind of went with it and now everyone loves him. I've actually had lots of offers from people who want to buy him, but I'm not selling."

And the handsome, brown-eyed lad from the Lone Star State is fitting in fine at the Jetset Endevers barn. Though still too green for some competitions, Keefe's coach expects he will be running with the best of them come summer. (Devers should know a winner when she sees one, for in her 30-year riding career the instructor has ridden none other than the grandson of racing great Secretariat.)

While Keefe's career is not yet over (not even close), taking a moment to reflect on the trail she's laid out for herself thus far, Emily says there's no question she would do it all over again. It is true her career as a more unusual athlete occasionally isolated her, for Cohasset High does not have an equestrian team, but she also enjoyed the time and space her special sport offered.

"I have no regrets, states Emily. "I did play soccer for a while so I could have the team experience, and my friends do come to see the horses at the barn. But I also like coming here and getting away."

But it should be noted in the early days Keefe did need some help getting to her happy place, and Emily is also quick to thank her family, particularly mom Pamela, for her support, encouragement and commitment to her interest.

More afternoons than not the mother of three offered her daughter—the sole rider in the family—gratuity-free shuttles from Cohasset to Norwell, only to return again several hours later.

Weekends were also set aside for practice, and of course for the far-away tournaments where on arrival mother and daughter would find themselves sleeping in motels or even pitching tents.

"I want to thank my parents for spending all the time and money," says Emily today. "They never pushed me and let me do it to have fun. "

Allowing her to spend so many hours at the barn also "kept her out of trouble" says Emily.

Now shuttling herself to Jetset, and with college nearing on the horizon, Emily says while she will continue to ride it will be neither her major nor main collegiate focus. Considering nursing as her future field of study, while Keefe once aspired to be a veterinarian, now she says her continuing interaction with horses will be a personal pleasure-ride solely.

"It is something I plan to do forever," offers Emily, crop in hand. "Even if it's just as a hobby. I'll always have a horse. I enjoy it too much to give it up."

Keefe will, however, tote along with her a few from the collection of medals, trophies, and even the bike she won in her competitive days.

And rest assured—newfound friend and sidekick "Zip" will indeed accompany Keefe off to college. Emily says she plans to pick a university with either a full riding program or, at the very least, a stable nearby.

And while Emily admits she will miss the days of traveling and the friends she made on the road, what Keefe will miss the most by far will be the fellow enthusiasts she sees on a daily basis.

Since the Keefe family moved from the west coast eight years ago, Jetset has become Emily's second home. Over the years she's watched the barn grow in size, structure and rider-ship, and has enjoyed its commitment to 4H events and just overall community spirit.

"It's like a family here—everyone helps each other out," says Emily. "The Devers have become like my second family, and Kim has become my best friend."

Just recently, friend Devers telephoned her student when one of the stable's mares was about to give birth. (She knew Emily would want to be there to see the filly's first steps.)

It's no wonder, really, that athlete and coach have grown close. After all, so many hours have been spent in the close quarters of the horse trailer, the pair often spreading mattes on the floor to sleep and staying up late laughing at the fairgrounds when they should have been resting for the following day.

But it was worthwhile, they say, for when you're laughing it makes competing not so nerve-racking.

"She is like a little sister, and she can talk back like a little sister" Devers kids. "I miss the days when she was little and did what I said."

Keefe's coach also reminds the now champion showman of the early days when she would cry come every lesson. Devers said at times she wondered if the tears would ever stop.

Fully come into her own and preparing for her last year at the stable, mature Emily has become the role model for Jetset's younger set.

"Now we're like the little sisters that bug her," points out fellow rider, ten-year-old Marissa Dalferro of Norwell.

But what comes with the riding hat and jodhpurs isn't all fun and games, reminds Keefe and Devers to the "little siblings" who admire them. Horseback riding is a lot of work, and there will be mornings when you don't exactly look forward to feeding, cleaning the stall, and putting the horse out to paddock. While taking to the road for monthly competitions are fun, the young rider will, also, from time to time, miss her family and friends from school.

But if she feels she's ready to take the jump into making horses her life, she should pick a barn whose doors you love entering.

THE DESIGNING WOMAN

by Kathleen Fox ASID

IN A WHIRL

The first residential whirlpool tubs were introduced in 1968. A recent survey conducted by the National Kitchen & Bath Association indicates that 42 percent of new and remodeled bathrooms now include a whirlpool bath, which differ from spas (or hot tubs) in that they are filled and drained with each use. In a basic sense, a whirlpool is a soaker tub fitted with piping, an electrical pump, and water jets (each of which is outfitted with a venturi that injects air into the water). The therapeutic benefit of a whirlpool tub rests with its ability to stimulate nerve endings to increase blood flow that helps reduce inflammation and carry away muscle-bound toxins.

A whirlpool bath can minimize the stress of a long day. THE DESIGNING WOMAN offers the expertise and resources to help you turn your bathroom into a comfortable and esthetically appealing retreat. Our services include preparing a plan and estimate of costs, ordering materials from suppliers, scheduling deliveries, and coordinating the work of craftsmen. ON YOUR TEAM

The reason that chiropractic care has come to be so closely linked with both amateur and professional athletes is that they have come to recognize the value of maintaining proper skeletal alignment. Whether spinal misalignment occurs as a result of a crushing block on the football field, a fall on the basketball court, or a poor dismount from the pommel horse, it can compromise future athletic performance unless it is corrected. That is the reason that athletes seek out the services of a chiropractor after injury, and adhere to a regimen of chiropractic maintenance care as a means of injury prevention. In short, chiropractic helps to facilitate optimum athletic performance.

Chiropractic care has helped millions of people. Let us at SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC help you perform your personal best. Is your spine aligned correctly? Could you benefit from professional, gentle, and safe chiropractic care without the use of drugs or surgery? Give us a call at 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. Our Mother's Morning Out" program can help get your families support in achieving optimum health. We have the experience and expertise to give you the care you need. Let us help you! You deserve to live life without pain. Let us make a difference for your good health and comfort right now and in the future.We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor.

P.S. Any blow to the ribs, legs, feet, head, shoulders, or torso radiates to the center of the body and has the potential to misalign the spinal column.

Trivia contest winner named

To highlight April being School Library Media Month while, at the same time, improving students' research skills, the Ripley Media Center at Cohasset Middle/High sponsored a trivia contest that challenged students and staff to answer one reference question each day.

Questions covered topics as varied as the city that hosted the first World Series to the birth date of Steven Spielberg to the definition of Internet Protocol.

There were more than 80 participants, but only one student had the focus to answer each question correctly every day. That student, Evan Pestone, was rewarded twofold for his efforts. He was awarded a gift certificate from a local book store and, more important, he is now better skilled at finding and using information in books, on CDs as well as on the Net!

Preschool screening slated for June 3

A special needs preschool screening for 3- and 4-year-old children will be held Thursday, June 3, between the hours of 9 a.m. and noon. The screening will take place at the Joseph Osgood School by appointment only. Our goal is to identify at an early stage those children who may be experiencing developmental delays or difficulties and could benefit from special services. Please call the student services office at 383-6104 to schedule an appointment.

Cohasset student to sing in spring concert

Kelsey Henderson, a sophomore and daughter of Barbara and Warner Henderson of Cohasset, will perform in the Cambridge School of Weston's Spring Cantata Concert this Sunday, May 23, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Peter's Church in Weston. The group will perform the Durufle "Requien, Op. 9". The "Requien, Op. 9" is only one of ten works by Maurice Durufle and combines technical difficulty with lyrical harmonies and rich vocal color. Admission to the concert is free and the public is welcome.

For more information, call 781-642-8619.

'Oliver' on stage

Cohasset Plays by the Sea presents "Oliver," directed by Ron Nicynski. Musical director is Grace Gardner, choreographer, Janet Campbell.

Performances will be held at Cohasset High School, Friday and Saturday, May 28 and 29, at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, May 30, at 2:30 p.m.

Advance tickets are $6, available at Buttonwood Books, Children's Exchange, Deer Hill, Osgood, or call Irene Barry at 383-1605. Tickets are $8 at the door. General seating.

ed on the first floor of Cohasset High School, enter at the front of the school via the door to the right side of the main entrance.

Youth tennis

Youth tennis will begin Monday, June 28, and continue for 7 weeks, through Aug. 13. Youth tennis registrations will be held, starting Monday, June 14, and continue throughout that week, as follows: Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon and again 1 to 3 p.m., and Thursday evening, from 5 to 7 p.m. The program is offered for children ages 7 through 18 years of age. The program is designed on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. The fee for the one seven-week session of instruction, two days a week, is $50. $5 discounts are available for additional children in a family.

Lessons for beginners, intermediate, and advanced players are offered. Fridays are special clinic or tournament or rain make-up days.

Rain Day Policy: If it rains before 9 a.m., all tennis classes will be canceled for that day.

Adult tennis

The recreation department will offer tennis classes for beginner and intermediate tennis players, continuously throughout the summer on various evenings. The classes are one hour long and a session is four weeks in duration. New sessions will begin approximately every four weeks.

Beginner classes meet various evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., and the intermediate classes will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. Advanced (tournament level instruction) classes meet Thursday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., and advanced beginners will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursdays. Classes will be limited in size. Additional classes will be formed should demand dictate. All classes will meet at the recreation commission tennis courts at the top of Norfolk Road, next to Miliken Field.

To register, call the recreation department office at 383-4109. The fee for the four-week program is $40 per person. Payable by check to the Town of Cohasset. Each participant will need a racquet. Classes do not meet if weather is inclement, and should you be in doubt, due to weather conditions, call the recreation office prior to class time.

Band concerts

During the past 10 seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore

Playhouse Associates, Inc. Each June the board of directors of the South Shore Music Circus take under consideration the request of the recreation commission, for concert funding, hence, certainty of concert are not absolute until mid-June, each season. The SSMC donation is matched by a grant from the American Federation of Musicians, N.Y.C.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the 1999 season is as follows:

Tuesday, July 6, 7:30 p.m.
Tuesday, July 20, 7:30 p.m.
Tuesday, Aug. 3, 7:30 p.m.

Performances will be by the 30-piece South Shore concert band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts are held on the Cohasset Common, are free of charge and the public is cordially invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellent is a good item to have available.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will continuously, throughout the summer, offer dog obedience classes taught by Happy Dog Training School. Classes will be held Thursday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset.

For both the beginner class and the intermediate/advanced class, dog owners are required to have their dogs' shots/inoculations up to date. Class times are 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. and 7:15 to 8:15 p.m.

The beginner class will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercises beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog, will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the recreation department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $80 for the five week, one hour per week program.

To register for the next available session, call the recreation office at 383-4109. A new session will begin approximately every eight weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis.

Recreation commission year-round services

The recreation department conducts children, youth and adult programs and events on a year-round basis. Special afterschool recreation programs, for children ages 4 through grade 6, are conducted in three seven-week sessions (fall-winter-spring). Information regarding recreation activities appears in all local news media, fliers home from school, school menus and on cable T.V. local listings. You may call the office daily at 383-4109 for information on all services.

Help light the night at Relay for Life

Community residents can help light the night for walkers at the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life May 21-22 at Cohasset High School, by sponsoring a candle lantern in honor or memory of a loved one who has fought or is fighting cancer.

"The luminary ceremony is a special way to honor someone you love that has cancer, or to honor the memory of a loved one."

— Anna Mary Stewart, Luminary co-chair

The relay will feature teams pulling together to celebrate life and fight cancer. Teams keep a representative on the track, walking in shifts for a full 24 hours, to raise funds for the American Cancer Society. A luminary ceremony at 9 p.m. will add personal tributes and remembrance to the efforts of an estimated 600 relay participants, many of whom have been touched by cancer.

Candle lanterns for the ceremony can be sponsored for a contribution of $5 or more, according to Anna Mary Stewart and Mary Nagle, Relay for Life Luminary Co-Chairs.

"The luminary ceremony is a special way to honor someone you love that has cancer, or to honor the memory of a loved one. The candles burn through the night as a reminder, to all participants, of one of the reasons behind Relay for Life," Stewart said.

Funds raised during the relay will support the American Cancer Society's comprehensive approach to cancer control and patient programs.

Pilgrim Co-op of Cohasset is sponsoring the "Cancer Survivors Reception" Friday evening, May 21, at 5 p.m. Survivors of all ages are welcome to join the reception and lead the Honorary Lap during the opening ceremony at 6 p.m.

For information about sponsoring a luminary, call Stewart at (781) 545-0244 or Nagle at (781) 383-6030. For more information about the American Cancer Society's Cohasset Relay for Life, call Mary Shepherd at your local American Cancer Society office at (508) 584-9600.

IT'S HAPPENING

Annual luncheon set

The annual meeting and luncheon of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will be held Tuesday May 25 at 11 a.m. at the Barker Tavern in Scituate Harbor.

Ken Stevens, renown flower designer will present his fabulous program.

For more information, please call Mary Hickey at 545-2655.

Astronomy Day is May 21

The South Shore Astronomical Society in cooperation with Trustees of the Reservation, will present an astronomy program Friday, May 21, at Turkey Hill.

The program will start at 7:30 p.m. and will have instructional activities for children, a storyteller, a slide presentation, telescopic display and viewing, door prizes, a raffle, free literature provided by Sky and Telescope magazine, refreshments and more.

The annual Astronomy Day event is held every spring in communities around the county. Local astronomy clubs, educators, museums and planetariums donate their time and telescopes, in the hope of bringing to the public a continued awareness of this ancient, thought-provoking science.

Take East Street (Route 228) to Leavitt Street to Turkey Hill. In case of bad weather, the event will be held the next night, Saturday, May 22.

For information, call Louis A. Gentile at (781) 545-7067 or Tenny Doble at (781) 585-2317.

Girl Scout spring registration

If you missed the girl scout sign-up last week, you can still sign up by mail. This sign-up is for girls who are not currently girl scouts in grades K through 12 (1999-2000 school year). If your daughter is going to kindergarten next year, we are forming Daisy troops to begin in the fall.

For more information, call Mary McElroy, 383-0505; Terry James 383-9173; or Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council (781) 251-0150.

All current girl scouts may contact their troop leaders for spring registration.

OBITUARIES

Domenic S. Martino

Domenic S. Martino, 75, of Cohasset, an estimator for New England Telephone Co., died Saturday.

Mr. Martino worked for New England Telephone for 30 years, retiring in 1988.

He served in the Army during WWII.

Born in Boston, Mr. Martino lived in Scituate, West Warwick, R.I., and Pocasset before moving to Cohasset.

He was a member of the American Legion in West Warwick.

Mr. Martino leaves two sons, Stephen D. Martino of Scituate and Gregory D. Martino of Marshfield; three daughters, Laurie J. Brady of Scituate, Elizabeth Martino of Cambridge and Dianne M. Somin of Easton, Conn, and nine grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony Church. Burial was in Massachusetts National Cemetery in Bourne.

Donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association of Eastern Massachusetts, 1 Kendall Sq, Cambridge 02139.

Hydrant fees are back on the chopping block

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The current budget crisis is affecting every municipal board and town committee without exception. The water commission is the latest board to feel the bite of the $766,000 budget shortfall. With the approval of the selectmen, Town Manager Mark Haddad is proposing a reduction in hydrant fees that could be as high as $106,500 if voters reject a second attempt at an override to balance the budget.

Town officials are hoping voters will approve one of three Proposition 2-1/2 override options at the May 22 special election. The proposed reductions in the hydrant fees are directly related to the four override options. If voters do not support any override, the town will reduce hydrant fees by $106,500. If voters approve a $380,000 override, the hydrant fees will be reduced by $52,521. Approval of a $509,554 override will result in a $25,786 reduction in hydrant fees. The largest override option, $612,895, will reduce hydrant fees by $16,500.

Haddad said the town has to reduce the hydrant fees because of the budget shortfall. The town pays hydrant fees to the water commission to maintain adequate reserve capacity for fire fighting. The water commission is an autonomous board with its own budget financed mostly through users fees. The hydrant fees have been a sensitive issue since last year when town officials tried to eliminate the fees from the fire department's budget. Town meeting rejected that proposal.

"Everything is up for discussion," Haddad said. "The water commission is receiving a reduction in its budget like every other committee in town. I alerted the water commission last December to the possibility of this happening if the override failed. They said they had the money in their budget to cover a shortfall this year."

Water commission Chairman John K. McNabb Jr. said his board has the money to cover the shortfall this year because of delays building the town's second water tank. McNabb said delays finding a spot for the tank means the commission will start the project after the beginning of fiscal year 2000, which begins on July 1, 1999. Treasurer/Collector Michael Buckley informed the water commission that it will not have to make a principal and interest payment for the proposed tank until fiscal year 2001. The principal and interest payment was already included in the water commission's budget because the commissioner's thought they would need to make payments in fiscal year 2000. The problem is that the water commission will need to cover the fiscal year 2000 shortfall in 2001. McNabb said the town should consider any reduction in hydrant fees as a loan.

"Unless this is treated as a loan, we feel this is a transfer from water funds to general funds," McNabb said. "Last year, town meeting agreed with us that hydrant fees are a justifiable charge the town pays us. It is a bill the town is obligated to pay. We only agreed to potential reductions because we can absorb the impact for one year."

McNabb said the water commission is the only board in town this year with the ability to absorb a large, one-time budget reduction. But any permanent reduction in hydrant fees will limit the amount of money the water commission has for capital improvement projects, he said. If the [illegible] reduces the hydrant fee payment by $30,000 per year, the water commission will face a loss of $300,000 over 10 years, McNabb said. The water commission has approximately $6.9 million in debt from previous capital projects and needs about $4.26 million for future improvements.

"It is perplexing that after the big vote last year that said the town had to pay its bill, the first thing they go after is the hydrant fees," McNabb said. "A $106,500 reduction is basically the amount of our maintenance budget. If that money is not put back in our budget, we will have to increase water rates."

Haddad said he has discussed the hydrant funding with the selectmen and he will make every effort to fund the fees in fiscal year 2001. Haddad said that the town will have to find an additional $106,500 in cuts if it doesn't reduce hydrant fees.

"If town meeting voters want to reinstate the hydrant fees this year, then they will have to show me where to find the cuts we need if the overrides fail," Haddad said.

Vote on land taking for tank

The water commission voted last night after The Mariner went to press on a proposal to take by eminent domain a half-acre of land on Scituate Hill for a new water tank. The water commissioners had planned to vote on the proposal last week, but delayed the discussion for legal reasons on the advice of town counsel. Water commission Chairman John K. McNabb Jr. said he expected the commissioner's to approve the taking barring any last-minute overtures from the owner of the land, J. Michael Susi and Sons, to negotiate an acceptable sale.

The taking would complete more than two years of effort by the water commission to build a new storage tank. The commission needs the tank to improve fire flows, increase storage capacity, and to empty the existing tank on Bear Hill for cleaning. McNabb said the taking would take about a week to finalize. The water commission hopes to construct the new tank before the end of next year.

Small appetite on override buffet

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Selectmen put a smorgasbord of override options on Saturday's ballot, but voters wanted to taste only one.

Despite warnings from town officials of deep cuts to services and programs without a substantial tax hike, Cohasset taxpayers opted for the smallest tax increase on the ballot menu – and that, only by a whisker.

"I'm glad I convinced selectmen to put the $380,000 override figure on the ballot," said Town Manager Mark Haddad after Saturday's vote. "It is very clear that voters sent a message that they want their taxes under control."

Fifty-six percent or 2,835 of the town's registered voters went to the polls Saturday. In a vote of 1413 to 1364 — the $380,000 override squeaked by with a 49-vote margin. It wasn't even close for the $612,895 override question which failed by 503 votes and the $509,554 which lost by 281 votes. (For full results see page 22).

If, as expected, town meeting Monday appropriated the full $380,000, the taxes on the so-called average Cohasset home valued at $341,000 will increase an additional $136.49 in fiscal year 2000 which begins July 1. That is on top of the $133 allowed under Proposition 2-1/2 for a total of $269.49. The tax rate will be $15.74 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Voting was heavy all day Saturday and many faced long lines at the polls. Absentee ballots came in all week at a near record pace, a sign that the turnout would be heavy, according to the town clerk's office.

Enthusiastic override supporters were out in force along Highland Avenue and at the corner of North Main Street and Jason Road.

Complete with coolers filled with snacks and soft drinks, the "Yes, yes, yes" crowd was prepared to stay all day to wave to those headed to the polls in a

"The fastest town meeting ever," was the general consensus among voters who actually made it through the rain to the high school gymnasium in time for the vote on the 2000 budget Monday night.

Through the heavy downpours, a steady stream of Cohasset residents continued to pull into the high school parking lot for the next 15 minutes, only to be told the vote was already taken.

Within five minutes of the scheduled 7:30 start time, the amended version of the $19.9 million town budget, as altered by Saturday's override vote, was approved unanimously by Cohasset taxpayers without a word of discussion.

The $380,000 override figure, as approved over the weekend, was expected to be the cause for some discussion and debate by both pro and anti-override proponents.

Scituate Hill parcel tapped for tower

Residents living in the shadow of the town's only water tank on Bear Hill can breathe a sigh of relief.

The water commission has voted unanimously to take by eminent domain 1/2-acre of land on Scituate Hill for a new water tank. The land-taking culminates a two-year struggle by the water commission to find a suitable location for a second water tank.

The water commissioners originally wanted to build the new tank next to the existing unit on Bear Hill. Abutters vigorously opposed the Bear Hill plan, finally persuading the water commission to seek alternative sites. The Scituate Hill site emerged as the most viable alternative to Bear Hill.

Water Commission Chairman John K. McNabb Jr. said attorney Valerie Swett from town counsel's office only has to file the taking with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds to finalize the legal process. McNabb said Swett would probably file the documents by the end of this week.

The water commission is paying the owner of the land, J. Michael Susi and Sons, $52,000 for the half-acre and a temporary construction easement. State law requires towns to pay fair market value for any property taken by eminent domain. The 1/2-acre of land is part of a 62-acre parcel slated for commercial or residential development by the owner. The water commission obtained independent appraisals that estimated the value of the land as $64,000 per acre. The $52,000 payment includes $32,000 for the 1/2-acre and $20,000 for a two-year temporary construction easement to build the tank. Susi can contest in court the amount paid for the land, but the company cannot block the taking.

McNabb said the project is now scheduled for a December, 2000

Hydrant fees are back on the chopping block

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The current budget crisis is affecting every municipal board and town committee without exception. The water commission is the latest board to feel the bite of the $766,000 budget shortfall. With the approval of the selectmen, Town Manager Mark Haddad is proposing a reduction in hydrant fees that could be as high as $106,500 if voters reject a second attempt at an override to balance the budget.

Town officials are hoping voters will approve one of three Proposition 2-1/2 override options at the May 22 special election. The proposed reductions in the hydrant fees are directly related to the four override options. If voters do not support any override, the town will reduce hydrant fees by $106,500. If voters approve a $380,000 override, the hydrant fees will be reduced by $52,521. Approval of a $509,554 override will result in a $25,786 reduction in hydrant fees. The largest override option, $612,895, will reduce hydrant fees by $16,500.

COMMITTEES DISBANDED

Four town boards were disbanded in one fell swoop by selectmen vote Tuesday night.

The inactive committees included the Milliken Field Construction Committee, the Cable TV Committee, the Investment Advisory Committee, and the Straits Pond Committee. Two other inactive committees, the Call Firefighters Committee, and the Insurance Advisory Committee were not disbanded at the request of certain selectmen who feel their services may be of use to the town in the town.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

The town is in need of a number of volunteers. There is a vacancy on the Government Structure Committee that must be filled. Two associates are needed for the Conservation Committee.Three citizens-at-large are needed to fill vacancies on the Call Firefighters Committee.

CIRCUS REQUEST

Patti Keville of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce went before the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night requesting permission to perform two old-time circus shows on the Cohasset Commons in late August. Vidbel's Circus has been held for the past eight years in Scituate on the St. Mary's Parish grounds. Selectmen were worried mostly about the impact elephants may have on the Common's grass. A suggestion was made that the circus be located instead at the former Osgood School. Selectmen will revisit the issue in further detail during their next meeting June 8.

GOAL SETTING

The Board of Selectmen Tuesday night reviewed last year's goals and objectives and proposed suggestions for the upcoming year.

Among the new goals and objectives are: to continue a lobbying effort for education funding, to bring moderate income housing for seniors to Cohasset, to ensure Y2K readiness, to put more town offices on the town's computer network, and to define the role and member selection procedures for the Government Structure Committee. The Board of Selectmen also suggested that they begin meeting regularly with the School Committee and Advisory Board.

Selectman Thomas Callahan proposed informal meetings as a way to avoid next year the kind of misunderstanding and mistrust between the boards that resulted this year from the budget debate.

BEACH, RTF STICKERS EXPIRING

Your beach and RTF permits are expiring. You will need vehicle registrations, or if not a Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease). You are encouraged to purchase your sticker through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Stickers will be on sale on the following schedule: Monday and Wednesday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Thursday evening 5 to 7 p.m. and Friday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Stickers will be on sale at the DPW building Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Beach stickers are $7 per vehicle, and $3 per vehicle for elders over 60. RTF stickers are $80 per family, for senior citizens over 65 will now be $65 and for a single resident $40.

Permits now being issued will expire May 31, 2000.

TEN MINUTES FOR WALK-INS

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays.

The next selectmen's meeting is Tuesday, May 25.

Walking for a cure

Teams show support at relay for cancer research

By Shirley J. Loomis

A large turnout showed support for the walk.

It was a demonstration of strength. But more importantly optimism. Thirty teams from area South Shore towns showed up on the Cohasset High School track field for the third annual Relay for Life fundraiser sponsored by the American Cancer Society. More than 450 participants helped raised $65,000 as part of the effort, according to Mary Shepherd, regional executive director for the American Cancer Society.

Co-chairing the past five months of effort for Cohasset were Victor Vanderlugt and Craig Bleicken. Numerous committee members worked to pull this year's event together, with 20 or 30 in attendance to give the needed 24-hour coverage. According to Mark DeGiacomo of the Cohasset School Committee, "The Relay for Life will always be an annual event," as long as he remains a member of the school committee.

Local businesses such as Atlantica Restaurant and South Shore Music Circus showed their support through sponsorship and donations. The Survivor's Tent was sponsored by Pilgrim Co-operative Bank.

Opening ceremonies officially began at 6 p.m. Cohasset High student Carolyn Carr sang the National Anthem and the opening lap was the very moving Victory Lap taken by survivors of cancer.

Fifty-five local residents registered as survivors, ranging in age from Katie Egan, a 4th grader at Hingham's Foster Elementary School who is currently undergoing treatment, to people well into their senior years, many of whom are in remission and some of whom are like Georgine Butman, a teacher at Hull Memorial Middle School, and survivors of multiple types of cancer.

Speaker for this year's ceremonies was Clark Chatterton, physical education teacher at Cohasset High School, who was instrumental in bringing the Relay for Life to Cohasset three years ago and at that time was cancer-free. Today Clark is undergoing cancer treatments and attributes the likelihood of a positive outcome to events like the Relay for Life which raise money for research, early detection programs, and programs which help make treatment available to those who are in need of it.

The Relay for Life began in 1985 in Washington state with one just man. Dr. Gordon Klatt decided to walk for 24 hours in an attempt to raise money for Cancer research. Today the Relay for Life is the single largest fundraising event held by the American Cancer Society with 2500 walks occurring in communities around the USA, Australia, Puerto Rico, and Guam.

More than 2,000,000 volunteers participate nationally and over 1,500,000 individuals team up to participate in the walks. During the past 50 years the American Cancer Society has donated over two-billion dollars to research, funding the efforts of 29 Nobel-Prize-winning scientists. In 1998 the Relay for Life raised $89,000,000 through the efforts of 2150 communities and $100,000,000 was donated to research. As a result of these efforts, 200,000 cancer survivors participate in the Victory Lap.

The dreaded "C" word of the past today has an average 60 percent survival rate and 60 percent of cancers are estimated to be avoidable through lifestyle management. Because of the efforts of many unsung heroes such as were present in Cohasset, Cancer mortality rates are declining for the first time in 30 years.

Anna Mary Stewart, luminary coordinator for the event, did not have the exact count, but in excess of 1500 candles, closer to 2,000 had been sold prior to the start of the 9 p.m. luminary ceremony. The candles encircled the track and in some areas lined both sides. By 9 p.m., a volunteer was holding a handful of luminary bags waiting to be placed, but had run out of candles to put inside; a testament to how many people in our communities have had their lives touched in some way by Cancer. Walking the track took approximately 413 steps. Each bag was the flickering reminder of the human potential our communities have lost or are currently praying for. In some parts of the country 2,000 people would be the size of an entire town.

On Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. an extremely informative Cancer Smart Shop was presented. Helen Boyle who has been with the American Cancer Society for nine years, and several volunteers, supplied information through literature, conversation, and skin screenings. Forms were available detailing the American Cancer Society's current goals and agenda, as well as sign up sheets for anyone with a desire to get involved. New volunteer sign-ups total approximately 100,000 nationally. Some of the programs needing volunteer involvement are the Reach to Recovery, Road to Recovery, and political Advocacy.

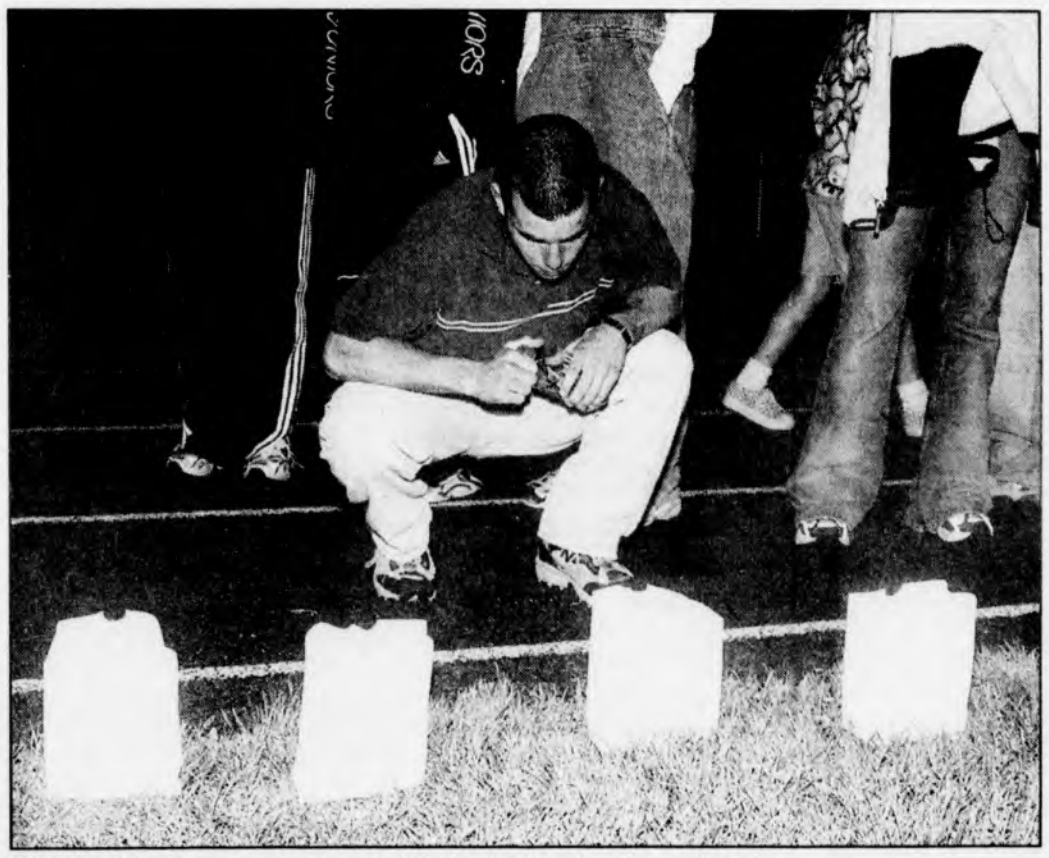
Cohasset's Relay for Life was just that; a celebration of life and sustained individual effort making a difference. The sun was out, 30 to 40 tents and screen houses covered the inner field, DJ'd music filled the air, flowers adorned tables, toddlers pushed baby doll strollers, parents pushed toddler strollers, beanie babies, baby snugglers for newborns, babies carried around the track on mother's hips, wheel chairs being pushed around the track, little red wagons toting luminaries, 100+ teenagers, super soakers, soccer balls, barbecue grills, back packs, signs like "Bradley's Briggade," a team representative of five family generations and a survivor.

Teams were made up of people you know: "Something Like Spaghetti," concerned Hingham High students ranging from 9th to 11th grade, "Yellow Polka Dotted Penguins," a name made up of Katie Egan's favorite things and consisting of Foster School teachers, faculty, students, employees, and captained by Betsy Connolly, Foster's Guidance Counselor. Some of those present had won, others were like Gordon Behrer of "Cancer Crusaders." Gordon lost his mother 32 years ago, his father 12 years ago, and a 19 year old nephew was just diagnosed last week. Some people were just concerned individuals who believed sooner or later if enough people keep showing up, everyone will eventually win.



Chris Pratt looks for a name on one of the luminaries along the walk route.

Abutters pack tower hearing

Planning board decision expected next month

By Frank DiCesare
STAFF WRITER

Residents from two towns sat side by side Thursday to oppose the construction of another cellular tower on Route 3A.

More than 60 concerned abutters from Scituate and Cohasset packed the planning board's May 20 meeting to voice their opposition on a proposal to build a 180-foot, lattice-style cell tower near the town line.

The turnout Thursday night was so large that residents outnumbered the hearing room's seating capacity, compelling planning board chairman William Limbacher to order a five-minute recess so additional chairs could be brought in.

But despite the large crowd, the two-and-a-half-hour meeting was a relatively calm one. Opponents from the Ledgewood Farms subdivision and Gannett Pasture Lane areas submitted a petition signed by more than 200 Scituate and Cohasset residents, opposing the tower's proposed site. Opponents said the proposed tower is a safety hazard and will adversely affect the neighborhood's aesthetics, leaving abutters with a potentially dangerous eyesore.

The applicant, Tower Ventures of Providence, R.I. plans to construct the tower on a 40 X 70 foot easement located on a one-acre parcel of land adjacent to Cohasset Collision Center. The cell tower will be set back 134 feet from Route 3A, according to Scituate Town Planner Laura Harbottle. Its size could serve a maximum number of six cellular or personal communication services which could use as many as 12 antennas on large triangular brackets. Tower Ventures will build a stockade fence around the tower's base to hide four tower storage buildings. Three of these "pads" would be 10 X 20 square-foot buildings, the fourth would be and 8 X 10 structure. The pads would serve as shelters in which communication companies would store their transmitting equipment, Harbottle said. Tower Ventures representatives said AT&T and Cellular One have already voiced interest in locating their equipment on the proposed site.

Those who came out to oppose the tower's proposed location, said Scituate should live up to its cell tower bylaws which aim to avoid potential damage or detrimental impact to adjoining properties. In a statement to planning board officials, Thomas Daley of Ledgewood Farms, said the proposal is in direct conflict with the town's cell tower bylaws since it presents and adverse visual impact and "will have a detrimental impact on the surrounding properties and totally spoil the green corridor" in Scituate. Daley illustrated his point, producing three enlarged photographs of a similar-sized tower in Scituate's West End, superimposed on the proposed site.

Abutters Randy Patterson, Tom Daley, and Torin Sweeney of Cohasset hold a doctored photo showing what the proposed 180-foot-tall tower will look like on approach to the Cohasset town line.

But the proposed location's landlord, Stephen Bjorklund of King K. Corporation in Duxbury, said Daley's photographs miscalculated the tower's size.

"The tower the opponents showed at the meeting was approximately 60-feet wide at the top, making it five times larger than the actual visual impact," Bjorklund said. "From our side it can be seen as a move to deliberately manipulate the planning board into denying the permit."

Proponents did not respond to the abutters concerns surrounding the tower's aesthetics with respect to its size. Instead, Tower Ventures chose to address the safety concerns by discussing the tower's structural integrity. Keenan Brinn, tower development manager for the company, said the proposed tower will be able to withstand 100 mile per hour winds and be engineered to bend onto itself at its 60-foot mark from the top.

One abutter, however, questioned Brinn's assertions on the tower's fall zone. Cohasset resident Donald Staszko, a pilot with American Air-

'Oliver' staged by Cohasset players

This weekend, the Cohasset Plays by the Sea will present "Oliver" with a cast made up of 110 actors ranging in age from 9 to 19. The performances will be at Cohasset High School.

"Oliver" is the fourth major production by DeeDee Nicynski with CPBS. Her other work includes "Wizard of Oz," "Annie"and "Into the Woods."

Nicynski has cast newcomer Hunter Scott Sease as Oliver and Cohasset theater veteran Katie Roche as the artful Dodger. Other leads include Ryan Story as Fagin, Devon Coleman as Nancy and Alex Russell as Bill Sykes.

Nicynski has been known to refer to his production staff as the "dream team." This team is made up of coproducers Sarah Roche and Nicynski, music director Grace Gardner and choreographer Janet Campbell, owner of Dance Steps in Hingham.

Performaces are: Friday, May 28 at 7:30; Saturday at 7:30 and Sunday at 2:30. Tickets are on sale at Deer Hill School, Joseph Osgood School, The Children's Exchange and Cohasset's Buttonwood Book Store, or by phone. Contact Irene Barry at 383-1605. Tickets are 46 in advance, $8 at the door.

Hunter Sease is the lead character in "Oliver." Here, he begs for more gruel during a rehearsal this week.

Parent handbook is in the works

D&A committee behind project

By Josh Myerov
CORRESPONDENT

Perhaps you'd rather not think about the possibility of your naive but curious child being coerced by his friends into sniffing a touch of Ritalin that one of the kids brings to school every day. Or maybe it never crossed your mind that your child could be disguising her marijuana pipe as ... a belt buckle?

For all the unlikely scenarios that will appear in the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee's Parent Handbook, due out this fall, some important lessons must be taken from the very fact that such scenarios are mentioned at all: First, it must be happening more than we think, and second, parents can never be too careful.

But the parent handbook is hardly a collection of bizarre drug practices and sophisticated anti-drug detection techniques. It is, in fact, just the opposite. Ninety-nine percent of it provides parents with useful information about where kids get their drugs, how parents should chaperone a party, who to call for substance abuse help, and everything in between.

The handbook provides parents with useful information about where kids get their drugs, how parents should chaperone a party, who to call for substance abuse help, and everything in between.

For the drug and alcohol committee, the best part of the Parent Handbook is that the bulk of the work is already finished. Pat Martin, the school committee's liaison to the drug and alcohol committee, has snatched the idea and the handbook from the Montgomery/ Rocky Hill Municipal Alliance on Substance Abuse Prevention (New Jersey), where she worked on the project back in 1996.

What's left now, says Martin, is for the handbook to be both updated and referenced for Massachusetts and Cohasset specific facts. For example, the revised handbook will include state laws concerning drug use and distribution, local resource numbers and help lines, as well as Cohasset drinking and drugging "haunts."

In addition, said Martin "since three years have passed, we need to add any new drugs that have become hip." The first one that comes to mind is the much-publicized "date rape" drugs.

For parents, the best part of the handbook is both its readability and design. With all the interesting facts on various drugs, their addictiveness, their hazards, and their effects, the Parent Handbook actually makes for interesting browsing, which is exactly what the drug and alcohol committee is hoping.

"The way we produced it," said Martin, "it was something that people held onto. They'd keep it in a drawer and they'd reference it." Plus, she added, "you can easily find what you're looking for without feeling like you need to sit down and read a whole book."

While the original New Jersey handbook was sponsored and paid for by George Gallup, Jr., the Cohasset handbook will be accomplished with volunteer support. Although copies of the New Jersey edition are available, the drug and alcohol committee hopes to get a hold of the original computer discs which will make the project much easier on everyone.

As with the New Jersey editions, Martin expects the Cohasset handbooks will be distributed sparingly due to the high cost of production. Expect one copy per family, she said, with other copies available to the community.

For additional clout, the committee is hoping to have the well-known author and child psychology professor David Elkind compose the preface.

Veteran is keynote speaker at ceremonies

A decorated veteran who retired following a serious injury during training is the keynote speaker for this year's Memorial Day festivities.

Michael Mahoney, a 1985 graduate of Cohasset High School, will address the gathering for the annual event on Monday, which kicks off at 8 a.m. The program will include a visit to each of the cemeteries in town for a 21-gun salute and taps. There will also be ceremonies by the flagpole at the Hull Street Honor Roll. More ceremonies are planned at the POW Memorial in the village.

A final ceremony and raising of the American flag will be held at the War Memorial at the cove.

Mahoney enlisted in the in 1984 as an infantryman, serving with the 3rd Infantry Division in West Germany and the infantry division at Fort Carsen, Colorado. He was selected to attend the special forces qualification course at Fort Bragg, N.C., and was award the special forces Green Beret and qualified as an A-Team Medic. He served for three years at Fort Campbell in Kentucky with the special forces group for three and a half years before his medical retirement in 1990 following a serious injury during training.

He has received numerous medals, including the Joint Service Commendation Medal; the Army Commendation Medal with 2nd Oak Leaf Cluster; good Conduct Medal, among others. Mahoney is a graduate of Harvard University and the Dartmouth Medical School.

The parade route is as follows:

The color guard and soldiers march from the cove to the Paul Pratt library then travel by bus to Green Gate Cemetery at the end of Jerusalem road. The march continues to the Hull Street Honor Roll and then to Woodside Cemetery.

From 9:30 a.m. to Noon: The parade leaves Woodside and travels by bus to Beechwood Cemetery. Marchers regroup at the Music Circus where they are joined by the Boy Scouts, the school bands and other troops. At 10:30, the march continues on foot to Cohasset Central Cemetery then travels down North Main Street to the World War I Memorial on Town Common. The POW Memorial at Depot Court in the next destination. Finally, the parade winds down Elm Street to the War Memorial at the Cove.

Community cookout following Memorial Day parade

The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation invites everyone for hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks or coffee immediately following the Memorial Day parade, at Bancroft Hall on Government Island.

The non-profit Lightkeepers Corporation was established in 1991 to renovate a former two-family lightkeepers' residence, no longer used as such because of automation of Minot's Light, and convert it into a function room for community use. The building is leased from the town but maintained and operated by the Lightkeepers Corporation.

The generosity of Cohasset residents and others provided the funds for renovation. Operating and maintenance expenses, and reserves for capital replacements or improvements, are recovered from rental of two apartments on the second floor, and from fees charged to non-residents for use of the function room facilities. Cohasset residents may use the facilities for a nominal fee, and non-profit organizations at no charge.

This will be the third year that CLC has hosted Memorial Day attendees in recognition of the generosity of its supporters during renovation, and it expects to serve about 1000 people again.

A quick and easy entree!

Dinnertime is the most popular time for entertaining! You light your candles, set your table with your china, and make the best display that suits your occasion!

MAY I PRESENT

SALLYANN CHATTERTON

Steak In A Bag is a quick and easy entree, yet it tastes like you've worked for hours! Display the steak on a pretty platter in the same bag it was cooked in. Slit open the top of the bag at the table in front of your guests so you can enjoy their amazement when they realize how the steak was cooked. Carve the meat at the table or return it to the kitchen for slicing.. I promise, you and your guests will consider this a truly wonderful treat!

Steak In A Bag

1 cup Egg Breadcrumbs (see below)

1 (2 to 3 lb) top sirloin steak, cut 2-1/2 inches thick

4 tablespoons butter, softened

4 tablespoons vegetable oil

1 teaspoon crushed garlic

2 teaspoons seasoned salt

2-1/2 teaspoons seasoned pepper

1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese (4 oz)

Egg breadcrumbs:

3 or 4 slices egg bread

Prepare egg breadcrumbs; set aside. Remove excess fat from steak. In a small bowl, mix butter, oil, garlic, seasoned salt and seasoned pepper 'til blended. Spread on all sides of steak. Mix breadcrumbs and cheese. Press into butter mixture on steak, coating steak well. Place steak in a brown paper grocery bag. Fold end over and secure with staples or paper clips. At this point, steak may be refrigerated several hours.

Before cooking, bring steak to room temperature. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Place bag in rimmed baking sheet and bake 30 minutes. For med-rare, increase oven temp to 425 degrees and bake 45 minutes. For medium-well, reduce to 375 degrees and bake 5 minutes longer before removing from oven, a total of 50 mins. Remove steak from bag. Let stand 5 mins. before carving into thin slices. 4-6 servings.

Egg breadcrumbs:

Tear bread, including crusts and ends into pieces and place into blender or food processor fitted with the metal blade. Process until crumbly. Store extra crumbs in plastic bags in freezer and measure out as needed.

Variation: Two steaks may be baked in the same bag. Double the recipe, but keep the baking time the same.

You will truly love this steak recipe, thanks, Jean!

OPINION

A day to remember, reflect

"It's easy to forget the numbers, but how can we forget the faces, the voices, the cries of young men dying before their time. Between Oct. 23 and Nov. 26, 1965, a total of 305 young American soldiers were killed in combat in the Pleiku campaign. Their names march down the lines inscribed on Panel 3-East of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, each one a national treasure, each one a national tragedy....

"What would they have become, all of them, if they had been allowed to serve their country by their lives, instead of by their deaths?"

- From "We Were Soldiers Once... and Young," by Lt. Gen. Harold G. Moore (Ret.) and journalist Joseph L. Galloway

What would they have become, the thousands of men who spilled out of the trenches in the Argonne Forest to face the stuttering machine guns of German troops in World War I? When we wake to Memorial Day on Monday, it is a question we should ask as America wages an air war that is destroying a country even as the leader of that country wages war on the people of Kosovo.

What would they have become, the hundreds of thousands of men and women who died on the beaches of Normandy, the islands of the South Pacific and in the air over Italy and France during World War II?

How would our world be better if the thousands of soldiers who died in the bitter winters on the Korean peninsula had, instead, come home to families, jobs and lives full of hope?

And what would they have become, the 58,000-plus American troops who died in Southeast Asia and whose names are etched into the gleaming black marble of The Wall?

The numbers of American dead have diminished in our more recent encounters: hundreds dead in Beirut in the '80s, hundreds killed in Desert Storm, and dozens dead from our tragic peace-keeping efforts in Somalia in this decade. The death tolls have diminished, but behind each number is a name, a face, a husband, wife, brother, sister or parent. What would they have become?

On this Memorial Day, the U.S. and its NATO allies wrestle with how to end the war in Yugoslavia, how to gain victory without facing the potential slaughter that a ground war might bring. We wrestle with these questions even as we recoil at the horrors imposed upon the Kosovars, the horrors we hoped strategic bombing would halt.

Monday is a day to remember American soldiers who answered the call of their country. In some cases the lens of history later raised questions about the logic or importance of the causes they were called to defend. The cause in Kosovo seemed clear two months ago, but now the mission is blurry and the ending unclear. If we don't find that focus, we risk an interminable conflict that will be measured with the same body counts that marked the war in Vietnam.

In the beginning of their book recounting the fighting in Vietnam's Ia Drang valley in 1965, Moore and Galloway list the names and hometowns of all 305 young American soldiers who died in the horrific battles near landing zones X-Ray and Albany. Each year, the Ia Drang Alumni come together to read the roll of the dead and the names of those members who died since the last gathering, so that none will be forgotten.

And then, in an ironic twist, the men write: "Schoolchildren no longer memorize the names and dates of great battles, and perhaps that is good; perhaps that is the first step on the road to a world where wars are no longer necessary. Perhaps."

But we must remember the dead on Monday and wonder, what would they have become?

Hats off to hard work, faith and perseverance

As high school and college graduates from all over the South Shore toss their caps into the air in the next few weeks amid the cheers and tears of family and friends, each and every one deserves a hearty round of applause.

COMMENTARY

CAROL BRITTON MEYER

Hats off to all students — from those topping the list of academic achievers to some who really didn't "click" with school but stuck it out anyway.

Congratulations to thousands of students who participated in school plays, helped with community service projects, juggled after-school jobs with homework, participated in school sports and took part in dozens of other extracurricular activities, both at school and in the community.

There's something heartening about the fact that millions of young adults from acorss the country have graduated or will graduate in the days ahead.

What stands out is the fact that despite individual challenges and even some hang-ups, each and every one of these graduates kept their eye on the high goal. Some may have struggled more than others and some required more than a small nudge from parents and peers to stick with it. But the end result is positive proof that thousands of students got up ever morning and faced a new day — with hope, and sometimes trepidation. But they all did it, year after year. Every single graduate — regardless of his or her social status, economic standing or personal challenges — had to show at least a measure of organization, stamina and perseverance just to make it through the school years — let alone excel.

Those who stood out the most for their achievements among fellow students and school administrators worked extra hard to make their school years a success and their fellow students glow with school spirit — from organizing proms, dances and other social functions to raising money for class activities and providing leadership among their peers in countless ways.

But let's also give a pat on the back to the less visible students — the ones who had no particular desire to be in the limelight but who contributed to a positive school environment in their own individual ways. Every student who is a force for good is an asset to his or her school and community. It takes all kinds of people to make a world — not everyone can be a star, but all can shine.

Graduating students are the future of our towns and country. They are full of enthusiasm, dedication and an eagerness to learn — despite negative stereotypes that say otherwise. Graduates these days are heading into a much better job market — with higher salaries and more opportunities than ever before. Job possibilities abound — even at the entry level — in many fields including Internet communications, health, finance, social service and business, to name a few. Anything is possible with a little faith, perseverance and hard work.

Congratulations, graduates, you finally made it — each and every one of you, including those who may have "danced to the tune of a different drummer."

And while we're at it, hats off to the many dedicated teachers, school administrators and parent volunteers who helped these students and their schools succeed, because they're all winners in our eyes.

Kudos to schools which took a giant step forward in encouraging students to participate in community service projects, raised money for new playgrounds and formed committees and hosted programs in an effort to foster and encourage tolerance and goodwill among students and the school community at large.

And let's not forget those long-legged teen-agers who somehow managed to attend classes regularly while cramped behind grade-school sized desks! It must be challenging when you grow six inches over the summer!

Thanks to individuals and businesses in communities who gave generously of their time and energy to make graduation night alcohol-free parties a reality. And let's not forget the D.A.R.E. officers who taught kids all year long about the benefits of steering away from drugs, alcohol and cigarettes — and each and every individual and organization who assisted the schools in some way, large or small.

Here's to every graduate — whether entering the armed services, the work force or heading off for college or graduate school — because you're all winners. You're the best!

HEALTH NOTES

Upper Little Harbor algae problem

This spring there has been a particularly severe infestation of algae in upper Little Harbor. In the past, the algae has been controlled by the practice of opening Cat Dam on Nichols Road for three days a month during the month's highest spring tides. This procedure together with the practice of letting the dam stay open a month in the spring and fall have heretofore provided enough tidal flushing for the water to remain relatively algae free during the spring algae season.

What has happened this season to increase the algae in upper Little Harbor? A concensus of experts indicates that there are two factors contributing to the problem. The first is the use of nitrogen bearing fertilizer to lawns around the harbor. There is no way our waterways can absorb the fertilizer loads recommended by lawn care professionals in treating the lawns around these sensitive waterways. The recommended application dosages are usually in excess of 400 pounds per acre per year. These application rates provide excess nutrients to the waterways and promote the algae growth now being observed.

The second factor is the reduction of the ability of what little pervious soil exists over the rock in the area to absorb rain water which falls in the area. Removal of trees substantially reduces the ability of a piece of land to absorb surface water, since estimates conclude that about 30% of the rain which falls on treed areas is absorbed by the trees. Increase of the roof and driveway area from new construction is an additional factor contributing to damage to our waters.

Finally, failed septic systems add substantially to the problem.

During the summer, the board of health will provide specific recommendations to homeowners for measures which will lessen the damage to Little Harbor and surrounding waters. These recommendations will come from the data which is being collected in our study of the area.

New Vaccine Available Rotavirus

Rotavirus is the most common cause of diarrhea in infants and young children. Most children get this infection by the time they are 3 or 4 years old. Symptoms are nausea, vomiting, watery diarrhea and slight fever. The virus is transferred from person to person and outbreaks usually occur in the winter months.

Now, a new vaccine is available which can prevent or lessen the severity of rotavirus infection. The vaccine is given by mouth at 2, 4, and 6 months of age, generally at the same time is as other vaccines. Talk with your pediatrician about it if you have some concerns. Remember the vaccine only presents this one cause of diarrhea.

The report is presented by the board of health.

COHASSET CARES

New increased-price 1999 sticker required as of July 1

[A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by the Cohasset Recycling Committee]

Escalating hauling fees charged to the town for taking away our trash have necessitated raising the RTF sticker from $65 to $80. If head of household is over 65, fee remains at $65. Fee for a single person is $40, and landscapers require a $125 sticker for dumping grass and leaves. New stickers will go on sale May 17 and may be obtained at the town hall or weekends at the RTF. As of July 1, anyone without a current sticker will not be allowed to dump their trash or use the recycling area. Please remember that the $80 sticker price pays for only 30 percent of our hauling fees; the remaining 70 percent comes from our taxes.

It is now mandatory to recycle fluorescent lights, and as of Sept. 1 we will be required to recycle TVs and computer monitors. Please leave these items at the first building on the right as you enter the RTF.

Town Recycling Committee members met with the Superintendent of Schools and the three principals recently to discuss recycling in the schools. The fifth grade will be visiting the RTF operation soon to see how it is run and what is recyclable.

Next Paint Day is May 29. Bring in paints, but not otherwise hazardous liquids like solvents, which will be collected at a later date.

Cardboard: a subsequent newsletter will be devoted largely to the importance of our recycling cardboard — all kinds. All cardboard items except waxed orange juice and milk cartons should be put in the cardboard area along with your brown bags.

Also coming up: "Dump Stories," and, of course, composting, among other things. See you next time.

Church hosts annual strawberry festival

The annual Strawberry Festival, at the tree shaded patio of the Second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common, will be held Friday, June 18, from 2 to 7, Saturday June 19, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Sunday, June 20, noon to 6 p.m.

The event will feature fresh strawberry shortcake for $3.50 as well as a country store featuring home-baked goods in the Bates Hal of the church. Bates Hall is also where deli items, cheese and pickles and other items will be available. An old-fashioned ice cream stand will be located in front of the Church.

Proceeds will benefit a list of charities including Quincy Crisis Center, Salvation Army, DOVE, Morgan Memorial, and many others.

What's next? The ducking stool and "A" for adultery?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It conjures up the image of men in horizontally striped uniforms, chained together at the ankles, making big rocks out of little ones for no apparent purpose in the piney woods of Alabama and Mississippi.

Yet it's coming to Massachusetts along with the turn of the 21st Century.

Bristol County Sheriff Tom Hodgson is reinstituting the chain gang to get prisoners in the Bristol County House of Correction out of the house and into something called "the work ethic."

"We have made prisons a place where inmates hang out and lift weights, smoke cigarettes, get free health club memberships and free medical care," says

What's next? The ducking stool? Stocks on the Common? And, shades of Hester Prynn, maybe even an "A" for adultery sewn to the shirt front of a man or woman who strays from the marriage bed.

Don't laugh! The state of California, where so many of such things start and move east, is considering a law that would make marital infidelity a crime calling for a public apology and payment for therapy for the victim.

Mrs. Laura Onate-Palacios, a victim herself, has filed the initiative and started collecting the 419,250 signatures needed to get on the year 2000 ballot because infidelity has caused people to suffer. Just ask Hillary.

But I digress . . .

The Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts, is, of course, outraged by Sheriff Hodgson's revival of the chain gang, which the Globe called "a practice that evokes old images of Southern slavery."

"It's the kind of thing that brings up images of an era we like to think is gone," says John Roberts, director of CLUM. "It's the kind of punishment that puts people in public humiliation,"

But Sheriff Hodgson isn't just fooling around to yank the chain of CLUM and others he feels have let Massachusetts prisons become country clubs. Already he has taken away the cons TV sets and weight lifting rooms.

"We not only cooked for them, we served them," says Hodgson, "People were scratching their heads in wonder when criminals ended up back in jail. Why wouldn't they. It wasn't a bad place to be."

Massachusetts has a habit of coming up with unusual punishments to fit usual crimes.

John Sales of Charlestown in 1633 stole some corn in a time of scarcity and he was sentenced to be "openly punished and all he had by law condemned and sold to make restitution."

Robert Coles of Boston was convicted of drunkenness in the 1600s, fined 10 pounds and "enjoyned to stand with white sheets of paper on his back where in a drunkard shalbe written in great letters."

Even the Pilgrims refused to coddle the miscreants in their midst.

John Billington, whom Governor Bradford called "a knave," was sentenced to be tied by the neck and heels "for his contempt of Capt. Standish's lawful command." He was later hanged for the Plymouth Colony's first murder.

So when you see Sheriff Hodgson's chain gang in red jump suits cleaning up Bristol County this summer, remember, they're just carrying on an old Bay State tradition.

Terry James receives Girl Scout Appreciation Pin

More than 500 people were in attendance at the Newton Marriott Hotel to congratulate this year's recipients of the Girl Scout Appreciation Pin at Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council's Annual Meeting. Cohasset's Terry James was among those honored with this prestigious award.

Approved by the Board of Directors following nationally-established guidelines, the Appreciation Pin recognizes an individual who not only contributes to the Council's goals and objectives, but serves Girl Scouts above and beyond expectations.

Terry currently services as Service Unit Coordinator, Troop Leader and Family Partnership Chair. She has been involved in Girl Scouting for more than 15 years. She has also held positions as Registrar and Treasurer for Cohasset, and Council Delegate.

"Terry's ability to reach people and inspire their volunteer spirit is the main reason the Cohasset Service Unit has evolved from six troops to 13 troops," notes fellow volunteer, Mary McElroy.

lines, said the 15-foot whips to be placed at the tower's top will make it a 195-foot-tall structure. Staszko, who said he lives within 63 feet of the proposed tower, said the tower could fall which could cause damage to his property during a bad storm. In addition, Staszko noted that since the tower lies in a Logan Airport flight path, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) could require the applicants to paint the structure red and white and place a strobe light at its apex, making the tower even more of an eyesore.

The applicant, however, said they would be willing to accept a condition from the planning board that the tower not be painted red and white and not be illuminated.

Staszko is currently in the process of renovating the former South Shore Chevrolet dealer on Route 3 into a medical center. Staszko's new development is located close to the proposed tower.

Project opponents also contended there were alternative sites in the area for the proposed tower. Scituate Rod and Gun Club representative Alan Bonney said the club's property could be made available as a possible tower site and would provide enough camouflage to conceal the structure and sufficient acreage to cushion a possible collapse. Bonney's statement brought applause from residents.

But Bjorkland said only a couple of acres on the club's property lies within the overlay district.

"Of that area, most of it is either vegetated wetlands or on the 50-foot non-disturbed buffer zone," he said. "I don't believe they have any area on which they could build a tower. They are also 30-feet lower in elevation than the proposed site."

The town's consultant, David Maxson, managing partner of Broadcast Signal Lab LLP of Cambridge, argued in favor of the proposed site, saying the tower will be "well-maintained and well-secured." He said the tower's six carriers will not emit enough energy for the tower to be considered a health hazard. Project opponents fear health risks associated with a tower including brain tumors, miscarriages, cataracts and problems with pacemakers.

"Most of the time the towers are idle," Maxson said. "They only work part-time when someone makes a call. The total energy reaching the people from the carriers is 100, 1000 or one million times lower than the FCC standards."

The planning board voted to close the public hearing Thursday night. The board will hold another discussion June 5 but will take no further comments from the public. The board is expected to make their final decision on June 25.

Collaborative marks fifth anniversary

By Cory Tromblee
STAFF WRITER

If you've ever been approached by frustrated teenagers who loiter around outside convenience stores and ask you to buy cigarettes for them, you are not alone.

They're often there because the stores are too scared to sell to underage smokers. You may have the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative to thank for that.

Last week, the collaborative celebrated its fifth anniversary in the business of stamping out smoking, especially among teenagers. The group met to celebrate their successes in the battle against tobacco.

Back in 1994, the state approved a 25 cent tobacco tax increase, and the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program set out on a crusade to cut tobacco use in the state by 50 percent. After the tax brought in some revenue for the program, each town received a sum of money from the state to be used for tobacco education.

"Individually, the town of Hanover was only going to get $10,000," said Hanover's health agent Jeanmarie Kent Joyce. "What we wanted to do was going to be very hard for one individual town, board of health or health agent to do." A collaborative was in everyone's best interest, she said.

"It was a natural for us to get together when they offered us the opportunity," said Bruce Capman, Hingham's executive health officer.

The health agents from South Shore communities got together and discussed pooling their money and developing a staff whose sole purpose would be tobacco education, Capman said. This seemed the most logical and cost-effective way to educate people.

Health agents from the 14 communities, which include Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Plymouth, Rockland, and Scituate, got together and began looking for a headquarters. After realizing there was no room in any of the 14 town halls, they ended up in Hanover because it was centrally located.

The group would need a leader. Capman said it was natural to choose Dawn Sibor of Hingham to lead the collaborative. Besides having an excellent resume, she had also worked on one of the first tobacco control programs in the state, he said. Last week's event also served as a tribute to Sibor, who is retiring after five years on the job.

Sibor said back in the 1970's she worked with the Harvard School of Public Health on the pilot Tobacco Peer Education Program. In four communities north of Boston, high school kids were trained to speak to and support younger kids, the idea being that the kids would take the advice and support of younger people before adults. They weren't there to preach to them, Sibor said, but rather support them and talk about situations which may arise as you grow up.

Sibor studied elementary education at the University of Massachusetts, and school counseling at Northeastern University, and said she originally wanted to be a teacher. But after working on the peer education program, she realized there were other ways to educate outside the classroom She helped build the collaborative from scratch back in 1994, when she was hired as the program director.

Jan Anderson, a health teacher at the Hanover Middle School, motioned to all the anti-smoking posters, pins and pamphlets in the Hanover office during Thursday's anniversary party. "Everything you see, she's the impetus behind it," Anderson said.

Sibor said in the early days, the group spent a lot of time and effort becoming familiar with each community. As they still do, they began meeting with health advisory councils and boards working toward common goals. In Hanover they worked with the Alliance, an anti-drug and alcohol group. They also began offering recreational programs, summer camps, and cessation programs.

The collaborative first set its sights on eliminating smoking from municipal buildings and vehicles, Sibor said. Now, with the exception of the town of Rockland, each of the communities in the collaborative has banned smoking in town buildings.

The group realized it would be hard for people who were used to smoking at work to adjust, so they offered cessation programs for municipal workers and their spouses. They even hired hypnotists.

"It seemed to be one easy thing to do and it set a standard for us to take it [non-smoking] to businesses," said Capman. "Then we jumped on the youth access."

Their next goal was to try and freeze youth access to tobacco. While state law forbids selling tobacco to people under the age of 18, Sibor said because there is no permitting system for selling tobacco at the state level towns had to do it locally. Now all businesses which sell tobacco within the district of the collaborative must have a license to do so.

With the license comes restrictions on selling tobacco to minors, as well as penalties for doing so. Sibor said enforcement depends on the town. Fines, suspension of permits, or both can be used. And tobacco compliance checks or "stings" are used to enforce the regulations in each of the 14 communities.

In most towns, the compliance checks have had a huge impact on sales of tobacco to minors, especially through the elimination or restriction of cigarette vending machines. Businesses have gotten rid of single-sale "loosies" and self-service cigarette display cases, and free samples are completely extinct.

Similar to the cessation programs for municipal workers, the collaborative also offers merchant education for stores who have had to change their practices. Like smokers, it isn't always easy for businesses to adjust, Sibor said. Attendance at the merchant education sessions can range from great to none at all.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect to the anti-smoking crusade is that it moves at different speeds in each town, depending on the town's character and needs. No two towns are the same.

In Hanover vendors are required to have a license, may not use free standing displays, and are forbidden from selling singles or giving free samples. Vending machines are allowed, while in most towns, vending is not allowed. Municipal buildings, and vehicles are 100 percent smoke free and restaurants are only required to live up to the state's minimum smoking requirement, which insists on a non-smoking section.

Aside from achieving these goals, the collaborative has also been instrumental in educating young people about the dangers of using tobacco.

Anderson, the middle school health teacher, said the collaborative "is a source of materials, health educators and is an organization that allows networking with other educators in the area."

"They help me help teens quit," she said simply.

Capman said one of the major focuses of the group is teens. After all, he said, "If you can keep a child from smoking till they're 20, they probably won't smoke."

Now the trend is moving toward restaurants. "We're very interested in protecting workers," Capman said, citing a statistic that claims restaurant workers are twice as likely to contract a smoking-related illness than the norm.

Although they are losing one of their influential leaders in Sibor, the group does hope to continue its crusade. Capman said there is still a lot of work to do because smoking is such a powerful habit, backed by powerful business. He admitted that he himself smoked before quitting 19 years ago.

"The enemy here is the tobacco company," said Capman, "the victim is the smoker."

Bridge project drawn out

By Julie A. Mehegan
STAFF WRITER

After a burst of activity in the winter, plans to rebuild the Route 3A bridge between Marshfield and Scituate after five years of delays have stalled.

Work was expected to begin on the project this spring after it was approved by state highway officials and advertised to bidders in January. But officials from Mass. Highway Department must now await legislative approval of the state's supplemental budget before the project can be funded.

Skip McCourt of Mass. Highway said he is hopeful the project can begin sometime this summer, once the supplemental budget is approved by the legislature and signed by the governor.

"We're currently on hold, awaiting passage of the [supplemental] budget which would fund projects like this statewide. We'd like for [approval] to happen by the end of the fiscal year," McCourt said. "We're hopeful, once the funding issue is resolved, the rest of the process can proceed."

McCourt said the contract for the work was advertised in January and the apparent low bidder is the Middlesex Corporation based in Chelmsford, though the contract can't be formally awarded until the funding is available. Middlesex has bid $5,757,060 to rebuild the bridge.

While McCourt did not have the total number of bidders available, he said the project was "actively pursued" by a number of contractors.

The new bridge will replace the much-maligned temporary bridge erected on the same spot in 1994. Construction of the new bridge is expected to last about two years, but highway officials have said they don't anticipate any major disruptions to the flow of traffic.

When the temporary bridge was built, traffic narrowed to one lane controlled by a traffic light, causing frequent backups on both the Marshfield and Scituate ends of the bridge. The temporary bridge will remain in operation until the day the new bridge opens.

The original bridge was built in 1933 and served as a draw bridge, but was demolished in 1994 because its pilings were deteriorated and it posed a hazard to cars traveling on Route 3A between Marshfield and Scituate. The temporary bridge was then installed.

The new bridge will not be a draw bridge. Instead, to accommodate marine traffic, the bridge will be built 17 feet higher than the mean high water-mark - a U.S. Coast Guard requirement. At low tide, clearance under the bridge will increase by about nine feet.

The bridge will feature one lane traveling in each direction, with a sidewalk for foot traffic on the east side of the bridge. Plans are also in place for a scenic look-out and picnic area with parking on the Scituate side of the bridge. New signs will be erected indicating the North River's designation as the Commonwealth's first scenic river.

Plans are also underway for sidewalk improvements on the Marshfield side of the bridge, which will provide safe access to school bus stops for local children.

Mass. Highway will pick up the tab for the construction of the new bridge.

Forum for teens planned for June 2

Community Newspaper Company has invited teenagers from across Eastern Massachusetts to attend a forum, planned for Wednesday, June 2, at the BankBoston Conference and Training Center in Waltham from 7 to 10 p.m.

"We want to fill a room with teenagers and give them the chance to talk about the issues and concerns that they have in school and in their lives in general," said Mary Jo Meisner, CNC editor and vice chairman. "A lot has been written in the national press about what is on the minds of high school students. We want to give them the chance to speak for themselves."

The Forum is the most recent chapter in a year-long series of reports on the state of public education in the commonwealth by CNC, which publishes newspapers in more then 130 communities in Eastern Massachusetts and the Cape.

The session for teenagers has been organized by CNC in partnership with Fox 25 TV and radio station Jam'n 94.5 FM. Also taking part in the planning of the event are the state's Executive Office of Health and Human Services and the Massachusetts Violence Prevention Task Force.

Jam'n deejays Pebbles and Ralphie will serve as moderators, along with Tory Ryder, Fox 25 news anchor.

Participation is limited to 150 teens on a first-come, first-served basis. Those who plan to come can call 1-888-881-NEWS to register.

Lack of foster care disrupts children's lives

Only two foster homes in Hingham and Cohasset

By Josh Myerov
CORRESPONDENT

Dick and Ruth Hewson of Braintree have five grown children who have long since moved out on their own. Yet, for the past 12 years, the Hewsons have made a career out of raising children who are of no biological relation to themselves.

Forty-four foster children in all have passed through the Hewsons' doors over the years. Dick says that when the two they have now move on to either an adoptive family or back to their natural parents, more will surely follow. While the Hewsons may seem either angelic or a little insane, foster parents just like them are the norm throughout the South Shore.

But for three particular towns on the South Shore — Hingham, Cohasset, and Scituate —foster homes like the Hewsons' are almost non-existent.

Although the number of children from these towns who require foster services are likewise very small, Kristin Bonanno at the Department of Social Services (DSS) says it's all the more sad that these few children can't find homes within their own town. "Not only are they forced to change teachers, but they also lose friends, and have to give up activities. It can be very disruptive of a child's life," Bonanno said.

Last year, according to Marty Amdur, a DSS volunteer from Hingham, at least four children from Hingham and Cohasset were sent to surrounding communities because of the lack of foster care in their hometowns.

Amdur said there is a total of two foster homes in Hingham and Cohasset and both of these are kinship homes, where parents provide care to the child of a neighbor, a relative, or a friend.

"Not only are they forced to change teachers, but they also lose friends, and have to give up activities. It can be very disruptive of a child's life."
— Kristen Bonanno of the DSS

As for regular or unrestricted foster homes, permitted to take in children they're not connected to, there is not a single one in Cohasset or in Hingham, and there is currently only one in Scituate. As a result, said Amdur, any child from Cohasset or Hingham who enters the foster care system and cannot find a friend of the family to provide for him would not have the option to stay in his community.

According to Bonanno, parents may decide themselves to what extent they are able to help foster children. They are encouraged to set limits accordingly. "Each family," said Bonanno, "has their own social worker that they work with very closely. Some families," she added, "might say they only want to take one child at time. The social worker really wants to make it work for that particular family."

In addition, Bonanno points out, there are a variety of ways people with limited time can help foster children. Intake foster families provide children with temporary homes for up to 45 days until DSS can evaluate the child's needs and find a more permanent home. Respite homes offer occasional child care, often weekends, to allow other foster parents crucial time for rest and recuperation. Teen mentors commit as little as 2 hours per month in support of teens under DSS care.

For most of these options however, the process to becoming a foster parent is an extensive one, requiring at least six months, and more often a full year. An applicant's home must meet standard safety requirements, references must be checked, and a criminal records investigation must be conducted, among other procedures.

Numerous home visits attempt to ensure that children and parents are matched properly. In addition, a ten-week training program aims at teaching parents the needs of foster children.

One of the problems with the system, said Amdur, is that being a foster parent doesn't pay very well. "If it was more than enough," said Hewson, "I guess more people would be doing it." Depending on the age of the child, the stipend ranges between $14 to $18 per day, plus additional allowances for clothing and school recreation expenses as well as birthday and holiday gift money.

Hewson sees what he's been doing as a way to break the cycle of abusive families. "If that little child would have grown up in an environment with drugs and beating ," said Hewson, "chances are he would have grown up to be a violent adult. So you're helping that one child but in addition you're helping your community."

Amdur just hopes that Hingham and Cohasset residents will begin to recognize that their communities need a little help too. For more information about foster care contact Carol Carson at the local DSS office: (781)682-0832. To apply to be a foster parent call 1-800-KIDS-508.

Boys lacrosse looks ahead to next season

By Barry McGurn
CORRESPONDENT

It's evident Paul Sporn is not originally from the Greater Boston area. First of all, the accent is not there. Second, when asked a question about the teams in the Pilgrim Conference, the first-year Cohasset boys' lacrosse coach, responded with a "that's my understanding."

A Washington D.C. native, Sporn last week completed his first spring as head coach at Cohasset after coming over from Newton South H.S., where he coached at the junior varsity level for two years. The Pilgrim Conference is new to him, and one thing did jump out at Sporn - the size difference of the schools.

"It's absolutely shocking," admitted Sporn, who recently saw the student body enrollment figures for the schools in the league. "There were (around) 300 Cohasset students and over 800 at Hingham and almost 700, I think, at Duxbury and something like 1,600 at Falmouth. It's amazing when you think about it."

And although Sporn wanted to make it clear that the size of Cohasset was not the primary reason for his teams' struggles this season (3-9 in the Pilgrim Conference, 5-10 overall), he did see those figures as tough to ignore.

"I think you'd have to be crazy to say that it's not a factor," said Sporn, who locally has also coached at Brookline and Cambridge. "There are a lot of factors, but I don't think that the size of the school is the reason that we had our record. The team was very competitive but at times had lapses of lack of concentration, lack of execution, you name it."

"The great thing about having a player like Kevin is that he can fill in at any position and he's the type of player who could be an impact player at any position,"
KEVIN DEVITO

While Cohasset is losing four seniors, including starting defenseman - and captain - Jamie DeMichele, the team is returning Kevin DeVito ("overall probably our best player" - Sporn). DeVito, the team's starting goalie who also played on the man-up team on the power play, was the only player on the team to make the all-conference team when he was named as a second-team goalie.

But that wasn't his only contribution.

"The great thing about having a player like Kevin is that he can fill in at any position and he's the type of player who could be an impact player at any position," said Sporn.

Skippers track program looks strong heading into Y2K

By Joe Reardon
CORRESPONDENT

Ray Jones would have been proud of the Cohasset High track team's performances at last Saturday's South Shore Principals meet.

The former Skipper trackster need only look at the top-six finishes by Cohasset to see the team is as strong as ever heading into the Y2K.

However, the Skippers have a much-anticipated date at this Saturday's Class D meet on the same Norwell track. And nobody is more excited about another chance to run amok than Brian Krupczak.

Krupczak, who along with teammate Dan Trowers garnered a pair of top-six individual finishes, hopes to ride the wave of last weekend's performances.

"Hopefully it will carry over to Saturday," said Krupczak. "That's the best we've done at that meet in years."

Krupczak did the job on the track and in the pits. He raced to a second-place finish behind Bridgewater-Raynham's Scott Kimball in the 200-meter dash with a time of 23.2 seconds and secured fifth with a leap of 38'11-3/4" in the triple jump.

Trower's second-place showing came in the long jump where he hit the sand 19'11-1/2" from the takeoff board. Trowers also took fifth in the hotly-contested 100 in 11.7, just 4/10 off the winning time of 11.3 by New Bedford's Clinton Dunston.

Cohasset's Khalil Mayun and Craig Parker finished eighth in the 100 and 200, respectively, in 12.0 and 24.4.

Matt Santoro finished twelfth in the 400 at 54.9 while, in the freshman 400, Steve Laney raced to fourth place with his 54.9. Tim Baird dominated the freshman mile, winning with a time of 4:53.6 and Dan Duffy ran 12:40.8 in the two-mile to take 22nd.

In the relay events, the Skippers wound up third in the 400 relay with a 45.6 and sixth in the mile relay at 3:58. The girls 400-relay team bolted to a 54.8 finish for seventh.

Cohasset fared well in the field events with several solid performances. Peter Maitland's javelin throw of 137-5 was good for fifth overall and Liam Martin took tenth in the high jump with his 5-4 leap. Mayun triple-jumped to a 35-4, 15th-place finish and Craig Davis' heave of 34-4 in the shot put gave him 21st.

Morgan Hurley was the top female finisher for Cohasset, straining to a 50.9, seventh-place performance in the 300 hurdles. Maureen Equi wasn't far behind Hurley in the tight race with a 52.4 clocking, good for 13th.

Catherine Flaherty ran 66.3 in the 400 to take 13th and Eileen Ridge's two-mile time of 14:55.4 garnered 19th in the eight-lap race.

Ashley Ulmer and Flaherty cleared 4-10 and 4-8, respectively, in the high jump for eighth and 13th while the 77-4 turned in by discus-thrower Alyssa McNamara earned her 32nd in the exceptionally strong field.

Cohasset should rack up some points in the Division 4 meet and build on a season marked by a strong turnout and renewed interest in the sport.

COMMENTARY

Sister act is tough to follow

By Jim O'Sullivan
CORRESPONDENT

I'm a baseball player. This fact is important to understand in order to fully appreciate my opinion about this article's subject, its heroine if you will.

Baseball is played in a 90x90x90x90' diamond. That's 360 feet. If, through some bizarre cosmic twist of physics and the goodwill of the baseball gods, I were to hit a home run, I would run 360 feet around the bases, give or take a little because of looping turns around the corners and celebratory antics. This requires no great level of physical conditioning.

In fact, the baseball player may be the least aerobically fit athlete in any of the major sports. While it could be argued that maintaining peak condition might aid one's performance on the diamond, it is apparently by no means necessary.

Take Cecil Fielder for instance. The slugging first baseman became one of the premier power hitters of the 90's, all the while occupying more space than most household appliances. Roger Clemens, five time Cy Young Award winner professes to a playing weight of about 230 lbs., while in reality he has probably tipped the scales at 260 a few times throughout his career.

Ninety feet, ninety feet, ninety feet. That's not very far. Since the game's action occurs in short bursts, great endurance isn't really required of its players.

Warm-up laps around the infield routinely leave some of my teammates in gasping, fetal positions on the grass. Rippling abs and well-defined calf muscles are not commonplace in a baseball locker room. Babe Ruth hit 714 home runs on a steady diet of corn dogs and beer.

All of this may help to explain why I am absolutely agog at my sister Meghan this week. Her boat, her "shell," (bear with me on the vocab, I'm learning), captured the New England Championships on Saturday. She rows crew, a sport which leaves me absolutely baffled and with slight feelings of inadequacy.

Let me give you a little bit of a background first, for those of you who are as clueless about the sport as I am. Crew boats come in singles, doubles, "fours" or "eights," with the

But Sporn also admitted that freshman Kyle Webber, one of six freshmen to make contributions to this year's team, may challenge DeVito in goal next spring.

"As Kyle gets stronger and matures a little he might challenge Kevin at goalie next year. That's very possible.

"Obviously when you're 5-10 there are not a whole lot of highlights. But one of the highlights to me, in retrospect, is we had six freshman make contributions at the varsity level. And that is extremely significant. And so I'm expecting more from those six players and expecting a lot from the current crop of juniors."

Joining DeVito and Webber next year will be current juniors Brad Powell (defense), Travis Moore (attack) and Matt O'Reilly, a transfer from Duxbury, who missed this season due to an illness. Sophmore Ronan Buick will also contribute to what Sporn thinks will be "a very strong defensive squad."

"We played poorly at times," admitted Sporn. "At other times we were quite competitive. There are a lot of games that we played that could have gone the other way. With the exception of maybe one or two times I don't think we were ever totally outclassed or outmatched."

number of rowers indicated by the boat's name.

Each rower in a multiple rower boat is responsible for one oar on one side of the boat (port or starboard.) Each stroke must be perfectly synchronized in order to achieve top speed.

Some boats have a coxswain, a non-rower who sits in the front of the boat (the bow) and helps the rowers coordinate their speed and pacing. Sort of a blend of a human metronome and an aquatic jockey.

With the coxswain guiding the rowers through shouted instructions ("Give me a power ten!" is one of the phrases I've picked up), the goal is to cross the finish line ahead of the other boats.

Basic race rules apply: no Rosie Ruizes, no gouging holes in the side of the other team's boat, no underwater propellors. Crew doesn't sound so hard, assuming you have the balance and coordination required to get in and out of the boat.

Try it. Rowers are some of the best conditioned athletes I've seen. Like boxers, basketball players, and middle distance runners, they need energy and strength in large amounts, but for extended periods of time. If a boxer waits on his heels and tries to relax for one round, he better have a cast-iron jaw.

If a runner trying to win the 800 meters decides to take it easy between 500 and 700, then kiss a medal goodbye. If a rower opts to lolligag his or her way through a race, not only will the boat (shell) lose, but it might actually go in circles. Put Mo Vaughn in a "shell" and watch as the big guy sinks to the bottom of the river.

This rowing is serious stuff. This is not a Sunday afternoon canoe trip on the lake. The Nobles team even goes so far as to head down to Clemson University for spring training.

According to Meg, a typical preseason workout would proceed in the following manner. Wake up, run the 2.5 miles to the boathouse, hit the water for strenuous workouts of sprints and endurance drills, then head to the football stadium to run up then stadium steps and reel off push-ups. All in South Carolina heat. Sounds like a blast.

It's not a sport for the faint of heart. Rowers are, for the most part, not small people. If I hadn't been standing there when they'd walked by carrying their boat on their shoulders, some of the guys on the Nobles team may have been the most jacked guys on the shore.

I kept waiting for a photographer from one of those companies who puts out the birthday cards with guys in Speedos on the front ("I sent Vince to wish you a Happy Birthday...") to swoop down, lens clicking.

It's a sport that requires intense devotion, which stems from love for it. I keep coming up short trying to comprehend it. There's no ball, for one thing. No one scores any points, really. You don't buy special shoes or have any contact with any of your opponents, except maybe off the water.

Put Mo Vaughn in a "shell" and watch as the big guy sinks to a watery grave. To me, it's a foreign sport. But I've seen a couple of matches and, even for someone who doesn't understand the sport, they're incredibly intense. It doesn't take a crew guru to figure out what's going through the rower's mind on the backstretch of a half mile race, when the rival boat is a half-boat length ahead.

Meg's boat finished the 1500 meter race in 6:01, in six minutes of what must have been hard breathing and a serious cardiovascular workout. I'm a baseball player. I hit a triple this year and ran (although some would argue the use of that word) from home to third, which probably took somewhere around fifteen seconds, give or take a minute or so.

New England Champions. I can hardly even imagine winning something like that. And having witnessed the hard work that my sister has put into her sport, I'm even more impressed. To achieve the highest level of success at anything, a job, school, a sport, anything, requires, talent, dedication, hard work.

A teammate described Meg as "really, really, really determined...self-motivated. She helped us push ourselves." Push themselves to finishing a season undefeated, become New England Champions and take home all sorts of nifty prizes.

I'm proud of you, Meggo. Ya done good.

The team is made up of some of top seventh graders on the South Shore. Also on the team are Norwell's John Mohan Cohasset's Sean Connolly, Duxbury's Ben Camobreco, Rockland's Joe Coppens, Marshfield's Bryan Wholey, Plymouth's Tom McIvor, Hingham's Jeremy Weisberg and Michael Ricketts, Scituate's Tom Cuddihy and Mike Garland. Their coach is Paul Wholey, the head basketball coach at Marshfield High.

Seahawks receive Conference Award

Seahawks Youth Hockey captures South Shore Conference Philip Re Outstanding Program Award.

At a recent South Shore Conference Directors meeting, the Seahawks Youth Hockey Program was awarded the sixth annual Philip Re Outstanding Program Award for the 1998-1999 season.

The award is based on the outstanding sportsmanship and overall performance that includes attendance and participation at the meetings, communications, meeting financial obligations and leadership.

South Shore Conference President Burt Herman stated, "This award is a credit to their officer, directors, coaching staff, and players".

Debbie Re Sullivan presented the award to Seahawks President Skip Tufts and Director Ed Burke. Burke stated, "We are very honored to win it, and we all worked hard to achieve this goal".

Tufts stated, "The entire organization contributed to this award".

COHASSET RECREATION NEWS

Adult evening tennis lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis classes for all levels of instruction by calling 383-4109.

Classes will be scheduled as follows:

Beginners, 6-7 p.m. Tuesday
Intermediates, 7-8 p.m. Tuesday.
Advanced, 6-7 p.m. Thursday
Beginners, 7-8 p.m. Thursday

Other classes will be scheduled as demand indicates.

All sessions are four weeks in duration and cost $40 per person, per session. Teaching will be Amanda Gontarz of Cohasset Recreation Department's tennis staff. Participants who do not own or have access to a racquet, should indicate this at the time of registration. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis. Another evening will be made available, if demand dictates.

Baseball camp

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long Baseball Camp for youngsters ages 5 through 12 years at the recreation office, 1st floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Camp has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will be held for one week, beginning Monday, June 28, through Friday, July 2, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over, and half-day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Camp is available for 5- and 6-year-olds (age 7 optional for either half or full-day camp).

The week-long camp costs $140 per child for the full-day, and $75 per child for the half-day program.

Participants should bring lunch, snacks and any drinks other than water they might want. Bring your own glove, which should be marked with your name.

Summer basketball camp sessions

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the South Shore Basketball School will sponsor a summer basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two camp sessions will be available this July. Boys and girls, ages 8 through 11, will have camp from Tuesday, July 6, through July 9, at Cohasset High School's Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the four-day camp is $120. The full week camp, for boys and girls ages 12 through 15, will be held Monday, July 12, through Friday, July 16, at the Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the five-day camp is $150.

South Shore Soccer Camp — 1999

The Cohasset Recreation Department is now accepting applications for South Shore Soccer Camp for boys and girls ages 8-18. This is the South Shore Soccer Camp's ninth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp, it is suggested that you contact the Cohasset Recreation Department, 1st floor, Town Hall, or call 383-4109, in the near future. Brochures and registration forms are available at the recreation office.

South Shore Soccer will be offered to both boys and girls during the week of Monday through Friday, Aug. 2 to Aug. 6, and Aug. 9 to 13. Should a camper wish to attend both camps, this is now possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camps must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Cohasset's Miliken Field. The cost for the camp is $195 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players for the New England area.

VIP Soccer Camp Registrations - 1999

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7 years old.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4-7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4- and 5-year-olds and meets from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 19 through 23. The cost is $50 per week.

Also offered by VIP is a 3-hour program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 19 through 23 for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $80 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the Front Field of Cohasset High School. For brochures and registration forms, come to the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor, Town Hall.

Cohasset Swim team sign up

Allison Hughes is returning as coach of the swim team. New member tryouts will be held in June 21 and June 22 at 4-6 p.m. at Cohasset Swim Center. They are looking for two assistant swim coaches. For more information, call Brenda Regan at 383-0454.

THE DESIGNING WOMAN

by Kathleen Fox ASID

NICE AND CUSHY

When shopping for upholstered furniture, it pays to consider the shape of the cushions. Generally, there are two types of upholstered cushions: T or L-shaped cushions and square cushions. T and L-shaped cushions are shaped in accordance with their names. When fit to single cushion seating, T-cushions fit around both arms. Thus, they can be turned over to promote more even wear of the fabric. And, when a sofa is outfitted with an L-cushion on each side and a square cushion in the middle, they may also be flipped - provided that the patterns on their tops and bottoms match precisely. As for square cushions, they afford the greater flexibility of being able to be both flipped and rotated.

A comfortable and beautiful sofa can create an inviting living room in which to relax or entertain guests. From furniture and accessory coordination and placement to the selection of window treatments, THE DESIGNING WOMAN can help you create the home of your dreams. Often, there are few elements in an interior that need to be invented or purchased to improve a room's appeal. Call us at 383-6411 to arrange a convenient appointment.

HINT: Both T and L-cushions tend to fit more tightly on a frame than square upholstered cushions.

Harriet Ripley Gay at library

Local author Harriet Ripley Gay read from her new novel "Ode's Den" at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Saturday, May 15. Many friends and neighbors remember Gay, who lived in Cohasset for 16 years. She and her husband Laurence now reside in Honolulu, but return to Cohasset frequently to visit Harriet's brother Noel Ripley.

Gay has chosen Cohasset as the setting for the beginning and ending episodes of her book. The semi-autobiographical story follows the life of Sarah Winthrop, who comes of age just after World War II, moves to Paris, marries, and has a son. The title "Ode's Den" refers to a mythical forest cave where a survivor of a boat shipwrecked in 1850 supposedly lived.

Reviews of Gay's new book have been very positive. One reviewer described it as a "vivid recollection" of a young woman growing up in New England. The author has been praised for her command of language. Gay has published two earlier books as well as numerous short stories.

Small appetite on override buffet

steady stream of cars.

Noticeably absent was the opposition which apparently voted and then went home.

Roy Fitzsimmons, an anti-tax activist, and one of the few "No" sign holders in evidence, wasn't making any predictions to the Mariner around noontime.

The Committee for Quality Town Services (CQTS) was highly organized with poll watchers who tracked the voters and called those who hadn't voted – and were likely override supporters — before the polls closed.

Rob Spofford, spokesman for CQTS, was cautiously optimistic at midday.

"I was here at 8 when the polls opened," he said. Spofford said a high turnout is good for the process.

"With a great turnout, we'll know what the voters want," he said. "I believe in the democratic process."

Despite the hostility on both sides of the issue leading up to the election, there were moments of levity on Saturday.

Fitzsimmons commented on the fact that someone had put a toilet on the fountain in the duck pond early that morning. Peter Laugelle of the tree and park department reportedly donned a pair of waders and removed it. Fitzsimmons wasn't about to speculate on who was responsible or the message the perpetrator was trying to send.

And school committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo spotted a "Yes, yes, yes" sticker someone had placed on Fitzsimmons' back without his knowledge and walked over and pealed it off.

DeGiacomo said there is no question the voters were educated this time around. A try for a $766,000 override was defeated at the April 10 town election, but, at the time, override backers reasoned that many supporters who did not understand the impact of no override on the schools may have stayed home.

"We're hoping for the $612 figure," DeGiacomo said at noon. "But if it's lower, we know this has been an educated vote and we'll make the cuts and go on."

But the $612,895 override – which the school committee urged selectmen to place on the ballot — was not to be.

A group of school officials and supporters were clearly stunned as the results were read shortly after 6 p.m.

DeGiacomo, now sunburned from being outside the polls all day, tried to put a brave face on defeat.

"While we're obviously disappointed the top two overrides lost," he said. "We are pleased at least the last one did win.

"After the last election, it was crucial that the school supporters turned out to ensure that the $380,000 override was preserved," he said.

Selectman Diane Sullivan, the only selectman to oppose all the overrides, said officials now have a mandate.

"The leaders whether elected or appointed need to follow the mandate of the people," she said.

Scituate Hill parcel tapped for new water tower completion date. Tutela Engineering, the water commission's consultant, will prepare a set of construction [illegible]s within the next two weeks. The water commission needs a height variance from the zoning board of appeals (ZBA) to build the 65-foot-high tank. The maximum allowable height in the Scituate Hill zone is 35 feet. The planning board must approve the site plan, and the state Department of Environmental Protection must authorize the entire project. McNabb said it would take approximately six months to obtain permits and approvals, two months to solicit bids and pick a contractor, and 10 months to build the tank.

The water commissioners are also planning to build a permanent access road on an adjacent property owned by Paul Barry. Previously, Barry said he would provide the 1/2-acre of land needed for an access road and pipe easement in exchange for two free stub connections to the water main. McNabb said Barry may try to develop the land for a use that requires water access. Recently, negotiations for the access road stalled, and the water commissioners informed Barry's attorney they would take the land by eminent domain if necessary. McNabb said Barry finally contacted the water commission and said he would now be interested in selling the land for the road.

"It's a little unclear what this all means," McNabb said. "I don't know if that means the deal to trade the land for the connections is off. We don't object to the idea of buying the land we need."

The water commission has been trying build a second water tank since 1997. The town needs a new tank for several reasons: the water commission wants to deliver better water service to outlying areas of town; the fire department needs increased water reserves for dry summer months and large blazes; the town needs to empty, clean and service the existing tank.

Previously, the water commission has estimated the cost of building a 1.8 million gallon steel tank on Scituate Hill at about $1.065 million. The tank would be 65 feet high and 70 feet in diameter. The water commission has set aside $1.6 million for the tank. McNabb said any money not spent on the actual tank project could be used to fund other projects and keep water bills at current levels.

Full $380,000 override appropriated by voters

While the $380,000 override set an upper limit on budget spending, town meeting voters could have decided to voluntarily lower that figure.

The quick vote seemed to have taken a great many people by surprise. School committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo said "there were rumors that some motions by the anti-override groups would be brought before the meeting."

Selectman Tom Callahan added that rumors circulated as well that other groups would want the floor. But it wasn't to be. A quorum was present by 7:30 and Town Moderator George Marlette called the meeting to order.

The only other article on the warrant was quickly approved - to accept the town reports submitted by Cohasset's boards.

The budget article was introduced by Marlette, but nobody responded to his brief call for discussion. A vote was taken and the meeting was adjourned - in record time.

Most late arrivals seemed more amused (and relieved) than upset by the absence of discussion on the much debated issue.

But Selectman Diane Sullivan at Tuesday's selectman's meeting questioned the moderator's prudence. "I am disappointed the moderator didn't give people a chance to be heard," said Sullivan. "People wanted to discuss the issue. I think most people just missed it. They were still milling around" when the vote was called.

With the budget set at $19.9 million, the tax rate will be $15.74 per $1000 of assessed value, bringing the tax on the average Cohasset homeowner up to $269 for fiscal year 2000.

D & A drug hotline

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee operates a Drug and Alcohol Information and Referral Hotline on Tuesdays. Persons needing help with a drug or alcohol problem may call 383-4120. All calls are confidential, and staffed by a trained drug and alcoholism counselor on Tuesdays between 6 and 10 p.m.. On other days and at other times callers may leave a message.

Second-graders write about Cohasset

The second-graders at the Joseph Osgood School have been studying their community. After several visits, the children are busy writing about places visited and are compiling a "Community" book to share with their families and friends. Mrs. Collins' class assisted by Denise Yess, language teacher, and Mrs. Ritajean Poh, parent and musician, composed a song in appreciation of their community.

All the second-graders and teachers want to thank the community helpers for their time.

Cohasset Is

Cohasset is
Where I do live
And you should go there

I'll meet you at
The sunny beach
The ice cream truck's there

It is our most Favorite place
To go swimming

The water is
So clear and blue,
The sand shines
In the bright sunlight
Don't leave your sunscreen behind

At Osgood School
I read and write
And multiply

Respect our friends
And teachers too
The golden rule

The Common is
A meeting place
Where children play

And people stay
To say hello
And go their way
And walk their dogs
All along the way

Tedeschi's is
Our mini store
They are so good

It sells us milk
And Ritz Bits to
Our neighborhood

The town hall
Where we all vote
Our Selectmen

Make tough decisions
Records are kept
Since we were born
It helps our town
In very many ways

The Fire House
Helps keep us safe
From dangerous things

The town Police
Make sure all robbers
Stay away

The library
Has many books
Fun things to do

On Saturday
The sporting fields
Are really full
With boys and girls
Coaches and Moms and Dads

I'm glad I live in Cohasset!

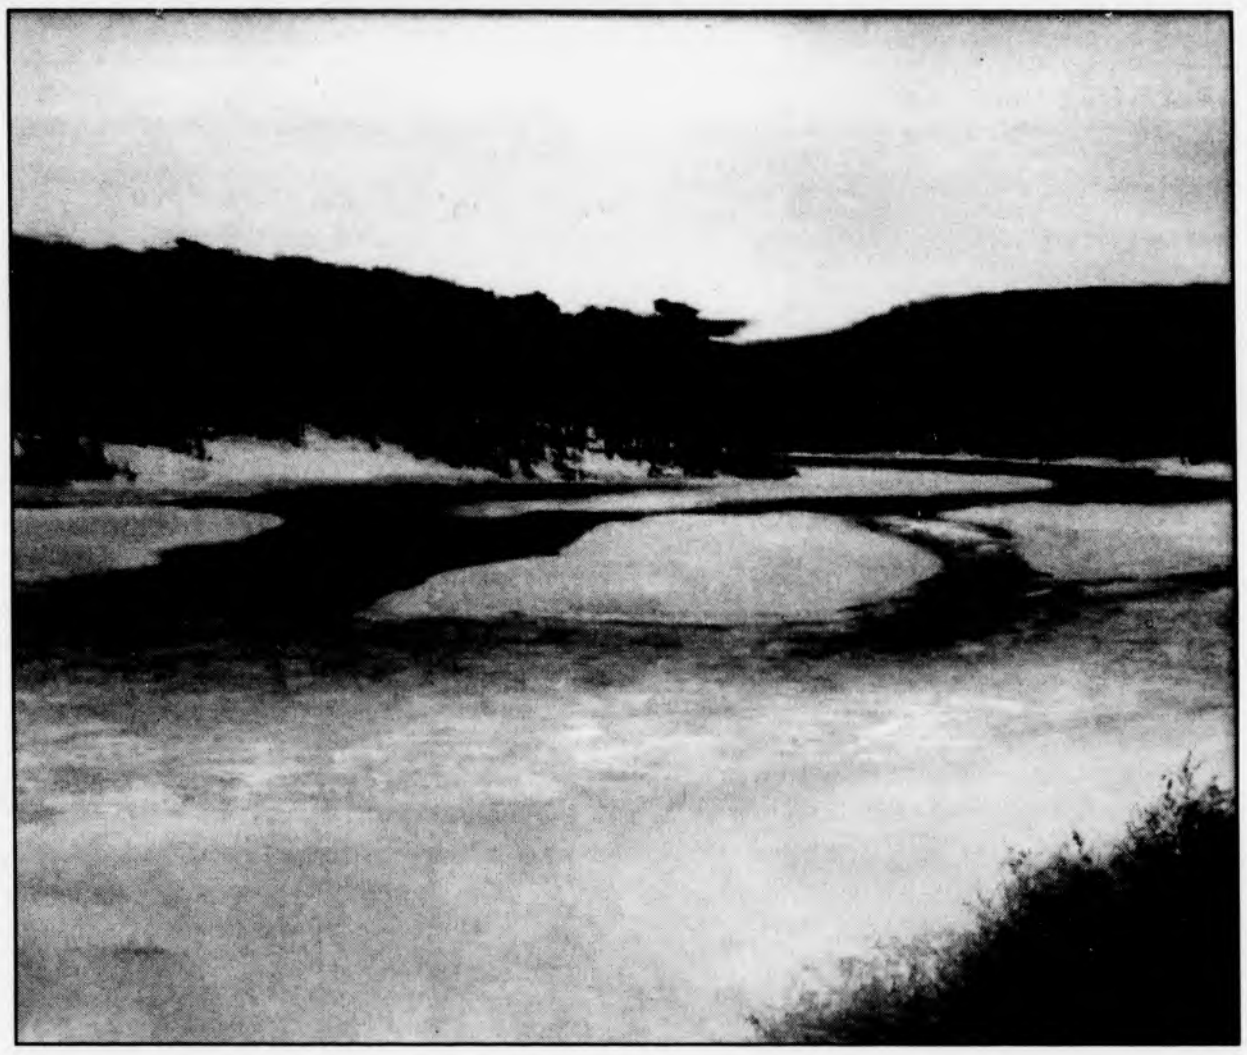
'Nature's Essence' at Christopher Gallery

The Christopher Gallery in Cohasset presents "Nature's Essence" by Jared Clackner. The public is invited to attend an opening reception Saturday, May 22, from 7 to 10 p.m. The exhibition will be displayed through July 3. All of the paintings included in the show are available for purchase.

Clackner is a plein-air landscape artist. The word "plein-air" describes artists who paint outdoors. He is inspired by working on location as a way to convey the peace and tranquillity of nature. Clackner travels to many parts of the country in pursuit of the perfect landscape. Painting the subtle colors of light and shadow, he simplifies the subject to its most poetic form. The serene environments produced by Clackner's thoughtful paint application and strong design invite the viewer to explore the world through his eyes. His paintings have been included in exhibitions all over the United States and he has had several one man shows.

Please visit the Christopher Gallery Monday through Thursday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. or Friday and Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. You can also visit us on the web at www.christophergallery.com. For more information call 1 (800) 383-1801.



"The Seasons-Winter" by Jared Clackner is on display at the Christopher Gallery

Cohasset artist at James Library

The James Gallery at the James Library and Center for the Arts will show the works of Cohasset artist Deborah Seavey during May. Seavey graduated from the Boston University School for the Arts and also attended the Massachusetts College of Art where she studied graphic design. She has worked in the graphic arts field for more than 10 years, but her true love is abstract painting. She loves the outdoors, and the earth and sky have been a natural inspiration for her art work.

The show at the James consists of mostly abstract landscapes made with acrylic and pastels on paper. The show may be viewed Monday through Friday from 2 to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The show will run to June 4.

For information, call (781) 659-7100.

Farmers market open

The 1999 Cohasset Village Farmers Market on historic Cohasset Common begins with a cowbell at 2:30 p.m. every Thursday afternoon from June 3 through mid-October.

You can purchase locally grown produce, herbs, bedding plants and perennials, specialty wreaths, baked goods, jams and jellies, flowers, handcrafted soaps and much more.

The events feature live music, pony rides, local artists and special activities.

Sponsored by Tom O'Brien Nissan, Fleet Bank, The Yoga Center, Emporium, Cohasset Hardware, Abbruzzese Family, Bed and Breakfast of Cohasset, Salt Marsh Farm, the Shoe Market, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and Aquarius Sun Rooms.

Children's drama workshop registration

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold registrations for the Children's Drama Workshop for ages 5 to 12. The workshop meets from 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday at the Cohasset High School Auditorium beginning Tuesday, June 29. There are dress rehearsals scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 5, and Monday, Aug. 9, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tentative dates for performances are Tuesday, Aug. 10, at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m., and Wednesday, Aug. 11, at 1 and 7 p.m.

The fee for the seven-week session is $195 for members of the playground program and $210 for nonmembers, with a $15 discount per additional child in each family.

Registrations for "The Lion King" will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall Monday through Thursday, June 14 through 17, from 9 a.m. to noon, 1 to 3 p.m., and Thursday evening from 5 to 7 p.m. Early registration is advised.

Cohasset artist at James Library

The James Gallery at the James Library and Center for the Arts will show the works of Cohasset artist Deborah Seavey during May. Seavey graduated from the Boston University School for the Arts and also attended the Massachusetts College of Art where she studied graphic design. The show at the James consists of mostly abstract landscapes made with acrylic and pastels on paper. The show may be viewed Monday through Friday from 2 to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The show will run to June 4.

For information, call (781) 659-7100.

Church hosts auction

The Second Congregational Church will be hosting a time and talent auction on Saturday, June 5 at 7p.m. at the church. Proceeds will go toward the church's painting fund.

There will be many items people can bid on, from two, one-hour consulting or tutoring session on how to learn to use the Internet to baked goods, to baby-sitting hours to game tickets to a chauffeured ride for four to any restaurant or function and a return ride home.

"there will be something for everyone," reports Dee Dee Perry. "People are be very generous and creative."

Luminaria service on town common

Tomorrow evening, Friday, May 28 at 8 PM around the Common Pond, the Cohasset Clergy will conduct the third annual Luminaria service to commemorate and remember those Cohasset citizens and friends who have passed away during the past year.

Formerly held on Festival Weekend in June, it was decided that Memorial Day weekend might be more appropriate. Sponsored by the Harborfest committee, this has become a wonderful memorial of those family and friends whose spirits remain close to our hearts.

Girl Scout spring registration

If you missed the girl scout sign-up, you can still sign up by mail. This sign-up is for girls who are not currently girl scouts in grades K through 12 (1999-2000 school year). If your daughter is going to kindergarten next year, we are forming Daisy troops to begin in the fall.

For more information, call Mary McElroy, 383-0505; Terry James 383-9173; or Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council (781) 251-0150.

All current girl scouts may their troop leaders for spring r tion.

Support the post-prom party

For the second year, a group of parents of senior students at Cohasset High School are planning a Post-Prom All Night Party. The first after Prom All Night Party last year was a huge success, and due to the generosity of many of Cohasset's businesses, they were able to keep the students safe. Supported by local police and organizations, this all night affair gives the students the chance to enjoy a safe and fun experience. The second Post-Prom All Night Party will be held at Cohasset High School after Prom Friday, June 4.

They would be so grateful if your business would make a donation to help make this evening a success again this year.

If you can help out, please make your company's check out to "Cohasset Post-Prom Party" and mail to: Cohasset Post-Prom Party Committee, 51 Forest Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Memorial Day has not lost its meaning

Hundreds line parade route

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

In an eloquent speech, an Army Green Beret dispelled the cynic's message that Memorial Day has lost its meaning.

Michael Leo Mahoney, a 1985 Cohasset High School graduate, said the celebration of Memorial Day that often includes a day off of work and backyard barbecues is part of what hard-fought freedom is all about.

"It is a holiday in which Americans vigorously exercise the freedoms that have been guaranteed to them in great part, through the hardships, blood and sacrifice of the veterans who have died fighting in America's Wars," said Mahoney, who gave the keynote address in Veterans' Memorial Park at Cohasset Harbor.

Earlier hundreds of residents and their families flocked to the common and lined the parade route as more than two dozen veterans led by Steve Wigmore, commander of the local American Legion post, and VFW commander Ralph Perroncello, marched by.

The parade wound its way from the Music Circus to Cohasset Central Cemetery to the World War I Memorial at the common, then on to POW Square at Depot Court and finally, the harbor.

Many followed the parade that also featured local scouts and three bands to the harbor where the crowd encircled the small park.

"What makes Cohasset so special?" Mahoney asked. "Look

Solving septic problems

Board hopes joint system becomes prototype

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

The board of health may have its first takers for the voluntary wastewater management plan it hopes to get off the ground soon.

Members expect to enact the plan – which has been in the works for about two years — once it passes muster with town counsel and the Department of Environmental Protection.

The Caravels, an upscale eight-unit condominium complex on Nichols Road, has a failed septic system that is causing a public health nuisance for abutters.

Board members are optimistic that Caravels trustees can work out a deal with Roger Wade, whose house abuts the condominium property, to construct a small wastewater treatment plant on land he owns that would solve the Caravels' problem and perhaps that of others with failing systems in the vicinity.

It could be a good deal for Wade who would receive "septic credits" — a incentive under the wastewater management plan — that could make the expense of operating a plant cost neutral or even a monetary plus, health board member Stephen Bobo explained.

The issue was the subject of a public hearing at town hall Tuesday.

"We're trying to use the Caravels and Roger Wade's property in Caravel Cove to set up a prototype of a decent wastewater treatment system," Bobo said.

The first priority is to come up with a stopgap solution to stop the flow of effluent that is percolating above the surface on a neighboring property, hindering that homeowner from being able to sell, and creating a public health problem.

The Caravels' septic system has been in failure for sometime, Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said. The condominiums did win approval from the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) for a new system. But Wade appealed the DEP decision, Godzik said, stopping the project.

But now the appeal is over and something has to be done.

Bobo said the old plan would have been a temporary solution. That's because the town is conducting a study of Little Harbor and if the results indicate high nitrogen levels as expected, then the DEP could order the town to mitigate the problem by enhancing the wastewater treatment around Little Harbor. High nitrogen levels are an indication that failing septic systems are leaching into the water.

Due to cost and limited capacity at the expanded Elm Street treatment plant, there are no plans to add the 250 homes that surround Little Harbor to the Central Cohasset sewer

Town to purchase energy regionally

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Saving money anyway possible is fast-becoming the prime directive for town hall. First, the $766,000 override went down in flames in April. Then voters approved only the smallest $380,000 override at last month's second override election in two months. The message from voters is clear. Town officials must find ways to save money and rein in the town's soaring tax rate. Enter Mun-energy.

"We'll save a significant amount on the new Osgood School, which has gas heat. We'll also save on streetlights and electricity for municipal and school buildings."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

Town Manager Mark Haddad signed a contract last week to enroll Cohasset in a municipal energy purchasing program coordinated by the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA). About 76 cities and towns have enrolled in the program to pool resources and take advantage of energy deregulation.

Deregulation of the utility industry is expected to result in significant savings to consumers by increasing competition. Deregulation allows consumers to purchase energy from competing companies instead of public utilities. Energy companies from all over the country are expected

THIS WEEK IN COHASSET

Community blood drive

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, June 23. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House at 23 North Main St. from 2 to 7 p.m. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3 to 5 p.m. The Red Cross depends on regular donations to meet the ongoing need for blood and blood by-products.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset, so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and especially needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time, or if you have any questions, call Carol Riley at 383-6215 or Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

League of Women Voters holds meeting

At its recent annual meeting, the Hingham League of Women Voters, which includes Cohasset members, expressed support for state legislation that would expand a pilot program giving help to first-time mothers under 21.

The speaker for the meeting was Nina Leek, program director of Health Care of Southeastern Massachusetts, based in the former Hingham VNA building at 10 Downer Ave.

Leek said, the Blue Hills Healthy Families Program, which she directs, helps both single and married mothers with home visits from counselors who offer advice on issues including parenting, referrals, medical care and child development. The program serves 13 communities from Quincy to Norwood.

Leek said the young mothers being assisted by the Young Mothers Program benefit in ways that can be measured throughout the life of their child

Leek graduated from Keele University, England, and taught in England and Belgium, working with special needs students. She is a volunteer at Hingham High School with the drama club and the American Field Service.

The Hingham League voted to support Senate Bill S635, which would create a home visiting program for newborns. For information about this legislation, or to join the League, call Ellen Rossano at (781) 740-8703.

Another NDA senior killed in tragic accident

Class of '99 to graduate Sunday

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

High school commencement is supposed to be a time to celebrate the beginning of the next step for students who have spent the past four years sharing, growing and learning together.

And at Notre Dame Academy starting at 1 p.m. on Sunday, 121 young women will receive their diplomas amidst the pomp and circumstance, and tradition that the Catholic girls' school is known for.

But the young women of the NDA Class of '99 are also forever bound by tragic events too profound for most to understand.

Last Friday, Katherine "Kate" Gaughan was struck by a car near her home in Quincy. The 17-year-old NDA senior died the following day at Boston Medical Center.

In September, Colleen Clancy and Erin Darling, both NDA seniors, and Colleen's younger sister Allison, a freshman, were killed in a car accident on a rain slick road in Pembroke on the girls' way to school. A passenger, Shannon Courtney, also a senior, was hospitalized.

Kate was just minutes from her home at about 10:40 p.m. Friday when she and a friend crossed Newport Avenue, a street that runs parallel to Hancock Street and alongside the MBTA tracks. Police suspect the girls crossed the northbound lanes reaching the island halfway across the four-lane roadway at its intersection with Beale Street when the light changed. Then a southbound motorist, who had the green light, stopped and likely signaled to the girls to continue on across.

"They crossed in front of that car," said Quincy Police Chief Thomas Frane. "Then a vehicle approaching the light in the outside lane struck one of the young ladies.

For the second time this school year, the sign outside the entrance to the driveway at NDA is decorated to memorialize a student who was killed in an accident. In September, three girls were killed and a fourth injured in a car crash in Pembroke. Kate Gaughan died Saturday following injuries she suffered in a pedestrian/car accident in Quincy.

"Unfortunately, some want to give pedestrians the right of way and unknowingly direct them into traffic," Frane said.

He explained that due to the incline of the road and the stopped vehicle, the other driver, Kim Cheney of Braintree, could not have seen the girls.

"She had no chance to see them," he said. "It was a tragic accident."

Frane said Cheney was obeying the light and he did not expect that any citation would be issued. Speed was not a factor, he said.

The news of Kate's death stunned everyone at NDA, which is in an idyllic setting tucked well away off Hingham's busy Main Street.

The student support team was called together Saturday afternoon to discuss what had happened and to reflect what the week's activities might be. Seniors finished exams last Wednesday and this week, known as "senior week," was intended to be full of events leading up to Sunday's graduation. Fr. Robert Monagle of St. Joseph's in Quincy celebrated a liturgy which many attended at 5 p.m. Saturday, said Patricia Bologna, library media director at the school. Then the support team met on Sunday with the senior class officers and advisors when more complete information about Kate's wake and funeral were available. It was decided to postpone the prom and modify some of the senior week activities, she explained.

Faculty and the administration met at 7 a.m. Tuesday morning following the Memorial Day holiday to pray and support one another.

"The faculty had worked so hard with the senior class to really help them grieve," said Sr. Barbara Barry, NDA principal, about the accident last fall. "We are almost empty, there is almost nothing left.

"But we prayed together this morning and held each other up so we can administer to these girls again."

Later that morning, the entire school gathered in a prayer service to commemorate the fun-loving senior, who played soccer, was in the honor society and was a prom queen, at last year's junior prom. The campus ministry of which Kate was a member organized the service.

"Many of Kate's friends from Quincy were there as well," Bologna said. "There was a very strong presence today which shows what a wonderful spirit Kate had. She was a remarkable young woman.

"She had a tremendous sense of humor, she was charming, polite and a wonderful young person."

Bologna said Kate's parents attended the prayer service. Kate's NDA gold medallion necklace — a symbol of the bond that NDA women share — was presented to Kate's mother at the service. The seniors will receive the medallions at the baccalaureate tomorrow (Friday) evening. Kate had planned to attend Stonehill College.

> "We are almost empty, there is almost nothing left. But we prayed together this morning and held each other up so we can administer to these girls again."
> — Sr. Barbara Barry, NDA principal

Classes for underclassmen were conducted but there was no school today (Thursday) due to Kate's funeral.

Bologna said the seniors were handling the tragic news as best they could.

"It is a very difficult event in anyone's life and it is more difficult for young people," she said. "But remember this is a religious school.

"We believe we do not walk alone and the promise of resurrection is an important promise for all of us."

A 16-year-old NDA junior who asked that her name not be used said students made white ribbons for Kate. They made yellow and blue ribbons when the other girls died.

The junior said some of her friends at public school told her NDA is lucky to be able to conduct a prayer service.

"At other schools, there is just a moment of silence," she said.

Sr. Barbara said the Class of '99 has developed a strong bond with the class of 1974, the 25th anniversary class. Ironically, in a similar situation, that class lost two of its members, she said.

"The class has told the seniors, 'we're here for you,' they've given out their phone numbers and served as mentors," Sr. Barbara said.

Vote on Scituate tower expected tonight

Abutters in Scituate and Cohasset oppose project

By Frank DiCesare
STAFF WRITER

The town's planning board is expected to vote tonight on a special permit to erect a 180-foot cell tower on Route 3A near the Scituate -Cohasset town line.

In response to concerns raised by planning board officials and residents in both towns, Scituate planning board chairman William Limbacher said the board will take a closer look at the application submitted by Tower Ventures of Providence, R.I.

Tower Ventures plans to construct the tower on a 40 X 70 foot easement located on a one-acre parcel of land adjacent to Cohasset Collision Center. According to town planner Laura Harbottle, the cell tower will be set back 134 feet from Route 3A. Its size could accommodate a maximum number of six cellular or personal communication services which could use as many as 12 antennas on large triangular brackets. Tower Ventures will build a stockade fence around the tower's base to hide four storage buildings. Three of these "pads" would serve as shelters for in which communication companies would store their transmitting equipment, Harbottle said. Tower Ventures representatives said AT&T and Cellular One have already voiced interest in locating their equipment on the proposed site.

Tower Ventures plans to construct the tower on a 40 X 70 foot easement located on a one-acre parcel of land adjacent to Cohasset Collision Center.

Abutters in both towns packed two previous hearings on the proposal, voicing opposition for aesthetic and public safety reasons. Last week, residents from the Ledgewood Farms subdivision and Gannett Pasture Lane areas submitted a petition signed by more than 200 Scituate and Cohasset residents, opposing the tower's proposed site. Opponents say the tower will impact property values, cause health problems, leaving abutters with a potentially dangerous eyesore.

Limbacher stressed that the issue before the planning board is not the tower's proposed location but its compliance with the town's wireless overlay law. He said the board's vote will stem from the degree to which the proposed tower complies with requirements set forth in the wireless overlay bylaw.

"We will take a vote and get a sense of where the board will stand on the application," Limbacher said. "It is a site application and, therefore, it will require four positive votes from the board for special permit to be granted."

Land-taking for water tank is finalized

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

It's official. As of May 26 at 10 a.m., the water commission assumed ownership of a half-acre of land on Scituate Hill for a new water tank. Although the water commission voted to take the land by eminent domain on May 19, the taking was not completed until town counsel's office filed legal papers with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds on May 26. Water Commission Chairman John K. McNabb Jr. said the water commissioners could file their plans for a height variance with the zoning board of appeals as soon as tomorrow.

The water commission paid $52,000 for the land and an additional 1/2-acre of land for a temporary construction easement. By law, the water commission had to place the money into an account for the former landowner, J. Michael Susi and Sons. McNabb said Susi has requested access to the account to claim its money.

The taking puts the water commission on track to build the second tank by December, 2000. McNabb said the water commissioners need three approvals to begin construction. The ZBA must give the water commission a variance from the town's 35-foot height limit to build the 65 foot-high tank. The planning board must approve the site plans. The Department of Environmental Protection also has to sign-off on the project.

Still unresolved is the status of negotiations for an access road on an adjacent parcel of land owned by Paul Barry. Originally, Barry wanted to trade a 1/2-acre parcel of land for two free connections to a water main that will run under the access road. McNabb said that negotiations stalled until the water commission threatened to also take that land by eminent domain. Barry has hinted that he now wants to sell the land to the water commission, McNabb said.

The water commission has been attempting to find a spot for a new water tank since 1997. Two years ago, town meeting approved a request by the water commission for $1.4 million to build a new 2 million gallon water tank on Bear Hill next to the town's only other tank. But residents living in the shadow of Bear Hill vigorously protested the construction of another tank in their neighborhood. Opponents of the Bear Hill site suggested the town place the second tank on Scituate Hill, which overlooks Route 3A. Initially, the water commission opposed Scituate Hill because it would cost more than the $1.4 million approved by town meeting, and result in construction delays while engineers surveyed the land.

Last year, town meeting approved an extra $200,000 for the tank so the water commission could have the option to purchase or take land on Scituate Hill. Currently, the water commission is estimating the cost of the Scituate Hill tank at less than $1.1 million, although the final price could be higher depending on construction costs.

Members of the water commission say the town needs a new tank to take the other unit out of service for cleaning, and to provide more fire reserves for large fires or when water reserves drop below average levels in hot summer months.

Summer water construction on tap

The water commission is preparing to kick off its summer construction season today by replacing an old water main on Ripley Road. The replacement is part of an eight street water main replacement project that will run from June to December.

Voters at the 1997 annual town meeting and the 1998 fall special town meeting approved funding for the water project. On May 13, the water commission awarded the contract to Tiffany equipment and Construction. The new pipes will increase water flows and provide better water quality.

The project will begin on Ripley Road with the replacement of 1,600 feet of existing four and six-inch pipe with 10-inch pipe. Seven other roads will receive new water mains. Workers will install 250 feet of eight-inch pipe on Scofield Road. King Street will receive 1,300 feet of 12-inch pipe from North Main Street to Route 3A. On Smith Street, workers will replace 620 feet of eight-inch pipe and replace 590 feet of six-inch pipe with eight-inch pipe. Cushing Road is slated to receive 315 feet of eight-inch pipe. Spring Street will receive 360 feet of eight-inch pipe. On Norman Todd Road, from Todd Lane west to Beechwood Street, workers will install 740 feet of eight-inch pipe. Workers will install 4,400 feet of new 10-inch pipe on Church Street.

Volunteers are needed

The town is in need of a number of volunteers. There is a vacancy on the Government Structure Committee that must be filled. Two associates are needed for the Conservation Committee. Three citizens-at-large are needed to fill vacancies on the Call Firefighters Committee. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 if you are interested in serving.

The DESIGNING WOMAN
by Kathleen Fox ASID

NICE AND CUSHY

When shopping for upholstered furniture, it pays to consider the shape of the cushions. Generally, there are two types of upholstered cushions: T or L-shaped cushions and square cushions. T and L-shaped cushions are shaped in accordance with their names. When fit to single cushion seating, T-cushions fit around both arms. Thus, they can be turned over to promote more even wear of the fabric. And, when a sofa is outfitted with an L-cushion on each side and a square cushion in the middle, they may also be flipped - provided that the patterns on their tops and bottoms match precisely. As for square cushions, they afford the greater flexibility of being able to be both flipped and rotated.

A comfortable and beautiful sofa can create an inviting living room in which to relax or entertain guests. From furniture and accessory coordination and placement to the selection of window treatments, THE DESIGNING WOMAN can help you create the home of your dreams. Often, there are few elements in an interior that need to be invented or purchased to improve a room's appeal. Call us at 383-6411 to arrange a convenient appointment.

HINT: Both T and L-cushions tend to fit more tightly on a frame than square upholstered cushions.

Joint system could solve septic problems district.

The cost of putting in the system on Wade's property is estimated at $400,000 and would be paid for privately by users at a cost of about $30,000 per unit over a 20-year period. It is possible that state subsidized loans might be available to the homeowners. It is cheaper to build the system privately because municipalities have to pay prevailing union wages driving up the cost of a project.

"Our wastewater plan provides for credits given to someone who uses his land for the other people's wastewater treatment," Bobo explained. The board envisions the town taking over the management and operation of the plant, which could serve the Caravels, Wade's property that includes a small apartment building, and possibly other homes nearby.

"The owner would be furnished a credit on his bill for the cost of operating the plant," Bobo said. The cost would be based on the amount of water a property uses.

And if Wade is given a groundwater discharge permit from the DEP because the plant provides tertiary treatment, he could sell the treated water for landscaping purposes, another perk, Godzik said.

In the interim until details can be hashed out, the health board told Bob White, Caravels trustee, that the condominiums had two weeks to come up with a plan to stop the flow of effluent onto abutting properties. That could involve installing a tight tank or repairing the system if that would solve the problem, Godzik said.

to compete locally for energy dollars. Cities and towns that combine into purchasing cooperatives can achieve even greater savings because companies would receive access to all the municipalities in the buying bloc in exchange for additional discounts.

"We are expecting to save 10 percent on our gas and electric bills," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "We'll save a significant amount on the new Osgood School, which has gas heat. We'll also save on streetlights and electricity for municipal and school buildings."

With gas and electric bills that can easily run into the tens-of-thousands of dollars, any savings is important to help the town cope with the current budget problems.

The MMA has chosen a company called National Energy Choice (NEC) to purchase gas and electricity for communities in Mun-energy. NEC has also agreed to help the cities and towns in Mun-energy conduct energy audits to find additional methods of saving money on energy costs. Haddad said the program comes at a good time for Cohasset.

"The savings we will achieve through Mun-energy will help us offset budget shortfalls in other areas of our budget," Haddad said. "It shows that when municipalities work together, they can save significant amounts of money. This will also serve as a testing ground for us to consider other regional projects in the future."

Selectman Ronnie McMorris pointed out that there aren't that many opportunities to save money through regional purchasing, and Cohasset should take advantage of such programs whenever possible.

"This programs shows that we pursue these opportunities whenever possible to save money for the town," McMorris said.

Dump closure plan inadequate, officials say

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The owners of the Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill have submitted their closure and post-closure plans to the Department of Environmental Protection for approval. Some people might think the closure plan signals the end of the town's battles with CHL over environmental damage and legal problems, but that's not the case. Several public officials and private citizens have assailed the closure plan as inadequate. The anti-landfill group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE), the board of selectmen, and the water commission are all asking DEP Commissioner Lauren Liss to conduct public hearings about the closure plan. DEP is not required by state law to hold any hearings.

SAFE plans to meet with the members of the board of health on June 8 to ask them to also send a letter to DEP requesting the hearing on the closure plan. SAFE, the selectmen and the water commission all want DEP to hold a public hearing in Cohasset, accept public comments for 30 days after the hearing, and respond to all public comments in writing.

SAFE also plans to push the health board to begin site assignment hearings, which were originally scheduled to begin one year ago on June 8, 1998. The site assignment hearings have been postponed so that the town's CHL-subcommittee can work out a closure plan with the owners of the landfill. The CHL-subcommittee meets only in closed-door sessions and its members refuse to discuss any details of their meetings over the past year with CHL-owner Paul Barry and his attorneys.

SAFE plans to meet with the members of the board of health on June 8 to ask them to also send a letter to DEP requesting the hearing on the closure plan.

"SAFE is on the move again," said John K. McNabb Jr., vice president of SAFE. "The closure plan is not the last word on this because there are still millions of tons of landfill sitting there with the potential to contaminate our water supply."

McNabb said DEP's regulations require the state agency to approve CHL's closure within 60 days unless it is inadequate or administratively incomplete. CHL filed the plan on April 12, which means DEP's decision is due June 12.

McNabb said SAFE is unhappy with several aspects of the closure plan. SAFE wants CHL to dig a diversion trench around the entire facility to prevent leachate from seeping into wetlands and the Lily Pond Watershed.

The group is dissatisfied with CHL's passive methane gas collection plan. McNabb pointed out that landfills generate large quantities of explosive and foul-smelling methane gas as the material in the dump decomposes. McNabb pointed out that a study of the landfill has shown a large pocket of potentially explosive methane building under the landfill. SAFE wants CHL to install an active collection system to prevent odors and explosive pockets of methane.

SAFE also believes CHL should reconfigure its drainage plan to prevent silt and surface water runoff from transporting material off the landfill and into environmentally sensitive areas.

McNabb said SAFE also is not certain that CHL is offering adequate financial assurances as required by state law for the 30-year closure period. He said CHL is supposed to hold a certain amount of money in reserve as insurance against future damages. But the closure plan contains a vague reference implying that CHL is already using that money for current closure activities.

"SAFE is also exploring legal avenues to get rid of the entire landfill," McNabb said. "There are ways it can be potentially done. It is illegal and it is in a watershed. We haven't decided on a strategy yet, but we will meet on Sunday night to discuss that."

CHL appeals are pending

Attorneys for the board of health are asking an appeals court to throw out an attempt by CHL to overturn a landcourt decision upholding the town's denial of the landfill's Area V expansion. In April, 1998, Judge Isaac Borenstein upheld the health board's decision to deny CHL's proposed area V expansion. In July, 1998, CHL filed a notice of intent to appeal Borenstein's decision. Attorneys for CHL have not followed up on that notice, and on May 25, attorneys for the health board filed a motion to dismiss the appeal. SAFE Vice President John K. McNabb Jr. said CHL has failed to pay the docket fee needed to pursue the appeal. He said CHL has some time to respond to the motion for dismissal.

CHL has also announced its intention to appeal a court decision declaring the landfill's special permit to operate invalid, McNabb said. CHL announced its intention to appeal in February, but has not yet filed its appeals' brief. Right before the brief was due, CHL, the town and the court agreed to a two-month delay so the CHL-subcommittee could maintain negotiations. McNabb said he is eager to see the substance of CHL's appeal of the invalidation of the special permit.

CHL cannot legally operate without a special permit. Last year, McNabb discovered that CHL had never filed the permit with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, effectively invalidating the document.

WHIRLWIND WEEK

Jeff, Taffy and Jay Nothnagle reported a whirlwind week: first they flew to California where Melissa received her MD degree from the University of California at San Francisco Medical College. Melissa is a 1989 graduate of Cohasset High School and Class of 1993 at Brown University. She will begin her residency in family practice in Providence in June.

Two days later David, CHS Class of 1995, received his BA degree from Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N.Y. His major was psychology and sociology. After he and Melissa drive across the country, he will begin work at Brown Brothers Harriman's Boston office.

Congratulations to you all and may we add that we are proud of you and all of your efforts! We know that you will be successful in whatever you do!

BC HIGH HONOR ROLL

Boston College High School has announced its third term honor roll, and the following Cohasset residents have "made the grade." Graduation year 1999: High Honors, Benjamin T. Smoot; Honors, Robert C. Morgan; Graduation year 2001: Honors, John R. Crowley-Buck, Andrew Kinch; Graduation year 2002: High Honors, Christopher J. Carr; Honors, Joel R. Carpenter.

Great work everyone, we applaud you!

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

Happy birthday greetings go to Ann Pompeo!

The Master of Science in Public Affairs Class of 1999 from the John W. McCormack Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Massachusetts Boston is celebrating their graduation, and Cohasset's own Fred Koed will be among the graduates!

Congratulations to you, Fred, and might we add that we are truly lucky to have you as a selectman in our town! You should be very proud of yourself and all of your efforts!

SPEECH COMPETITION

The Milton Academy Speech Team has exciting news about a member, Cohasset resident and junior Liz Myers. She has been selected by the Boston Diocese National Catholic Forensic League to compete at the NCFL National Speech

UNH GRADUATE

The University of New Hampshire held its commencement ceremony May 22, and Jessica Aronson of 40 Cedar Acres Lane received her BA with her major in psychology. She is the daughter of Miriam and Paul Aronson, who are very proud of Jessica as we all are.

TERM IN ECUADOR

Nicole Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peterson of Cohasset and a junior at William Smith College, spent her winter term in Ecuador. The college's program is based at The Andean Center for Latin American Studies in Quito, and focuses on the geography and history of the Andes, the culture of Latin America and on Third World urbanization. Students take intensive language courses as well as a variety of other topics taught in English by the resident directors. The program also includes trips to the Galapagos Islands and to Peru. Students live with local host families.

Nathaniel was born at 10:46 a.m., he weighed 7 lbs. 9 ozs., and was 21.5 inches long. His maternal grandmother is Mrs. Gail W. Jessup of Newton; his paternal grandmother is Mrs. Diane J. Purdy of Cranford, N.J. We congratulate you on your precious little bundle of love!

ONE MORE COLLEGE

Last week we gave you a list of colleges that CHS seniors have been accepted to; it was a very impressive one, our schools deserve a round of applause! Here is an additional college to add, Connecticut College.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

All of us remember with love Frank and Ann Evans, formerly of Fair Oaks Lane — boy, do they have super news! On June 4 they will celebrate their 50th anniversary! How are they celebrating? If you know them, the answer is obvious — with their children, their spouses and their 19 grandchildren (35 in all!) They will be going on a cruise with the whole gang at the end of June. We know they will have a great time; we hope they know how much we love and miss them . . . and that we will be thinking of them on their special day!

Jobs await the Class of '99

Envy is often a quiet accompaniment to graduation ceremonies. Those who only dimly remember their school days envy the youth, the energy and the wide-open possibilities spread out like a banquet before the graduates.

This year, there's something else we can envy about the Class of '99: signing bonuses, stock options and the priceless experience of being fought over by personnel departments.

This year's job market is even better than last year's, according to the National Association of College Placement Officers. Salaries are expected to average from the low $20,000 range to the mid-$40,000 level.

"This is an absolutely phenomenal job market," said Christine Babson, associate director for undergraduate career development at Babson College in Wellesley.

That's heartening for students and for their parents, many of whom had the opposite experience, graduating in time of recession. The economic boom is especially loud in MetroWest, and it's music to the ears of graduates of our fine high schools and colleges.

But even more remarkable is the effect of the economic expansion on those who have historically had the toughest time breaking into the labor market: young black men. A new study of low-wage men in 322 metropolitan areas shows that black men aged 16-24 with a high school education or less are working in greater numbers, earning bigger paychecks - and committing fewer crimes.

Nowhere is this more evident than in areas where unemployment has been below 4 percent since 1992, according to the study, authored by Harvard's Richard B. Freeman and William M. Rodgers 3rd of William and Mary. There, the number of young, less-educated black men who are working has jumped from 52 percent to 64 percent. Uniformly, the gains for young black men outstripped the gains for all young men, including whites, or for older workers.

They aren't the only ones who benefit from companies forced by a tight job market to go the extra mile to recruit and train workers. Half of all single mothers, including many young black women, are now working, compared to a third at the start of the decade.

These findings offer ammunition to those on both sides of several ideological divides. Liberals can argue that is lack of opportunity that holds back the underclass, not lack of discipline or values. Conservatives can give credit to welfare reform and can take heart that it is the private sector making long-awaited progress on persistent poverty, not government jobs programs.

But while the economy is the engine of job creation and a job is the cornerstone of family and neighborhood security, the individual stories of young workers give credit to schools, churches and all the social programs that have played a role in their success. The numbers further indicate there is much work still to do: Even with the gains, the jobless rate among young black men is twice that of young white men.

A job is still the best social welfare program, and the most important step into adulthood, whether you are a freshly-cashiered college grad or a high school dropout. We should consider it a blessing to have so many jobs waiting for the Class of '99.

[Rick Holmes writes for the MetroWest Daily News, a CNC publication.]

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Opposed to circus location

MR. MERLE BROWN, CHAIRMAN
COHASSET BOARD OF SELECTMEN
DEAR MERLE:

This letter is in regards to the request of the Chamber of Commerce to hold a circus on Cohasset Common. Let me say at the outset that I am not against the circus. Just the location.

I am writing this letter as a resident, and as the original Chairman of the Cohasset Common Historic District Study Commission, and Chairman of the Historic District Committee for the first seven years.

Elephants on Cohasset Common! What an outrage. Is one of the most beautiful parts of Cohasset relegated to being a platform for a circus? How can the Board of Selectmen even consider this? And I'm not just against elephants. It is the entire idea of a circus being held on an area of town that is a historic district.

What possible benefits will the residents of Cohasset receive by having this event take place on the Common? The most obvious place to hold the circus would be in the town parking lot or the parking lot at the old Osgood School.

I hope that when this comes before the Selectmen June 8, that if you approve the circus it will be in a location other than the Common.

Peter J. Wood
77 Summer St.

Editor's note: Mr. Wood provided the Mariner with a copy of his letter for publication.

Stuck between a rock and a cell tower

TO THE EDITOR:

Since the Telecommunications Act of 1996, towns across the country have been put in an extremely difficult position. According to federal law, planning boards must address without discrimination requests from Wireless Communications Carriers for Special Permits to erect wireless communications towers; yet, at the same time, these boards must respond fairly to the reaction and concerns over safety and environmental impacts from the residents and business owners that neighbor the proposed tower sites. To avoid being put in such a difficult situation and to protect the interests of the town and its residents, Scituate had the foresight last year to adopt zoning by-laws to govern the town's Wireless Communications Overlay District. Yet, it appears that the Scituate Planning Board is "stuck" in their review of the request before them for a special permit to erect an 180-foot lattice-style tower on the property located at 1010 Chief Justice Cushing Highway/Route 3A at the Scituate/Cohasset line. The question is "Why?"

The purpose of By-law 540 reads, "the Wireless Communications Overlay District is intended to minimize adverse visual impacts of wireless communication towers, to avoid potential damage of detrimental impact on adjoining properties, to limit any health, safety and environmental impacts, and to maximize the use of existing wireless communications towers, personal wireless service facilities and their accessory structures."

Unfortunately for the applicants, Omnipoint Communications and Tower Ventures, Inc., the proposed site — which is in a valley, the proposed setback — which is only 134 feet away from Route 3A and 63 feet from the next property, and the proposed height — which at 180+ feet looms over residential homes and existing tree-lines, render this potential wireless communications tower as having adverse visual impacts and detrimental impact on adjoining properties. Denying the special permit on this basis only means that the applicants did not do their homework when they selected this particular site; it does not mean that the planning board or local community is not open to other sites that have less adverse impact within the allowed district (such as the Rod and Gun Club).

And, as for the landlords in this case who seem to be driving this whole process — not the carriers — as evidenced in the application on file, they should be reminded (as should the planning board) that the Telecommunications Act of 1996 provides them with no remedy. The purpose of the federal law is to promote free market competition among the wireless communications carriers; it says nothing about protecting the interests of agreeable landlords.

So the question again is "why should the Scituate Planning Board feel 'stuck between a rock and a cell tower'?"

The decision whether or not to grant the special permit in accordance with the town's by-law and the Telecommunications Act of 1996 is quite clear.

COHASSET CARES

Dump stories

(A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by the Cohasset Recycling Committee).

As we reminded ourselves in our May 20 newsletter, dumps are a thing of the past! What was formerly referred to, no doubt negatively, as "The Dump" here in Cohasset, is now the Recycling Transfer Facility. Some upgrade! But our RTF is more than a euphemism, more than a sophisticated-sounding, culturally-correct, impressive, technologically-updated label with which we can proudly match any neighboring community's facility. Let's hear it for Cohasset's RTF! After all, we're the home of Arthur Lehr, winner of the Massachusetts Recycling Coalition's Mass-Recycle Municipal Recycling Volunteer of the Year Award!

Quite seriously, Cohasset is doing an excellent job with its recycling. But we can do even better. There's room for improvement. Continuing our story and speaking of room:

Cohasset RECYCLING TRANSFER Facility
Cohasset Cares to Recycle Everything

Since we ran out of burying space, we truly required a transfer station, a waystation for collecting and sorting all our S T U F F which, we have found, is recyclable for the good of the planet and for the good of our tax situation.

In actuality, some of our STUFF is recycled at present and some we must pay to have hauled away. Newspapers right now, for example, are a glut on the market, and our area of the country does not have adequate facilities for recycling them. Our technology has yet to catch up with the rate at which we discard.

Cardboard, however, in all its forms, is not only recyclable but profitable for Cohasset. Most Cohasset residents do not realize, for example, that ALL cardboard — not just corrugated — goes into the cardboard bin to the right as you drive up, along with brown bags. Yes, our brown bags go in with the cardboard also — not with newspapers, please. We pressure-pack all our cardboard on site at Cedar Street — cereal boxes [please remove inner waxed pouches], tissue boxes and rolls [those center rolls inside paper towels and toilet tissue], processed food boxes, and so on. But not waxed boxes [i.e. orange juice and milk]. The big bales are wire-bound here and then shipped off to make new cardboard cartons.

Wow! Time's up! We had intended to share some real dump stories, you know, shooting rats and so on, but there's so much to say first. Next time we'll try to start with the desert first. Something to ponder . . . with few trees and very little grass, why did Nantucket recently complete construction of its huge new composting facility? More later on other towns' recycling efforts. See you next time.

Coming up in the Children's Room promises a summer full of prizes and fun! More later when the program begins.

Fast facts

Statistics released from the Board of Library Commissioners report the following:

• In 1997, the average public library expenditure in Massachusetts was $24 per person. The average cost of a hardcover book was $50. If each resident had purchased the average number of books borrowed from the public libraries that year, that cost would have been more than $400 per person. Public Libraries — A Great Investment!

• On average, only 1.25 percent of municipal general funds are expended for public library service in this state.

• People borrowed nearly 47 million books and other materials from public libraries in 1997. That's nearly eight books for each resident in the state. In Cohasset, it represents more than 13 books per capita in 1998.

• In 1997, people made more than 19 million visits to public libraries in Massachusetts.

Hays Office is gone with the wind

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I learned the other day that Hollywood censors were paid $5,000 to let Clark Gable say a four-letter swearword, as in "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn," in the movie "Gone With the Wind."

So that's what started it all.

I was apprised of this shortly after I watched a picture called "Boogie Nights" on Cinemax, which was filled with four-letter Anglo-Saxon functional verbs, and Roller Girl, buck naked, jumped the bones of Mark Wahlberg on the couch right in my living room.

I grew up in a time when a shapely 19-year-old Austrian actress named Hedy Kiesler bathed for 10 minutes in the nude on film in long distance camera shots in a picture called "Ecstasy." I think I saw it six times, the last two with binoculars.

Maybe that's what's going to end it all.

I grew up in a time when a shapely 19-year-old Austrian actress named Hedy Kiesler bathed for 10 minutes in the nude on film in long distance camera shots in a picture called "Ecstasy."

I think I saw it six times, the last two with binoculars.

Hedy later came to the states, changed her name to Hedy Lamarr and made a number of pictures with the likes of Charles Boyer and Victor Mature. I know. I saw them all but she never did it again.

Hollywood at the time operated under the scrutiny of Will Hays, a former postmaster general, who headed something called the Hays Office which judged whether or not we were up to viewing a picture that could rouse our prurient interest, whatever that is.

The aim of the Motion Pictures Producers and Distributors of America, according to Hays, was "establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production."

The Hays Office, which was most concerned with sex and kindred love-making since movies didn't talk in those days, was founded in 1922 to combat such films as "The Kiss Between May Irwin and John Rice."

"Their unbridled kissing, magnified to gargantuan proportions and repeated thrice, is absolutely loathsome," said one critic.

All the things that the MPPDA objected to were eventually codified in 1930 and the association's seal of approval for a picture depended on how it handled crime, brutality and sex. Vulgarity, obscenity, profanity and blasphemy were banned outright.

The Hays Office maintained such a tight rein on films that an actor and actress could not sleep in the same bed, even if they were man and wife.

The code was amended in 1947 to ban portrayals of "notorious criminals" unless they ultimately paid the price of their crimes. Four years later, references to venereal disease, abortion or drugs were forbidden.

Ten years later, the Hays Office began rowing back. The ban on depiction of homosexuality or lesbianism in films was lifted as long as it was presented "discretely and tastefully."

The Code collapsed altogether in 1966 when the MPPDA decided that:

"Brutality, illicit sex, indecent exposure, vulgar or profane words and gestures . . . are noted as subjects for restraint but interpretation, in all cases . . . including nudity, is left to the discretion of the administrators."

Which enabled me to stay up late with a glass of Cianti Classico and a bowl of popcorn, watching a film called "Boogie Nights" — without binoculars.

Memorial Day has not lost its meaning around you! You don't have to watch an old-time movie starring Jimmy Stewart. You don't have to listen to patriotic songs by John Philip Souza and you don't have to view a painting by Norman Rockwell.

"...You will not find a better portrait of Americana or a better example of all that is good in a community than you see around you today," he said.

"From the motley collection of veterans that pull together to march, almost in step, to the Deer Hill Band that plays its uniquely perfect rendition of The Star Spangled Banner," Mahoney said. "From the young kids scrambling to pick up the hot shell casings of the firing squad, to the beautiful flower girls throwing lilacs into the harbor in tribute. From the children perched on their parents' shoulders waving American flags to the flags of the 50 states waving above the crowd.

"All of these show the fabric of this community in a way that you don't see everyday," he said.

Wigmore and Perroncello each thanked the crowd for turning out for the festivities that took place under a cloudless sky.

They also noted the passing of three veterans this past year, John L. Williams, T. Gerard Keating and Raymond C. Buckley, and the loss of Mary Grassie, a member of the ladies auxiliary and great friend of the American Legion.

Father John Mulvehill of St. Anthony's gave the invocation and prayed for peace.

And veteran Joe Hamilton read "In Flanders Fields," a poem written by a soldier during World War I.

STAFF PHOTOS/DOUG MDFADD

Steve and Tom Wigmore place a wreath at Veterans Memorial Park at the harbor.

Mahoney, a graduate of Harvard and Dartmouth medical school, asked the audience to reflect on the 1900s.

"We have come to the end of the bloodiest and most violent century in recorded history," he said. "If there is one lesson that the past 100 years has shown is, it is that we live in a world that can be brutal and unforgiving.

"Because of this men and women of Cohasset will continue to be called upon to defend our country, its citizens and those around the world who are unable to defend themselves. It is our hope, however, that there will come a time when the number of names on the wall behind me will cease to grow."

Capping off the day was a well-attended barbecue with free drinks, hot dogs and hamburgers, on the grounds of the Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island. The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, a non-profit group, sponsored the event.

Festival on the Common is June 18-20

The South Shore Art Center presents the 44th annual Festival on the Common, Father's Day Weekend, June 18-20. Held on the Cohasset Common, the festival includes art exhibitions, demonstrations, children's tent, juried craft artisans, a food court and musical entertainment. Along with the Festival on the Common the Second Congregational Church will hold its annual Strawberry Festival.

This year the Art Center has worked diligently over the winter and spring to recruit new fine studio craft artisans for the festival. Craft artists will be coming from around the United States. Along with more than 75 juried craft artisans, there will be artists' demonstrations and workshops on the grounds surrounding the juried exhibition of visual arts and photography, an open members' show, and a young artists' show. The festival opens at 2 p.m. Friday with exhibitions, craft artisans, a food court, kids' activity tent and entertainment. On Friday afternoon at 3 p.m. Watson Reid and Americana will perform popular songs. At 4 p.m. Susie Burke and David Surrette will fill the air with their guitar and mandolin, playing songs for all ages. At 6 p.m. that evening, the South Shore Art Center will host the opening reception for "Magical Realism: Tom Lucas in Mexico" in the Bancroft Gallery, along with gallery artists Tyler Gulden, Wes Reddick, Willy Reddick, Chris Rifkin, Beverly Rippel and Stephanie Roberts in the Dillon Gallery.

This year the Art Center has worked diligently over the winter and spring to recruit new fine studio craft artisans for the festival.

On Saturday the 19th, the festival opens at 10 a.m. and from 11 a.m.-7 p.m. will feature the Second Annual Cohasset Common Fiddlers' Gathering. Featured styles include Yankee, Irish, French Canadian and Cajun. The day of music will begin at 11 a.m. with dancing for families provided by "Two Fiddles." From noon to 4 p.m. there will be rotating concert sets by Peter Sutherland, Chanterelle, Eamon Flynn and Magnolia. Later that night from 5-7 p.m. there will be contra dancing in town hall with all the musicians and caller Mary DesRosiers. At 8 p.m. there will be a gospel concert at the First Parish Church. Admission is $10, call 383-1100 for tickets.

On Sunday the 20th, the festival will be open from noon to 7 p.m. At 1 p.m. "Quintessential Brass" will take the stage followed by the popular South Shore Bay band at 3:30 p.m.

There will be free parking at the old Osgood School and the parking lot of the Cohasset Swim Center. A trolley will be available to provide shuttle service to the Common. For more information and a full program, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-2787. Mark your calendars now for the 44th year of the oldest outdoor art fair in the country!

Reverend Tarbox retires

The Rev. Elizabeth Tarbox recently ministered to First Parish in Cohasset for the last time.

In a brief ceremony, parish committee chairperson Nancy Sandell bestowed upon Tarbox the title of minister emerita.

The Rev. Colin Leitch will take over as interim minister. He has served as acting minister for the past year and has made the transition period a smooth one.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor

TREATING SCIATICA

The condition known as sciatica manifests itself in pain that radiates down from the back into the buttock and/or the leg on the back or outward side. Symptoms include discomfort, pain, burning, tingling, stabbing, and/or aching at any point along the path taken by the sciatic nerve, which is the longest nerve in the body. In severe cases, the pain may be associated with weakness, and it can be recurrent unless the cause is found and treated. This might involve the removal of pressure on the sciatic nerve that is caused by misalignment of the lumbar spine. The chiropractor will also want to treat weak or tense muscles that can cause imbalances, the most underappreciated causes of chronic musculoskeletal problems.

Studies have suggested chiropractic care to be helpful in the relief of the symptoms of sciatica. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHRIROPRACTIC, we are ready to work with you to alleviate your discomfort and restore you to better health as quickly as possible. We may be able to help you on your way to feeling better naturally without resorting to the use of drugs or surgery. Our goal is not merely to bring relief to your pain, but to identify and correct the source of it as well. Our "Mothers Morning Out" program can help you keep your family off drugs-all drugs. We're currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor.

P.S. Sciatica may also be caused by a prolapsed (herniated) interverterbral disc.

Kate Stone's valiant effort at number one singles came up short for Cohasset against Milton.

Lady Skippers' season ends too soon for the coach

By Mike Hardman
STAFF WRITER

The hard part wasn't the 4-1 loss to Milton in the first round of the Division 2 South tournament on Tuesday.

No, the hardest thing about the defeat was that there wouldn't be any more practices or matches for the Cohasset High girls tennis team this year.

"You hate to see the season ended," said Skipper coach Sara Meehan. "I'm not going to see them tomorrow."

The coach and her players didn't spend much time going over the loss to the Wildcats, which ended the Skippers' season at 10-3.

There were other thing to worry about-like making sure everyone was available for the end of the season party or that they all knew about the trip the coach was taking them on.

"We're like a family," said Meehan, who only has 10 players on the squad.

Jokingly, the coach said she expected to have the team show up at tennis courts for a practice on Wednesday.

"The boys season has been for over awhile and we still had them showing up for practice," she said with a smile.

When she mentioned the team being like a family, Meehan could have met the statement literally.

"Tennis seems to run in families," she said. "We also seem to get the siblings."

"You hate to see the season ended. I'm not going to see them tomorrow."
- COHASSET COACH SARA MEEHAN

The coach said that there are some players with familiar last names who are going to become a big part of the Skipper program in the future.

But, on Tuesday afternoon, Meehan was mostly reflecting back on this season.

"We had a great year," she said. "It was a lot of fun."

In the end, the Skippers ran up against a very impressive Milton team, who was seeded 11th in the tournament with a 12-6 record in the Bay State League. The Skippers were seeded sixth.

"Milton has a really good team," said Meehan. "They are a nice group of girls."

About 15 minutes before the Cohasset coach said that, the Milton coach was saying the exact same things about the Skippers.

"Cohasset is a very nice team to play," said Milton coach Liz Mercer.

The match was actually closer than the final score showed.

The Skippers' Katie Brister recorded her team's victory, defeating Milton's Caitlin O'Brien, 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, in the best match of the day.

"Katie had a great match," said Meehan. "Nothing bothers her on the court. You never know what the score is in her matches."

While the final score was 6-3, 6-2 in favor of Milton's Mollie O'Brien in first singles against Cohasset's Kate Stone, the match was much closer than that. Stone gave Mollie O'Brien a tough time.

"She has great skills and is a really smart player," said Meehan.

At third singles, Cohasset's Kelly Stone, a freshman, lost the first match to Milton's Jacki Cassus, 2-6, but came back for a 6-0 win before losing 4-6.

"She came to me and told me that she wanted to play third singles," said Meehan. "She is going to be huge for us."

Milton was able to sweep the doubles matches. At first doubles, the team of Alison Ananis and Lauren Spatala defeated Cohasset's Jessica Stevens and Kate Devine, 1-6, 2-6

Devine joined the team as a junior and was paired up with Stevens to finish 10-0 in the league.

"She (Devine) is a good athlete and she was able to pick up the game," said Meehan. "Jessica is just so steady."

At second doubles, Milton's Denise Ridge and Kathlyn Hurley posted a 6-1, 6-1 win over Cohasset's Ari Arshaw and Jessie Zerenduro.

Wheeler delivers big hit for SSL stars

By Mike Hardman
STAFF WRITER

For the middle three innings, Hanover's Mark Wheeler watched Saturday's Patriot-South Shore League all-star game from the first base dugout at East Bridgewater's Strong's Field.

He had taken part in the home run hitting contest before the game and was a starter in the outfielder during the all-star game before being replaced.

He thought his all-star experience was over.

But that wasn't the case. The two teams used an unlimited substitution rule, which allowed Wheeler to come up to the plate in the top of the ninth inning with the bases-loaded and his team down, 4-3.

Hingham's Mike Bizzozero was cruising along in relief, only allowing a homer to Norwell's Dana Mohr in the seventh. But he ran into trouble in the ninth.

Norwell's Paul Savoy walked and then Hull's Mike Silva singled, followed by a walk to Norwell's Sean Casey to loaded the bases with nobody out.

Norton's Dan Webber, the SSL's leading hitter, hit a lined shot, but Rockland's Bill Smith stabbed it for the first out.

Mohr then looked like he was going to knock all of the runs in with a long shot to left, but the ball went foul. On the next pitch, Bizzozero showed his composure by getting the strikeout.

As soon it looked like the momentum was going to shift back to the Patriot League, Wheeler went with a pitch to right-center, which made it all the way to the outfield fence. All three runs scored and when the throw went wide of the third baseman, Wheeler came up for the final run of the game in the SSL stars' 7-4 win.

"I was just trying to make contact and I went the opposite way with it," said Wheeler. "I had been out of the game for three innings and I wanted to make a contribution."

Carver's Brandon Perry came on in relief in the ninth, giving up a single to East Bridgewater's Brian Wasik before striking out two batters in retiring the side.

"It was a showcase for the kids and a lot of fun," said Hanover coach Fran Coyle. "Mark Wheeler hit the ball really well. You don't have the stress of the tournament and it's really good for the kids."

Coyle and Norwell's Al Kassalty assisted Norton coach Dave Mollica on the South Shore sideline.

Middleboro's Bill Lawrence was assisted on the Patriot League sideline by Rockland's Rick Fredericks and Hingham's Dan McHugh.

"It was a real good game," said Fredericks. "The pitchers dominated (early), but there were a lot of good plays made."

Besides Smith's stab at third, Abington's Brandon Supitkowsy fielded a shot off the left field fence in the fifth inning and threw out Hingham's Sam DeVito, who was trying to stretch his hit into a double. DeVito earlier won the home run contest and was the starting pitcher in the game.

In the first inning, Norton catcher Shawn Bryant had a perfect throw to just gun down Hingham's Tim Sweeney, who was attempting a steal in the first inning.

For the Patriot League, Middleboro's Brandon Soule came up with a stop to throw out Perry at first base in the fourth inning.

On the hitting side, Bizzozero, who finished with two hits and also pitched well, drilled a homer deep to center field, scoring Wasik, who had reached on a fielder's choice for a 2-1 lead in the third inning.

The Hingham connection accounted for the Patriot League's third run as Sweeney, who reached base twice in three plate appearances, singled to center, scoring Mashpee's Lenny Goldman, with the third run in the bottom of the seventh. Soule hit a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Middleboro's Nate Horsman with the four run, Casey gave the SSL all-stars a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a double to right, scoring Hanover's Gary Mahler, who had walked. Casey was thrown out at third.

Webber doubled to center to lead off the fourth and scored on a single by Bryant to give the SSL a 3-2 lead before the Patriot League came up with two runs in the seventh for a 4-3 going into the top of the ninth.

Playing for the Patriot League stars were East Bridgewater's Chris Robinson and Brian Wasik, Hingham's Mike Bizzozero, Sam DeVito and Tim Sweeney, Mashpee's Lenny Goldman, Middleboro's Marc Forant, Dave Goyette, Nate Horsman, Drew McKenna and Brandon Soule, Rockland's Bill Smith, Mark Stimpson and Steve Coulstring. East Bridgewater's Matt Singleton and Scituate's Josh Creighton were named to the team, but didn't play because of injuries.

On the South Shore League all-star team was Abington's Brandon Supitkowsky, Carver's Brandon Perry, Carver's Chris Woods, Cohasset's Jim O'Sullivan, Hanover's Mike Bryon, Rick Deveney, Ryan Hillyard, Gary Mahler and Mark Wheeler, Hull's Mike Silva, Norton's Troy Bouchard, Shawn Bryant, Tim LaConte and Dan Webber, Norwell's Sean Casey, Adam Jacobs, Dana Mohr and Mike Savoy.

RECREATION NEWS

REGISTRATION FOR LACROSSE CLINIC '99

The Cohasset Recreation Department is now taking registrations for a full-contact boy's rules lacrosse clinic the week of July 19 through July 23. The clinic will be for grades 4 to 6 from 7:30 until 9 a.m. and grades 7 to 8 from 9 until 10:30 a.m. at Miliken Field. The fee per participant is $58 and checks can be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. The fee includes the tournament entry fee for Carver, Mass. Tournament on Saturday, July 24 and a Cohasset lacrosse T-shirt.

Mr. Chuck Jaffee will direct this unique lacrosse opportunity. Details regarding the lacrosse tournament in Carver on Saturday, July 24, will be forth coming. We will carpool to this tournament and signed forms permit participants to engage in both the week-long clinic and tournament/travel.

Registration forms can be obtained at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

BASEBALL CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 through 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Camp has been contracted again this year to provide the baseball camp, which will be held for one week, beginning Monday, June 28 through Friday, July 22, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over, and half-day, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5 and 6 year olds (age 7 optional for either half or full-day camp).

The week long camp costs $140 per child for the full day, and $75 per child for the half-day program.

Participants should bring lunch, snacks, and any drinks other than water they might want. Please bring your own glove, which should be marked with your name.

ADULT EVENING TENNIS LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis classes for all levels of instruction by calling 383-4109.

Classes will be scheduled as follows: beginners, 6 to 7 p.m., Tuesday; intermediates, 7 to 8 p.m., Tuesday; advanced, 6 to 7 p.m., Thursday; beginners, 7 to 8 p.m., Thursday.

Other classes will be scheduled as demand indicates.

All sessions are four weeks in duration and will cost $40 per person, per session. Teaching, will be Amanda Gontarz of Cohasset Recreation Department's tennis staff. Participants who do not own or have access to a racquet, should indicate this at the time of registration. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis. Another evening will be made available should demand indicate.

SUMMER BASKETBALL CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the South Shore Basketball School will sponsor a summer basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two camp sessions will be available this July. Boys and girls, ages 8 through 11, will have camp from Tuesday, July 6 through July 9, at Cohasset High School's Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the four- day camp is $120. The full-week camp, for boys and girls ages 12 through 15, will be held Monday, July 12 through Friday, July 16 at the Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the five day camp is $150.

Brochures and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Town Hall, Recreation Department office.

VIP SOCCER CAMP REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4 and 5 year olds and meets from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 19 to July 23. The cost is $50 per week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 19 to July 23 for 6 and 7 year olds. The cost is $80 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the Front Field of Cohasset High School. For brochures and registration forms, please come to the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

SOUTH SHORE SOCCER CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department is now accepting applications for South Shore Soccer Camp for boys and girls ages 8 to 18. This is the South Shore Soccer Camp's ninth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp, it is suggested that you contact the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, town hall, or call 383-4109, in the near future. Brochures and registration forms are available at the recreation office.

South Shore Soccer will be offered to both boys and girls Monday through Friday, Aug. 2 to Aug. 6, and Aug. 9 to Aug. 13. Should a camper wish to attend both camps, this is now possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camps must be restricted in number.

Strawberry Festival proceeds help the needy

For over 30 years, members of the Second Congregational Church have repeatedly supported the Strawberry Festival as a means to help the needy in the greater Boston area. In addition to the largely anonymous outreach routinely carried out by the church, the congregation has supplemented its giving by donating nearly $10,000 which this event nets every year. Volunteers all over this small seaside town have worked for weeks gathering articles for sale, preparing baked goods, and finally preparing the delicacies which make the event such a success. Because of the popularity of the Arts Festival held at the same time, and the expansion of the crafts exhibits which allow people to spend a whole day in an interesting and picturesque setting, the event has grown. It is estimated that over 10,000 people attend the event over its three days duration.

Last year over 900 Strawberry shortcakes were sold. This year, over 500 quarts of fresh strawberries from farms in Rhode Island will be brought to Cohasset and prepared in a marathon cleaning and slicing session on the Thursday night before the Festival .

This year, the Strawberry Festival — part of the Festival on the Common, Friday, June 18, 3pm to 9pm Saturday June 19, 8am to 9pm, Sunday June 20 Noon to 6pm — will add an old fashioned Ice Cream Stand where customers can select from a variety of flavors, or perhaps pick up a strawberry short cake and add a dollop of ice cream as they go by. The ice cream stand will be near the front of the church, next to Bates Hall where the delicatessen sells its wares.

Trudy Chase sells another Strawberry shortcake at last year's Strawberry Festival sponsored by the Second Congregational Church.

Spaghetti supper at Beechwood Church

A spaghetti supper will be held at the Beechwood Church, in Cohasset, on Saturday, June 13 at 6:30. Dinner will include spaghetti with meatballs, rolls, salad, dessert and a beverage. Entertainment will be provided by the Beechwood Bell Choir. The supper is a fund-raiser for the Bell Choir, who will be participating in the 1999 American Guild of English Handbell Ringers' Conference, in Orono, Maine.

Tickets are $6.99 for adults and $3.50 for children. Reservations are needed. Call 383-0362.

Recreation department to hold registrations

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold registrations for the seven-week Summer Playground Program ages 3-1/2 to 12 years; Youth Tennis, ages 7 and over; and Drama Workshop, ages 5 and over during the week of June 14.

Registrations are held at Cohasset Town Hall Monday through Thursday, June 14 through 17, from 9 a.m. to noon, 1 to 3 p.m., and Thursday evening from 5 to 7 p.m.

The Cohasset Registration also offers a variety of week-long sports camp for baseball, basketball, soccer, lacrosse, roller hockey and mixed sports. Registrations for the sports camps programs are ongoing and camp brochures and registration forms are available currently at the recreation department office, 1st floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or you may call the office at 383-4109 for more information.

Preparing for the prom-night 'lock in' party

Is truly a community effort

By Shirley J. Loomis
CORRESPONDENT

Oooh! Aaah! Oh my goodness! That was the reaction of every volunteer as they came through the gymnasium doors, ready to add an extra pair of hands wherever they were needed. The construction under way for the Post-Prom Lock-In taking place this weekend at Cohasset High School is something to rival stage set construction on Broadway.

Betty O' Sullivan and Linda Bolster are the co-chairs for this year's event but both women refused credit for the production. As they provided the Mariner with a guided tour with detailed explanations of the changes the school would under-go in preparation for this weekend, praises were continually heaped upon the business community of Cohasset. The places O'Sullivan and Bolster felt credit was due include:

• the willingness of every single (with no exceptions) parent in the senior class to do as much as was humanly possible to create a successful and safe evening of celebration;

•the involvement of the junior class parents to participate and thus ensure the successful continuation of the event;

• last year's co-chairs helping out again this year with information, inspiration and a slush fund to get 1999 Sr. Parents effort off to a running start;

• the voluntary participation of community people who don't even have students in school, but just enjoy helping out and being part of the event;

• inter-community co-operation between the towns of Hingham and Cohasset.

Students will need to be in the doors of Cohasset High School no later than 12:30 a.m. and will remain there until 7 a.m. the following morning unless they are picked up by a parent. Ten Grand Prize Raffles available only to seniors are to be awarded during the evening. The raffles will begin at 12:45 a.m. with five of the prizes being raffled at 5 a.m.. In a particular area, the theme of which is a closely guarded secret, as many as 70 raffle prizes will be awarded throughout the night.

Seven different theme designations are part of the 1999 Senior Prom Nite Celebration! Breakfast, for that matter, all of the food for the evening's celebration has been donated so that none of the celebrants need leave hungry; tired perhaps, hungry no. More than 100 local businesses are supporting the event.

Bancroft Hall at the Lightkeepers Residence will host a Pre-Prom Reception for anyone wishing to view the finely attired prior to their departure. Cinderella's carriage will be the Hingham boat ferrying all in attendance to the Long Wharf Marriott; and just a reminder seniors, all 78 of you and your guests, the witching hour is 12:30 a.m. at Cohasset High School.

Monday, the community is welcome and invited to tour the High School to view the transformation, magic, and artistry.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Post prom committee update

The Post Prom Committee has been working diligently to create an exciting evening for the Cohasset High School students who will be attending the Senior Prom Friday, June 4, from midnight until 6 a.m. Every senior parent has been involved in some aspect of this remarkable event under the leadership of the co-chairs Linda Bolster and Betty O'Sullivan. It has been rewarding to see the whole community pull together to make this safe, alcohol-free event for the students a reality. The committee would like to thank the school administration for their support throughout the entire process. A special thanks for being flexible goes out to the physical education teachers for allowing the committee to set up and close the gym for four days.

In addition to all the people mentioned previously for their very generous donations and financial support, the committee would like to add its thanks to the latest contributors: Lisa and Lennie Kupsc, Sue McNamara, Katherine and David Gray, Village Butcher and Deli, John and Diane Sullivan, Trask Tackle, Duncan McCormack, Chuck Rose, Ellen's Ocean Place, Olympic Texaco, Cohasset Jewelers, Endless Summer, Charlotte's, Victoria's, Cards N' Shards, Joseph's Hardware, Atlantic Bagel, Hingham Car Wash, Nobles Camera Shop, Cheryl Taylor, Kathie O'Neil, Exotic Flowers, Hingham Lumber, Home Depot, Coca Cola, Dunkin Donuts, Reed's Country Way, Paul Laugelle, Debbie Ketchum, Bob Stansell, Betsy and Ed Connolly, Peridot, Vinette, T.K. O'Malley's, Cohasset Music Circus, ABB Optical, Bay State Health and Carol Sasso.

The high school will be open Friday night, June 4, from 9 to 11 p.m. for anyone in the community who would like to come view the committee's efforts.

Teaching in Panama

The 'school year' will be extended by two weeks for Cohasset Middle/High School media specialist Joan Gallagher and she doesn't mind a bit. That's because as Cohasset Public Schools close for the summer, she will be journeying to Panama to teach a two-week course for teachers at the Panama International School. Integrating technology into teaching, the course being taught by the Cohasset media specialist is one in the master's program in International Education offered to non-U.S. based K-12 teachers through an outreach program of Framingham State College.

This is the second year Gallagher has participated in this unique program which allows teachers in the international school community to acquire an American-based advanced degree without having to journey to the United States. Last year's assigned site was Monterrey, Mexico.

"The technology in each school is varied. Last year, the computers and other resources were high end. Some teachers were using Avid Cinema, a program which allows editing of video using a computer program.. There was a lab of sophisticated computers which provided teachers the resources to easily focus on technology and curriculum integration without the limitations of less-than-adequate resources," she said.

This year's site in Panama may not be so extravagant, but all the teachers do or soon will have Internet access and many have classroom computers. The media specialist's challenge this year is to show teachers what is possible in an environment that is just beginning to embrace technology teaching tools.

It may be hot and humid in Central America at this time of year, but the lessons learned in Panama will better equip Gallagher to work closely with teachers in Cohasset as they begin to wholeheartedly embrace integration of technology into subject research and thinking skills instruction.

Summer playground program

The Cohasset Recreation Commission announces that Martha Equi will again be director of the summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 to 12 years. Registration will be held the week of June 14. Details are forthcoming soon.

The Recreation Commission has also established fee charges for the 1999 Playground Program which will remain the same as the 1998 program as follows:

Costs

5-12 year olds: $150 for first child ($275 non-residents)

3-5 year olds: $125 for first child

Discounts for second and subsequent children are $25.

Activity fee

$45 first child, $40 second child, and $35 third and subsequent children. Mandatory, non-refundable activity fee separate from program fee to be paid at registration, which will cover most special events and a T-shirt. A separate check will be necessary.

- Limited enrollment has been set for each program.
- Non-residents are taken on a space available basis and there are no discounts available for multiple children.
- All children must be toilet trained.

Programs

5-12 year olds, full day programs, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

5-7 year old program, Deer Hill School

8-12 year old program, Deer Hill School.

Pre-school for 3-5 year old half day program Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Must be born 1/1/94 through 3/1/96 to qualify.

Children's drama workshop

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold registrations for the Children's Drama Workshop for ages 5 to 12. The workshop meets from 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday at the Cohasset High School Auditorium beginning Tuesday, June 29. There are dress rehearsals scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 5, and Monday, Aug. 9, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tentative dates for performances are Tuesday, Aug. 10, at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m., and Wednesday, Aug. 11, at 1 and 7 p.m.

The fee for the seven-week session is $195 for members of the playground program and $210 for non-members, with a $15 discount per additional child in each family.

Registrations for "The Lion King" will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall Monday through Thursday, June 14 through 17, from 9 a.m. to noon, 1 to 3 p.m., and Thursday evening from 5 to 7 p.m. Early registration is advised.

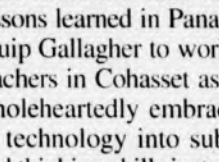
Derby summer school

Derby Academy announces that its academic summer school is open to all students in grades 2 through 12 and will begin Thursday, July 1. The program of academic and review courses runs for four weeks through July 29.

All academic summer school courses are taught by qualified and experienced faculty from Derby Academy and other area schools. Each class is limited to 10 students to maximize individual progress. Academic credit for courses may be arranged on an individual basis.

Classes are held in Hingham on the Burditt Avenue campus of Derby Academy.

For program brochure, registration forms or more information, call program director Thalia McMillion at Derby Academy (781) 740-4766.



We'll make you smile.

Alarming trend

Heroin may be cause of three recent deaths

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

It's cheap, it's abundant and it's here.

Heroin is a problem in Cohasset, a community, which seems so far away from the images of spaced-out junkies on inner-city streets that the illegal drug conjures up.

But the fact is that at least one person and probably two others have died from heroin abuse in town in just the past six months.

"It's an alarming trend," Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

Last week, Cohasset police made a dent in heroin dealing in town by arresting two men after an extensive, six-month-long investigation.

"After investigating heroin activity on Hull Street, persons were identified who were conducting business in the area," said Det. Gregory Lennon, who led the investigation. "Those two subjects were stopped at 7:30 p.m. on Friday."

Police arrested Richard Emanuello, 42, of 47 Hull St., Cohasset and Dean G. Klucevsek, 45, of 105 Kingsley Road in Hull.

Lennon said he had the suspects under surveillance earlier and after being approached in their vehicle, Emanuello allegedly tried to flee on foot in an attempt to dispose of the evidence.

"If you deal drugs in Cohasset, sooner or later you'll have to deal with Greg Lennon."
— Police Chief Brian Noonan

Emanuello was charged with possession of a Class A substance (heroin) with intent to distribute; illegal possession of a Class A substance; conspiracy to violate the controlled substance laws; resisting arrest and operating after revocation for drunk driving.

Police charged Klucevsek with possession of a Class A substance (heroin) with intent to distribute/2nd or subsequent offense; illegal possession of a Class A substance, subsequent offense; and conspiracy to violate controlled substance laws. Klucevsek also had a warrant.

Noonan, the police chief, said District Attorney William Keating's office would seek indictments on the men. If convicted Emanuello could face up to 10 years and Klucevsek, up to 15 years in state prison.

Town tackles Y2K

Hopes to stop millenium glitch

By DeAnna Putnam
STAFF WRITER

If you have a brand new credit card or ATM that strangely can't be read when it gets swiped through a store register, you're already feeling the effects of Y2K.

The store employee will tell you the strip is worn out, but most likely your card has an expiration date past 2000 and the store's local system isn't fully compliant. The card will be accepted when the numbers are manually entered because the overall system is okay.

Everyone knows the Y2K issues exists but it's hard to predict the full implications of the problem. The responsibility for the well-being of citizens should the Y2K-hit-the-fan falls on the shoulders of local town government and law enforcement.

"I think it's safe to say we're okay," Town Accountant Mike Buckley told selectmen Tuesday night. Buckley and Civil Defense Director Arthur Lehr have been working on

Does residential zone extend into Bailey's Creek?

Marina dispute surfaces at zoning board hearing

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

It seemed more like a scene from "The Practice," the hit courtroom TV drama, than a zoning board meeting at town hall.

Two lawyers, one an expert on land disputes and the other, a former town counsel knowledgeable about Cohasset by-laws, drew on their expertise to present their arguments.

Members of the zoning board, in their judiciary capacity, sat like judges listening carefully to every detail.

At center stage is one of the more complicated matters to come before the town: the Cohasset Harbor Marina expansion project.

"The yellow area is there because people didn't want any further development in the salt marsh. It's not there by mistake, it's there by design."
— Richard Henderson, attorney for the Hurleys

Owner, Paul Trendowicz, a Cohasset resident, is in the process of doubling the size of the marina so it can accommodate upwards of 80 boats. While he has obtained all the necessary permits from the various environmental agencies, including the conservation commission, there has been no zoning oversight — and none may be required.

Therein lies the current dilemma. It is not clear if Trendowicz has to seek a variance to expand his operation.

He and the town zoning officer say 'no' and opponents to the project say 'yes.'

The attorneys, who periodically paused to pore over maps and documents to argue their points, remained civil despite the poor acoustics and

THIS WEEK IN COHASSET

Technology bids are in

The school department has obtained bids from vendors interested in supplying computers and software to the Cohasset School system. Fifty-three total bids were received, 17 of which, Superintendent Dr. Edward (Ted) Malvey reported, were viable. Each vendor had the option of bidding on the software itself, computer installation including labor, or software and installation as a total package. Of the viable bids, 12 vendors proposed to provide the total package at costs that ranged between $157,000 to $241,000. $200,000 is available for the technology upgrade. Malvey said that vendors will be required to provide training on the new equipment as necessary. The system is expected to be up and running by the upcoming school year.

Charter School audit concerns

The school committee last week raised concerns about the recent state audit of the South Shore Charter School which indicated several instances of mismanagement and noncompliance. Committee members conceded that they have no control over the management of the Hull K-12 program, but that they do have an interest in Cohasset children enrolled there.

According to Cohasset Superintendent Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey, "the community has every right to demand answers," especially since town funds support each Cohasset student attending school there. Committee member Betsy Connolly sympathized with the school's plight, saying their cramped quarters are less than ideal. Committee Member Stephanie Noble concurred, "when you start a charter school from the ground up, I imagine it must be difficult."

But committee chairman Mark DiGiacomo pointed out that the charges were not minor. "The charter school may have accepted funds from nine students who weren't enrolled." DiGiacomo concluded that "there's nothing for us to do except that we need to keep an eye on it."

More communication is necessary

In the aftermath of the year 2000 budget debate which demonstrated a disconnect between committee members and the general public, and resulted in significant public school funding cuts, the school committee decided last week to make more of an effort to keep the community informed of its activities. It was suggested that detailed reports of school committee activity be filed and printed in local newspapers on a quarterly basis. Committee member Kathy Ofsthun said that "more communication rather than less is warranted." Pat Martin agreed that the publicity should help fundraising as well.

Speaking of the budget cuts, Superintendent Dr. Edward (Ted) Malvey said that "the budget we have approved is very, very tight. There is no wiggle room." He added that "right now we know we don't have sufficient funds to survive a long-term teacher absence."

Coffee at the former Lilac House

Cohasset residents will be able to get a cup of coffee and pastry at the Lilac House on South Main Street as early as August 1, according to owner Gerde Ordelheide.

"What I want to create is an image of an old fashioned country store," he said. Ordelheide is consulting the same individual who designed French Memories Cafe in Duxbury, which looks like an old general store.

Ordelheide has been hard at work over the past several months reconstructing both the Red Lion Inn and the Lilac House. The restaurant and first floor of the inn is scheduled to open before Thanksgiving.

The Red Lion Inn was built in 1704 and in 1996 was purchased by Carl Akerblom, who originally planned to renovate the inn. A year and a half later no work had been done on the building. Ordelheide purchased the inn last year and later bought the Lilac House next door.

School architectural firms interviewed

Five architectural firms have been chosen as candidates to develop plans and specifications for Deer Hill Elementary School and Middle High School. A committee consisting of the town manager, the school superintendent, a member of the school committee and two or three members of the school facilities committee interviewed firms last night, and interviews will continue this evening.

The candidates include Strekalovsky and Hoyt, Inc. of Hingham; Mount Vernon Group of Stoneham; Earl R. Flansburgh, Inc. of Boston; Todd Lee, Clark, Rozas Associates, Inc. of Boston; and Knight, Bagge and Anderson, Inc. of Boston.

At last week's school committee meeting, Superintendent Dr. Edward (Ted) Malvey reported on the building committee's progress on the Deer Hill and Middle-High School renovation projects. Malvey said that the hiring procedure is "a very involved legal process that is heavily regulated by the state." Malvey indicated that each of the firms being considered has some experience with school renovations. This week's interviews, said Malvey, will narrow down the candidates, but "it usually takes a minimum of 6-8 weeks to get an architect on board."

THE DESIGNING WOMAN by Kathleen Fox ASID

WALLPAPER IN AMERICA

The earliest mention of wallpaper in this country was made in about 1700. At that time, imported, handmade, block-printed papers were viewed as expensive luxuries. Early designs simulated silk, brocade and damask, while others featured block-printed chintzes, elaborate florals and exotic Chinese designs. Through the 1790s, plain English papers and borders remained popular, with blue and green as the predominant colors. When the 1800s dawned, patriotic motifs appeared, as well as classical medallions. These gave way to pastoral motifs in the early 1800s. In 1824, a 40% duty was imposed on French papers, which provided the impetus needed to get American wallpaper firms rolling. The invention of mechanized roller presses in the 1840s made wallpaper an affordable means of decoration.

Wallpaper has a long, rich history. Technological advances helped make once expensive wallpaper affordable to all. Your home is likely to be your most significant financial investment. THE DESIGNING WOMAN respects that investment. Regardless of your personal tastes, we can help you create a comfortable, beautiful home that you can be proud of. From the coordination of wallpaper, furniture and window treatments to the selection of accessories, you can rely on us for trustworthy guidance. Call us at 383-6411 to arrange a convenient consultation.

HINT: Recent research indicates that American colonists preferred strong colors, such as yellow and blue, and not the dull muted shades often associated with the period.

CHS to graduate 80 on Saturday

Three seniors are Harvard bound

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Cohasset High graduates are traditionally no strangers to Ivy League schools.

But this year, a top ivy has beckoned three of the seniors who will march with their classmates into the big top at the Music Circus Saturday to the strains of Pomp and Circumstance.

Steve Sceery, Ben Litthauer and Justin Golden will all be wearing Harvard crimson next year. All were accepted by early admission.

"That's very good," said Principal Curtis Collins about the myriad college acceptances at the high school that rival those of private prep schools. "This class has done well.

"Cohasset High School is the best kept secret," he said.

Other notable schools on the college acceptance list for the 80-member Class of '99 include Brown University, Georgetown and Williams College, to name a few.

In keeping with tradition, the commencement which gets underway a 1:30 p.m., rain or shine, will feature a welcoming address from the class president and speeches by the salutatorian and valedictorian.

Jim O'Sullivan, class president, said he is proud to be a member of the Class of '99.

"They are a really great, unselfish group of people who have achieved great things as individuals and when the time comes, can work together to accomplish something," said O'Sullivan who will head to Boston College in the fall.

"Cohasset High School is the best kept secret."
— Principal Curtis Collins

He pointed out at the recent car wash, a class fund-raiser, more than half the class showed up to help out. And as individuals, the class has won art and athletic awards, and helped with blood drives and other community service projects.

A highlight of the year was the football team's 12-0 Thanksgiving Day win over Hull, the first in 11 years, O'Sullivan said.

But he said the class couldn't have done it alone.

"We are the product of a really great faculty both academically and personally," O'Sullivan said.

Jami Butman, student council representative, said the Class of '99 will be remembered for its spirit.

"Every single year since the eighth-grade we've won the pep rally," she said.

She said the class is a talented one.

"We are really close and really smart," Butman said. "There's going to be a lot of good to come out of this grade — the kind of people you'll read about in the newspapers in 20 years."

Collins said the class not only has more depth academically than normal, but also has demonstrated leadership and citizenship.

"They are the type of kids that if you need anything done, all you had to do was ask," Collins said. "Not only are they very bright, but they are good citizens. They help you out and if you need that extra pair of hands, they're there."

The principal praised the Music Circus, which provides the venue for graduation. Many schools hold theirs outside because family and friends cannot be accommodated inside auditoriums and gymnasiums.

"We are very appreciative of the Music Circus," he said.

Remembering Bourke Corcoran

Friends of Bourke Corcoran will conduct a tribute to his memory at 7 p.m. tonight rain or shine in front of Cohasset Middle High School.

The popular 18-year-old died following a tragic car accident last year just four days before graduation.

An engraved stone bench will be dedicated and two dogwood trees will be planted in his honor.

Corcoran's closest friends, seniors, Kate Stone and Ted Goff, with the help of class president Jim O'Sullivan, raised $800 for the bench and trees by sending letters to local businesses.

The Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church will conduct the special remembrance.

Stone said planning the tribute was not difficult.

"Bourke deserves it," she said. "And it is easy to do when you feel deeply about someone."

This year's Cohasset High School yearbook is dedicated to Corcoran.

NDA spirit shines through at graduation

By Josh Myerov
STAFF WRITER

Thoughts of Kate Gaughan, the Notre Dame Academy senior killed in a car accident near her home in Quincy just two weeks ago, couldn't have been hidden too deep in the minds of the 121 girls who graduated NDA this past Sunday afternoon.

But you might not have guessed it from the looks of the ear-to-ear smiles, the spontaneous screams of joy and relief, and the nervous excitement of each senior as she made her way across the stage, being transformed along the way from mere high school student to high school graduate.

There were, undeniably, plenty of reasons for the graduates to be not quite so happy, not quite so hopeful, or not quite so thankful as other weekend graduates across the state. After all, with the death of four schoolmates this year, three of whom should have been there to share in the celebration and the recognition of commencement ceremonies, the NDA class of '99 had every reason for their collective spirits to be broken.

But those same reasons for sadness on this day of celebration, instead brought the class that much closer and helped them to truly appreciate the sunshine and the spotlight illuminating their white silk gowns.

Unlike other graduations, the words of wisdom put forth by the salutatorian, valedictorian, and the commencement speaker were not lost on the graduates. They were spoken with meaning and they were received with even greater meaning.

This was one graduation where the celebrants were clearly not just going through the motions.

The seniors walked quietly from the school underneath a flower and vine-covered archway that led onto the soccer field where they took their seats to the quiet strains of Pomp and Circumstance.

The invocation was given by class vice-president Karen Finnegan.

Salutatorian Evelyn Mahoney, who will be attending Williams College this fall, set a tone of lightness. "A wise frog once said, 'it's not easy being green.' And today I say to you my class, it's not easy being the NDA class of '99," Mahoney said, quoting Kermit the Frog.

"Like Kermit," continued Mahoney, "the NDA class of '99 shines above all. We have triumphed. We have come out on top."

Valedictorian Justine Kasznica, who will begin classes at Yale University this upcoming year, asked her class "how is it that we are so willing to praise the genius in others while at the same time dismissing our own potential with a cynical 'yeah, like I could ever do that.'"

"To experience loss at a young age is to learn you must live life to its fullest as you don't know what each day will bring."
— Joan Kelly, NDA alumna

"I will go so far as to announce that every single one of us is called to be the next Van Gogh," Kasznica added, "we must recognize that the we too are endowed with the same spark of pure genius that we are so quick to praise in others."

The address to graduates was given by '82 NDA graduate Joan Kelly, the director of marketing for the graduate business program at Simmons College in Boston.

"To experience loss at a young age is to learn you must live life to its fullest as you don't know what each day will bring," Kelly said, speaking from her own experiences. "But that's what Notre Dame has prepared you for."

"Do remember that you are capable of doing anything you want in life," she added. "Now it's your turn to live your dreams. I am proud to walk with you as an alumna. And when I look across the many stars, I'll expect to see your faces, preparing to move to even greater heights. Don't forget to call for lunch."

More than $7 million dollars in scholarships and grants from colleges as well as corporate and community sponsors were awarded to this years graduating class. The Colleen Clancy Memorial Scholarship and The Erin and Allison Darling Memorial Scholarship were awarded in memory of the three NDA students killed in a car crash last September in Pembroke.

Class president Caitlin Fowkes announced that a class gift would be donated to the school in the name of the four students who died but the graduates have yet to decide what that gift will be.

Each of the graduates as well as faculty and administration wore blue, gold, and white ribbons on their chests, the first two commemorating the victims of last fall's accident and the white ribbon signifying the most recent tragedy.

The class of '99 music presentation was performed by the Notre Dame a cappella choir, singing their rendition of "Friends" by Michael and Deborah Smith. "Though it's hard to let you go," they sang, "in the Father's hands we know, that a lifetime's not too long to live as friends."

Cohasset NDA graduates include: Stephanie Canton, Deborah Catalano, Caroline DeRose, Kerry Dwyer and Meaghan Roach.

Heroin may be cause of three recent deaths

Helping in Friday's arrest were Sgt. John Conte and Patrolman Jeffrey Treanor.

Lennon said 14 bags of heroin were confiscated at the scene. He explained that heroin sells for $10-$15 a bag and is usually snorted or injected.

Two of the deaths — both men, who were in their early 40s — on Dec. 31, 1998 and April 17, respectively, occurred at the same house on Lamberts Lane. The third, a woman, age 31, died on Feb. 24 at her condo on Jerusalem Road. The December death is a confirmed heroin overdose. In the other two deaths, heroin is the suspected cause because of drug paraphernalia found at the scene, Noonan said.

As a result of the woman's death in February, in a joint effort, Cohasset police, the Norfolk County DA Drug Task Force and Randolph police arrested a subject in Randolph who allegedly sold to her. The alleged dealer is under indictment on heroin-related charges.

Noonan praised the fine police work behind the arrests.

"I couldn't be more proud of Greg Lennon," he said. "He has devoted more time and effort to these cases than anyone I've ever seen. It was outstanding detective work."

Lennon worked with the South Shore Drug Task Force, the Norfolk County DA Drug Task Force and Det. John Coggins of the Hull Police Department in the investigation that led to Friday's arrests.

Noonan said that unfortunately heroin is here.

"It's around and it's around pretty good," he said, adding a warning to potential distributors.

"If you deal drugs in Cohasset, sooner or later you'll have to deal with Greg Lennon," he said.

Lennon was appointed last fall as town's narcotics officer and works in the evenings when most drug activity takes place. He has received more than 500 hours of drug enforcement training.

Hopes to stop town's millenium glitch assessing Cohasset's preparedness for the turn of the millennial clock. Cohasset has $15,000 appropriated to upgrade any computers or equipment that are not Y2K compliant.

All computers in Town Hall are in good shape, with the only thing needing to be taken care of is some of the software, Buckley said.

One of the big problems with PCs has been the fact that Microsoft's Windows 95 is not Y2K compliant, whereas Windows 98 and Microsoft 2000 is compliant.

The police, fire department and DPW are also in good shape, or in the process of getting there.

"You're probably wondering why I'm involved in this," Lehr said, "I don't even own a computer."

Lehr spent a day with the Massachusetts Emergency Management Association which has been engaged in educating and serving as a resource for towns trying to prepare for the New Year.

"Basically, they're telling people to treat it like a hurricane or storm emergency," he said, "The National Guard will be on alert a couple of days before New Year's."

Cohasset High School will be on standby in case residents end up with no electricity or heat. The high school runs on generators and will be able to keep the stove burners working. Second Congregational Church will also be on standby, but can only house a small number of people so most would be routed to the high school in an emergency situation.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he met with East Edison and Massachusetts Electric (which are merging) and was assured they were fully prepared for Y2K.

Selectman Tom Callahan was unconvinced.

"When the wind blows the power goes out," he said.

The Y2K problem is the result of programmers making the decision in the 70s to code two digits ("00") for the turn of the century turn to save memory. They felt they could get away with it because it seemed the computers they were working on would become antiquated before it was an issue.

Instead, larger companies grew so dependent on mainframe computers that they couldn't be replaced. Over the years, newer systems and components were simply layered over there own systems. Now, software can't handle the century date and will believe when the clock rolls that we revert to 1900. So, if you're expecting a social security check, and you were born in 1922, the computer will say you don't exist yet — so you don't get a check.

If the mere turn of the century turn isn't enough to cause problems, there are all sorts of other nuances that thicken the plot. The first day of 1900 is a Saturday, not a business day, and so that causes even more of a problem with date confusion.

And if people think their safe until Dec. 31, 1999, think again. Glitches could start in the fall of 1999.

The first expected fail date is September 9, 1999. In the 70s and the 80s, "9/9/99" was the universal default for dates to show a sort of an infinity. In some prison systems, death row inmates as having their prison term end on Sept. 9, 1999.

To add more fuel to the fire, the year 2000 is a leap year, so Feb. 28 and 29 could have some problems. But 2000 is not only a leap year — it's the Leap Year of All Leap Years. Only once every 400 years will a leap year fall exactly on the turn of a century, and this could create even more fun with the accuracy of date information for chips that think we haven't even fought World War I yet.

The town will also need to have a handle on legal ramifications of Y2K glitches. Some towns are considering special insurance policies for the New Year just in case, but they're very expensive.

Summer traffic nightmare to test Cohasset tempers

Elm St. closed at harbor

By DeAnna Putnam
STAFF WRITER

Cohasset residents will have traffic jams rivaling Boston commuters venturing through the Big Dig this summer.

"It's going to be a nightmare," Town Manager Mark Haddad said, "This is not going to be a fun place to drive around."

Construction crews will descend upon Cohasset beginning in just two weeks. Unfortunately, there's so much to be done within a limited time frame, there is no possibility for the pacing of various projects to alleviate the inevitable traffic problems.

"This is not going to be a fun place to drive around."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

"We have no choice," Haddad said, "we have to have this all done by June 2000."

Cohasset will have a number of construction projects which will force drivers to take alternate routes and patiently crawl along already narrow roads. One main point of redirection will occur because residents won't be able to get from Elm. St. to Border St. for the next three months.

First, the town just issued the go-ahead for the central Cohasset water improvement program. Related construction will take place over the next three or four months on streets including Ripley Rd., Todd Rd., lower King St., Cushing and others.

Second, the Cohasset sewer project will be starting up over the next couple of weeks, which will place five different crews at various locations throughout town.

"We're running out of places for us to allow constructions crews to set up," Haddad said.

Third, the gas company will be running lines down Highland St.

"We're just asking people to be patient," he said, "When the heat rises, tempers rise. It's going to be a summer of inconvenience."

Traffic tickets at the beach

Police warn residents that their beach stickers have expired. Those without current stickers will be ticketed. Fines at Sandy Beach are now $25. New stickers can be purchased at town hall.

"We've issued over 100 tickets in the past two weeks or so," Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

Does residential zone extend into Bailey's Creek?

lack of air conditioning in the town hall auditorium at the end of a day of record-breaking temperatures.

Victoria and Michael Hurley of Border Street, abutters to the project, are appealing the zoning officer Bob Egan's decision that no local by-laws relate to the project which, they say, is in a residential zone. It is the second appeal they've launched to halt the project.

They point to the color-coded town zoning maps since 1969 that show the residential zone goes to the "thread of the creek" or mid-way point. Expansion of a non-conforming use, in this case a business, in a residential zone requires zoning relief.

But Trendowicz claims the town zoning maps subsequent to 1955 are ambiguous.

And Attorney Robert Foskett of the town counsel's office seems to agree. In a letter he wrote the "yellow" color going into the creek and not stopping at the shoreline was due a printer's error.

But Attorney Richard Henderson, representing the Hurleys, could not stomach that argument.

In agonizing detail, he walked the zoning board through the statutory steps, including town warrants and town meetings over the past 30 years, as the town's zoning by-laws were refined.

"It's (residential district) there because people who served in this town thought about what they wanted for their own community," Henderson said. "The yellow area is there because people didn't want any further development in the salt marsh.

"It's not there by mistake, it's there by design," he said.

The issue is paramount because the town by-laws do not allow marinas in residential zones, although Henderson acknowledged that Trendowicz has some non-conforming rights.

Henderson pointed to a state permit issued to the prior owner in 1992 that allowed about 37 slips. More than doubling the size not only interferes with the Hurleys' view but also doubles the parking and traffic at the site.

"I would argue that not only the zoning board but the planning board should be involved," he said. "I've never seen a case which ends up with a permit and no one has anything to say in municipal government."

The planning board has said the marina is not its turf and the zoning board is not clear if it has jurisdiction over water-based projects. Selectmen have held numerous meetings with angry abutters over the expansion and set up powwows with Trendowicz to reach a compromise but nevertheless, the project continued to move forward as planned.

Trendowicz had hoped to win support from selectmen to move the federal anchorage line allowing him to expand further into the creek, which would have prevented the need for pilings. Pilings, which extend out of the water and are especially prominent at low tide, are considered less aesthetically pleasing than bottom anchors for floats.

Donald Connors, the attorney representing Trendowicz, said the entire argument is a moot point because the Hurleys have already had their turn at bat, so to speak.

In a prior appeal to the zoning board, they did not meet the filing deadline, a fatal error, Connors said.

"That ends the subject," he said. "Property owners can't be forever standing at the gates waiting for the next objection."

Connors said the zoning board acted properly not to hear the first appeal on procedural grounds because the aggrieved did not file within the 30 days.

"Only when there is a substantive change of circumstances can the petition be brought before the board," he said.

But Henderson argued the zoning board should hear the Hurleys out because the board's prior decision was based on procedural reasons and not on the merits of the case.

"You did not make a decision on the substance of the appeal," he said.

As the sultry evening drew on, the board opted to take the issue under advisement and to conduct deliberations at a later date.

Water Commission seeks rapid tank approvals

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The water commission is wasting no time in its efforts to build a new water storage tank on Scituate Hill. The water commissioners filed an application with the zoning board of appeals on Friday, June 4 for a variance from the town's 45-foot height restriction to build a 75-foot high water tank in the light industrial zone. Also, on Wednesday, June 2, the water commission met with attorneys for Paul Barry and his Crocker II Realty Trust to negotiate the acquisition of land for an access road to the tank and a water main.

On May 26, the water commission acquired a permanent easement by eminent domain for a half-acre of land on Scituate Hill for the new water tank. The water commission paid $52,000 for the taking — $40,000 for the tank parcel and $12,000 for an additional 1/2-acre of land for a temporary construction easement. The land is still technically owned by J. Michael Susi and Sons under the name Westwood Limited Partners.

The water commission is on track to build the second tank by December, 2000 if it can work out several unresolved details. The water commission needs three approvals to begin construction. The ZBA must give the water commission a variance from the town's 45-foot height limit to build the 75 foot high tank. The planning board must approve the site plans. The Department of Environmental Protection also has to approve the project.

Also, the commission needs a permanent site for an access road and underground water main. The water commissioners have been negotiating with representatives of the Crocker II Realty Trust — which owns land adjacent to Scituate Hill — for a parcel that can accommodate an access road. Paul Barry Jr. — owner of the Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill — is an officer in the Crocker II Trust.

John K. McNabb Jr., chairman of the water commission, said the water commissioners have been negotiating with Crocker II for several months to obtain land for the road in exchange for two stub connections to the water main. Last month, the water commission became dissatisfied with the pace of negotiations and filed a notice of intent to take the land for the road by eminent domain. McNabb said the commissioners have been waiting for Crocker II to choose a location for the road. McNabb said when it seemed Crocker II would not choose a location quickly, the commission decided to consider the possibility of taking the land.

Disputes reports

An attorney for Crocker II, Robert Schwandt Jr., of Hanify and King in Boston, contacted The Mariner to disagree with some of the ways negotiations have been represented in past articles about the water tank. Schwandt said he believes the negotiations can lead to an acceptable deal that would preclude an eminent domain taking. He said he felt positive about the negotiations after discussions with the water commission that took place last week after The Mariner went to press.

Schwandt said there has never been, to his knowledge, a quid-pro-quo agreement between the two parties to trade the land for two stub connections. Schwandt said trading the land for stubs was one of the options raised in discussions between the water commission and Crocker II. Schwandt said engineers for Crocker II have placed the value of two stubs at about $1,000, significantly less than the value of a road 30 feet wide and several hundred yards in length. Crocker II would also have to pay legal and engineering fees to prepare for the road.

"Who knows the value of the access road in terms of dollars, but it certainly exceeds the cost of two connections," Schwandt said.

Also, it was reported in previous issues of The Mariner that the road would use up 1/2-acre of land. But Schwandt said the road — even if it comprises only 1/2-acre in total area — would cut a swath through most of the Crocker II property and could affect future uses for the property. Schwandt said the water commission's engineer, Tutela Engineering, originally drew up a plan for a road that could have rendered the Crocker II property unusable for private development. Schwandt objected to the plans, and Tutela drew up a more acceptable proposal. According to Schwandt, the water commission recently altered the proposal by requesting additional easements for utilities and drainage.

Schwandt pointed out that Crocker II would essentially be giving the town land for a public use in exchange for a small consideration — the stub connections and possibly engineering and legal fees.

McNabb said the water commission does not want to do anything that will interfere with future development plans at the Crocker II site. He said the water commissioners need to move rapidly to complete the tank by December, 2000. According to McNabb, the water commissioners plan to take by eminent domain a piece of land running along the Crocker II property line unless Schwandt offers a more acceptable counter-proposal. McNabb said the water commissioners believe the property line could be the most unobtrusive spot for the road and pipe.

"I believe it's do-able without us taking the land by eminent domain," McNabb said. "We will work cooperatively with Crocker II, but we will take the land if we have to. In about 45 days, we will have the land we need for the pipe."

The water commission has been attempting to find a spot for a new water tank since 1997. Two years ago, town meeting approved a request by the water commission for $1.4 million to build a new 2 million gallon water tank on Bear Hill next to the town's only other tank. Public disapproval of the Bear Hill site sent the water commissioners out in search of a new location Last year, town meeting approved an extra $200,000 for the tank so the water commission could build the tank on Scituate Hill.

Members of the water commission say the town needs a new tank to take the other unit out of service for cleaning, and to provide more fire reserves for large fires or when water reserves drop below average levels in hot summer months.

AROUND TOWN

A SPECIAL DAY

Last Saturday, May 29, Allison Ludlow became the wife of Kennan Ross Startzell, and what a special day it was! Allison absolutely sparkled, and Kennan just kept smiling — they really were like a Hollywood couple seen in the movies!

The ceremony took place at St. Stephen's Church, which has got to be one of the loveliest settings for a bride and groom; The Rev. Cutler married the couple and did it with much love. Holly Drake and Heather Jones were the Matrons of Honor. Jim Startzell and Stanley Startzell were the best men. Maria Kierce and Jennifer Reidy were bridesmaids. Scott Cochrane, Curtis Ludlow and Martin Osborne were ushers.

To add to the romance, the date was the same as Allison's Mom and Dad's anniversary — they were married 35 years ago.

As Ed Mulvey so perfectly stated, "Allison was everybody's little girl, all the while she was growing up here! Everyone loves her!" We know that Kennan will treasure and love her as we all do!

QUEEN NOOR'S VISIT

You undoubtedly read that Queen Noor was honored in Boston last week amid much celebration and fanfare for all she has done for the world. During her time spent here, she attended a party honoring her and Jerry White, co-founder of the Landmine Survivors Network, at the Beacon Hill home of supporters Carla Meyer and Vin Ryan and co-hosted by Kathleen and Ross Sherbrooke. You may remember, the Mariner did an extensive story about Jerry White; he was severely injured by a landmine. He also met with Princess Diana, another royal who campaigned against the landmines.

NEW STORE IN VILLAGE

Hope you have been in to see the new store in downtown Cohasset "Ports and Company." The clothes in there are wonderful, all you think of is the islands and cruises. It is fabulous, with more fashions arriving all the time! It is located at 23 S. Main St. Jane Kent is the proprietor with the ability to make you look like a perfect island native. Her clothes will take you anywhere!

97 YEARS YOUNG

We extend huge birthday greetings to Elinor Kennedy! Mrs. Kennedy celebrated her 97th on June 6. Hope that your day was a superior one, just as you are a "one in a million" lady!

IT'S FESTIVAL TIME

Be sure that your calendars are marked for the wonderful weekend that is fast approaching — it's festival time! The arts festival, the strawberry festival — June 18, 19 and 20, will be jammed-packed with things to do, and you won't want to miss a single solitary thing! Kiddos from 2 to 102 will love it, there is something for all to do. Check with the South Shore Art Center for a detailed list! And, top off your good time by stopping at the Second Congregational Church for their famous (and we mean FAMOUS) strawberry shortcake.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On June 17, Ruth and Harry Goodwin will celebrate their 59th wedding anniversary; what an inspirational couple they are! Here's to a grand celebration, and to many more, indeed!

NEW GRANDPARENTS

Remember The Rev. John Benbow and his wife, Mary? Well, they are grandparents! Their son, Jim, and his wife, Eileen, had a baby girl May 20! Her name is Ella James Benbow and they live in Virginia. How exciting for all! Congratulations!

GOLF OUTING

The Cohasset Education Foundation is planning its golf outing for Aug. 9 at Cohasset Country Club. There will be a shotgun start at 1 p.m., with lunch starting at 11:45 a.m. The format will be Florida Scramble-Net and Gross Format with contests for "Closest to the pin," "longest drive," "hole in one" and "lowest score." Applications will be accepted on a first come/first serve basis, and there will be hole sponsors. So, reserve the date now, and we'll keep you abreast of news as it happens; or, check with Steve Gaumer or Michael Hurley, chairmen for the event.

ASP TRIP SLATED

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project is wrapping up all of the details for its June 26 to July 4 trip to West Virginia. This group has worked so hard to raise needed funds to get there (to work even harder to benefit families who are in need of work). When we last heard, they still needed four adults to help balance their crews. Give The Rev. Ritts a call if you are interested (383-0345).

That's the news for this week, hopefully you have an exciting item to share with us — give me a call or drop me a line (383-0560).

Here come irresistible salads!

MAY I PRESENT

SALLYANN CHATTERTON

The heat is on! Lots of times that means the stove gets shut down — it's simply too hot! But, that doesn't mean that our families' appetites vanish, tastes just seem to change.

Here come the salads! Chicken salad, shrimp salad, tuna salad, lobster salad, tossed salad ... the list could go on forever!

Salads are a dieter's friend, they help curb your appetite and allow you to eat smaller portions of other foods without feeling hungry. Salads are also extremely flexible and can be altered to suit your personal taste. You can easily omit or make substitutions — if you don't like garlic or onion for example, simply omit! Do, however, try experimenting with all kinds of salad greens; you'll be surprised how the flavors differ and complement each other!

Here are two irresistible salads, top with your favorite dressing and Viola! taste sure to please!

Garden patch toss-up

2 cups fresh spinach leaves, broken
2 small cucumbers, sliced
1 cup cherry tomatoes
6 radishes, sliced
4 scallions, sliced
2 carrots, shredded
1/2 cup celery, sliced
1/2 head lettuce, broken
2 tbsp. parsley, chopped
1/2 cup sour pickle relish (optional)

Just toss with your favorite dressing, and enjoy!

All-green tossed salad

2 heads Belgian endive, sliced
1 cup cabbage, shredded
1 cup fresh spinach leaves, broken
1/2 head lettuce, broken
1/2 cup celery, sliced
1/2 medium onion, in rings
1/4 cup green pepper, chopped

Toss with your favorite dressing.

Both salads serve 5-6 people, look cool and delicious. Hope you will try and enjoy them.

Stawberries for everyone!

People are coming from all over New England to Cohasset on Friday, June 18, 2 p.m. to 7pm Saturday June 19, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday June 20, Noon to 6 p.m. where over 2,000 strawberry shortcakes will be served in the tree shaded brick patio next to the Cohasset Second Congregational Church during Cohasset's Festival on the Common.

Every year, Ed Mulvey, president of the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank on Cohasset's Main Street sends over to the Second Congregational Church for Strawberry Short Cakes for his entire staff at the bank. Ed's just one of many in town who support the charities on the south shore by their generous gifts and support of the Church's Strawberry Festival. It's fun, and you'll be helping the less fortunate. The Second Congregational Church facing the common, will serve Strawberry Shortcake and other snacks during the entire Festival on the Common. They will also offer an expanded delicatessen/country store in Bates Hall which will sell Vermont cheeses and pickles and Baked goods and preserves. An old fashioned ice cream stand will serve your favorite flavor. A food booth on the common will serve hamburgers and soft drinks.

Heidi Maitland and Louise Smullen prepare strawberry shortcakes in the kitchen of Cohasset's Second Congregational Church.

A graduation message

I'm here today to speak to you, the 1999 Graduates of Notre Dame Academy. You are the last class of the 20th Century and in a little while, it will take only 30 seconds for you to walk across the stage to be transformed from student to graduate and be released upon the world to make your own mark.

It's a time of anticipation as well as anxiety, as you leave to discover what lay ahead for you. It was 17 years ago that I sat with my class, a plan in mind, but no concept of what starts and stops I'd make along the way. It is each experience, both success and failure, that give you the strength to keep reaching for the next goal.

Know that you are not alone. You have your family, friends, teachers and the Notre Dame Angels — Colleen, Erin, Allison and Kate — who join Tina from my class, Martha from my freshman sister's class, along with many others. They're the ones who create the wind around you and by the strength of their wings will lift you up and help you in your journey throughout life. As God sends them on their missions, you'll wonder why a door seemed to open for you so effortlessly. All you will need to do is call on them. And now they have the best seats in the house, up above us, making the day glorious for you.

They are here today, watching just as I know my mother is. I never knew when my mother came to celebrate my 21st birthday with me in New York City it would be our last together, for she passed away 11 months later from cancer. To experience loss at a young age, is to learn you must live life to its fullest as you don't know what each day will bring. But that's what Notre Dame has prepared you for. As you look back and have distance from your time here at the school, the memories will be about the friendships you made and keep. This place is about how you were transformed while you were here and the women you will become because of it.

You have the greatest amount of opportunities available. As you move on and become freshmen in life again, remember to keep looking outside of the sphere you know. It won't be easy. But take the risk of thinking and believing that you are capable of doing anything you want in life. That's pretty powerful. You can do anything you want in life. Not everything mind you. But choose what you want and go after it. Don't allow my time for would'ves, should'ves or could'ves. Seize the moment. When you get a chance, you need to grab it and hold on tight.

You are only limited by the imagination of your dreams. You need to shoot for the moon and see which star you'll land on. You may not make it every time, but it's only if you try that you have the chance. You have enormous power within yourself. Don't give it away freely to others and never let anyone make you doubt your own capabilities. Not in class, not friends and not in love.

There's a lot of space between here and the moon and at times it may seem overwhelming. You may feel afraid of the unknown. Instead, be afraid of not trying to discover how high you can fly. You are prepared for this journey and you will learn what you need along the way. Don't be restrained by the perception others have of you. Have the courage to believe in yourself. You are capable, intelligent and remarkable women.

— Joan Kelly

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cohasset Harbor Marina

TO THE EDITOR:

While some may see humor in Mr. Hamilton's drawing in the June 3 edition, my friends and I do not. I have even heard comments from "out-of-towners" wondering why the Marina was being slammed, and portrayed as it was. They thought, as do I, the issue was settled, and the Marina was great and long overdue. The Marina is legally permitted, the work was approved, the docks are in, and more residents are finally able to access our beautiful harbor without driving to Scituate, Hull or Hingham.

We know there will always be resentment towards the Marina and sometimes its patrons by very small special interest groups. When these special interest groups saw they were losing the battle to stop the expansion, they then started a petition to stop the pilings! I think, as well as some original opponents to the pilings, that they look great. However, your paper, by publishing the drawing, is not portraying the Marina in the proper light. The Marina did not run ripshod through the various town offices and committees. It went through the decision and application process, as any business would, that is trying to survive and make a profit. That is what a business is supposed to do. The Marina needed to expand to turn a profit, and warrant the dollars that were spent to purchase it originally, and the dollars that have and will be spent there in improvements. The expansion would not have been possible, if it were not legal to do so. I think we should be extremely happy that there are people willing to spend huge sums of money in improvements around the harbor.

If you are one of the "lucky ones" to have a mooring in Cohasset Harbor, you may never understand what this expansion means to those who don't. If you belong to the Yacht Club, and want a larger boat, or you lost that mooring and were told "sorry, nothing's available for 10 to 15 years, try another town," you would see why we're behind the Marina 110 percent. We need to make our harbor accessible to its residents, period! We need to foster a good relationship with the people and businesses that can help us achieve this. We need to work with, and not against, the businesses and anyone else who is willing to spend the time and money needed to beautify and improve access to Cohasset Harbor. These people are spending money in sums that the town would never approve, and they have done more in months, than the town has done in 100 years. Our forefathers did not have the foresight to purchase harbor property to install town docks. We do not have a Town Marina, though I've been told that a portion of the land on Margin Street (now Roys) was offered to Harry Ritter, when he was Harbor Master, for town floats, and it was voted down by area residents. NIMBY wins again. Well, this time they didn't!

Let's take the time and money the special interest groups are using to fight the Marina, and let's do something exciting with the Haggerty property. A few things immediately come to mind; Let's apply for a special permit, do some dredging, and put in a Town Marina if possible! How about gas pumps? Okay, Okay, I'm dreaming. I'll settle for a paint job and some landscaping! I hate explaining to friends and clients when they ask, "Who owns that dump on the water, what a shame," that we do, the residents of Cohasset! Where is our civic pride? It's too bad the town (that's us by the way) owns the second ugliest piece of property on the harbor. I've heard the ugliest one is being bought as we speak, and I can't wait to see the renovation plans. There is still a need for more dock and mooring space for residents. Why don't you do a spread on the "New Cohasset Harbor" that is available for use by Cohasset residents, not just select residents, and speak to the harbor businesses on what the future holds, what plans they have. I think that would be ink well spent!

Thanks for great party

TO THE EDITOR:

As seniors at Cohasset High School and recent attendees of Cohasset's Post Prom All Night Party, we would like to thank all those who made such an event possible. One entire wing of the school was truly transformed, as we alternately found ourselves in a New Orleans cafe, a dance floor, a casino, and a "chill room" with pillows and a movie screen. The amount of hard work and dedication which was required to stage the party must have been truly monumental. The party was a great time and a wonderful way to cap the entire night.

Again, thank you to all the parents and volunteers who donated their time to make our night a great one.

A Mid-spring's tower comedy

William Shakespeare once wrote: "All the world's a stage./And all the men and women merely players."

Never have I heard those words ring as true as they did at last Thursday night's planning board meeting.

And how Ol' Willie would've loved to have been there.

INTO MY OWN

FRANK DICESARE

How the master bard would have clenched his quill when Jonathan Warner cast the single, dissenting vote, denying a special permit to allow a 180-foot cell tower to be erected near the Scituate - Cohasset town line.

For those of us in attendance, who listened to the one-hour discussion and watched the board's semantics, it was a meeting worthy of Queen Elizabeth, an amalgamation of Hamlet, Macbeth, Julius Caesar, The Merchant of Venice, Henry the Fifth, and a tinge — just a dash — of Romeo and Juliet. It was pure dramatic performance, ending with Warner standing as tall as the tower he defeated.

And with utmost apologies to history's greatest writer, I humbly submit to you, dear readers, what I believe would have been the way Shakespeare would have reported the final 15 minutes of the hearing.

CAST OF SCITUATE CHARACTERS:

Julius Caesar - Planning board chairman William Limbacher

Hamlet - Planning board member Jonathan Warner

Lady Macbeth - Planning board member Elinor Foley

Ophelia - Planning board member Jane O'-Sullivan

Shylock - Local developer Stephen Bjorklund

Juliet Capulet - Town planner Laura Harbottle

King Henry V - Scituate resident Torin Sweeney

Soothsayer - Planning board secretary Marilyn O'Brien

SETTING:

Scituate Town Hall, June 3, 1999.

A group of about 25 Scituate and Cohasset residents assemble themselves outside the selectmen's hearing room. They linger in uncertainty as the planning board emerges from its quarters. They have just concluded a seven-and -a-half-minute recess which, to the residents, will determine the final outcome of the dreaded cell tower. Enter King as the residents surround him.

KING: Once more unto the hearing room, dear friends, once more./Or close this special permit with our neighbors united. For the tower is afoot!/Follow your spirit and your abutting homes and upon this charge/Cry, "God for the greenbelt! Scituate and Cohasset."

Residents reconvene in the selectman's hearing room as Shylock remains offstage in the corridor. Tied to his side is a sack of ducats (gold coins) which he hopes to multiply with the proposed tower. As Caesar is about to enter the hearing room, clad in a while toga and olive wreath, he hears the voice of a soothsayer.

CAESAR: Who is it in the hall that calls on me?/I hear the tongue of a soothsayer who can multi-task as a secretary/Cry 'Caesar!' Speak! Caesar is turned to hear."

SOOTHSAYER: Beware of the dissenting vote.

Planning board officials enter the hearing room stage left. Enter Lady Macbeth, Ophelia, Caesar, Juliet and Hamlet. The board takes their respective places at their table with Caesar in the middle.

CAESAR: The tower is in my will: I will not relent./That is enough to satisfy its by-laws./Which with its 15-foot antennas and lattice-style structure/Doth run its power to the cell phone user.

HAMLET (aside to the audience): To dissent or not to dissent, that is the question. [Then to the board] O, my engineering soul! The tower is out of place in its proposed location.

OPHELIA: There's rosemary, that's for your words./And there is pansies, that's for your thoughts.

HAMLET: Get thee to a nunnery! I have heard of your towers, well enough./This town hath given you one tower and you wish to raise another./I say we will have no more towers in the viewshed./Those that are raised already — all but one shall stand./The rest of the greenbelt shall keep as it is./To a nunnery, go.

LADY MACBETH (to Hamlet): Thou art not a man but a boy./Come, tower that tend on wireless communication, unsex me here./Erect thyself on the proposed location.

HAMLET: Words, words, words.

In a vain attempt at blank verse, Lady Macbeth and Hamlet strain to exchange pleasantries in iambic pentameter. Juliet reads a list of conditions to the board with which the applicant Tower Ventures of Providence, R.I. must comply. When she is finished she turns to the audience.

JULIET (aside to the audience): 'Tis but the tower that is your enemy./What's wireless communication? /It is not strobe light nor equipment pad, nor fall zone, nor anything else belonging to a tower./What's in a tower? That which we call a structure by any other name would look as sweet./So this tower would, were it not a tower called.

HAMLET: For those who bear the sight of whips and antennas of a tower./The location's wrong.

JUILET (to Hamlet): Blistered be thy tongue to speak ill of the tower.

CAESAR: Enough! Are we all ready? Is there anything amiss? That Caesar and his Senate must redress?

ALL: No, my lord.

Caesar then asks for a vote on the tower. Caesar, Lady Macbeth and Ophelia vote yea and cast their eyes upon the Prince of Denmark.

HAMLET: No. No, I say as sure as it is spring./I say to you all — the tower's the thing.

Caesar, forgetting who he is talking to in the midst of all the drama, speaks.

CAESAR: Et tu, Brute? — Then fall Caesar to the planning board's table.

At that point Shylock is heard from the corridor bemoaning the vote. He voices his disappointment to a local reporter.

SHYLOCK: My tower! O, my ducats! O, my tower! I am a developer. Hath not a developer eyes? Hath not a developer hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions?/If you prick us, do we not bleed? If you tickle us, do we not laugh? If you poison us, do we not die?/And if you deny us our special permit for a tower, shall we not revenge?

The assembled crowd congratulates Hamlet for his courageous vote which, unlike the play that bears his name, ends the performance with resident jubilation as opposed to the prince's untimely death. Juliet stands in the hearing room, contemplating the prince's vote.

JULIET: O happy tower! This is thy sheath; there topple and let us sigh.

Assembling his fellow citizens outside the town hall, the King speaks.

KING: We few, we happy few, we band of neighbors./For he today that battled this board with me/Shall be my brother.

Exit.

The simple process of composting

(A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by the Cohasset Recycling Committee)

While partaking of some of the "Black Gold," as it is called, at the RTF yesterday, this writer was asked by a townsperson driving by if what I was shoveling into containers for the car was compost. The gentleman was clearly impressed by the rich dark pile of mulch, and I encouraged him to partake also. There's a good chance the passerby was also quite impressed by the some 60-foot-long piece of sparkling new technology poised by, or rather parked at the edge of our huge pile of compost; this wheeled and trailered piece of environmental machinery, painted green, of course, gulps our intermediate-stage compost at one end, sifts, brushes, and "purifies" it, and conveys it out the other end for home consumption. Hopefully, you too have seen this wondrous device [only here occasionally] at the RTF? But the very simple process of composting is full of wonder all by itself.

During the Vietnam War era and its back-to-the-earth movement, this writer participated in home composting demonstrations that were both fascinating to the public and immensely satisfying to demonstrate. It was discovered that most people don't always think about, but were happy to be reminded of, this basic fascinating fact of life, that organic matter breaks down, breaks down — dare we say recycles? — in a way that is both the essence of the word natural and in a way that is very useful to us, especially to those of us who enjoy gardening and landscaping.

Most matter is organic, right? Nature's plan is both simple and perfect. The world of nature is cyclical — birthing, growing, dying, regenerating, over and over. The world of man is a bit slower in its cycling and just a bit less efficient, if not to say less aesthetic — witness the plastic that hangs around for decades, to mention just one of our things.

Time to go already! This subject to be continued. Keep Nantucket's huge new composting facility in mind; more on that later. Also: did you realize that the Town of Hull has no recycling program like ours? Even though Hull is practically an island? See you next time.

All-night party a success

TO THE EDITOR:

On Friday night, June 4, the graduating class of Cohasset High School attended their Senior Prom at the Long Wharf Marriott Hotel. After returning from Boston, they were welcomed at an All Night Party at the High School.

The night was the culmination of innumerable hours of planning and work on the part of the senior class parents — a truly dedicated and talented group of people. The Mardi Gras spectacular was funded by donations from the community and local businesses.

We have listed many contributors over the past few weeks in a series of news articles; however, we would like to express once again our heartfelt gratitude to every parent, volunteer, business, community leaded and school official for the tremendous commitment and concern for our beloved Class of '99.

A mystery solved — what do women want?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

An anthropology professor at Syracuse University has rediscovered one of those basic facts of life that, until recently, had gone uncontested since the time of Adam and Eve.

In spite of Betty Friedan and Gloria Steinem, men still like pretty girls and women prefer boys who spring for dinner.

It took the professor, John Townsend, 17 years of dogged research to turn up that fact.

Hey, I could have told him in 10 minutes over a beer at Haddad's Ocean Cafe.

One of the crucial points in his study came when he showed a series of pictures (no, not those kind) to his students, male and female, at Syracuse.

The gentlemen in Townsend's survey selected the pretty girls, even if they flipped Big Macs for a living, and the ladies went for the man with the biggest paycheck no matter what he looked like.

Two of the photos were of women, a homely one dressed in a white silk blouse, Navy blazer and a Rolex watch, the unofficial uniform of the successful woman of the '90s, and a pretty one in the uniform of a "well-known hamburger chain."

Two of the photos were of men, a homely one in a dress shirt, designer paisley tie and the inevitable Rolex and a handsome and obviously underpaid one in the uniform of the same "well-known hamburger chain."

Then he asked the students which ones they would like to date, sleep with or even marry if they had their druthers.

Townsend, who grew up in the '60s when the first flowers of feminism were blooming, called the results "startling."

I, who did my research when ice covered most of the earth, call them "inevitable."

The gentlemen in Townsend's survey selected the pretty girls, even if they flipped Big Macs for a living, and the ladies went for the man with the biggest paycheck no matter what he looked like.

"For women," said Townsend, "the high status costume made the homely model acceptable as a date, but he was not acceptable when he wore the fast-food uniform.

"Men were not willing to date the homelier model in either costume. But for the women, the blazer and Rolex made the homelier model more acceptable than the best-looking model in the fast-food uniform."

Townsend revealed his findings in a book called "What Women Want - What Men Want: Why the Sexes Still See Love and Commitment so Differently."

Professor Townsend is to be congratulated for finally discovering the answer to the question that has eluded the scientific community, if not the rest of us, for years.

Wasn't it Sigmund Freud himself who confessed that:

"Despite my 30 years of research into the feminine soul, I have not been able to answer . . . the great question that has never been answered: What does a woman want?"

Turns out they just should have listened to Audrey Hepburn, the movie actress who can certainly be described as pretty and who once advised the women around her:

"If you want to conquer the world (and men), try a dash of grace, a flash of charm, a modest flirtation. Remember, the tigress who knows when to roar also knows when to purr."

No elephants on the town common after all

Circus idea is nixed

By DeAnna Putnam
STAFF WRITER

Fear not — there will be no elephants rampaging through the Cohasset Common anytime in the near future. In fact, there will no circus at all on the Common anytime in the near feature.

"The Chamber of Commerce had no intention of trashing the common with elephants," Town Manager Mark Haddad said at Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen's meeting.

Two weeks ago, Patti Keville of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce appeared before selectmen requesting permission to hold two old-time circus shows on the common in late August. Apparently, the elephant scare was misinformation gone bad — a casual remark made by Selectman Merle Brown to Keville which got lost in the discussion.

Brown had asked Keville if the circus suggested by the Chamber of Commerce had all the things a circus usually has — such as lions, tigers and elephants, for example.

"This particular circus doesn't even have elephants," Town Manager Mark Haddad said, "There were never going to be elephants on the common."

Selectman Diane Sullivan said Keville did, if only by accident, assent to the inclusion of elephants in response to Brown's comment.

"This particular circus doesn't even have elephants."
—Town Manager Mark Haddad

Because of the uproar the elephant rumor created in Cohasset, the Chamber has given up the circus idea altogether.

The issue raised questions with selectmen about the use of the Cohasset Common in general.

"There is a view out there that the common has a historical value," Selectman Tom Callahan said.

Sullivan raised questions about the evolution of the annual art festival to be held on the common starting next weekend.

"I think it's becoming somewhat unrelated to an art festival," she said.

Selectmen were mostly concerned with the growing number of food vendors showing up for the festival year after year.

"They're starting to try to get more sophisticated artists, though," Selectman Brown said, " and people like to eat when they go to these events."

Selectmen agreed to set up a time to talk with the South Shore Art Center after this year's festival is over to discuss what constitutes an event appropriate to the Cohasset Common — and where the festival may have been getting off track of those guidelines.

Cohasset is not the only town questioning the proper use of its historic gathering places.

This week Marshfield turned down an alcohol and entertainment license request made by AIDS Camp Relief Coalition's for an event at the Marshfield Fairgrounds. The event was to raise money to send children with AIDS to a camp on Martha's Vineyard and was scheduled for Sunday, July 11.

ACRC has raised money for the AIDS camp for the past four years and is made up of 48 motorcycle groups, including members of the "Blue Knights" — law enforcement officers who are motorcycle enthusiasts — as well as many Harley-Davidson Owners' groups like South Shore Hog, the Ladies of Harley, Leather & Lace and "Mean and Clean," a group of clean and sober motorcycle owners.

At this time, ACRC will still head their motorcycle drive from North Quincy to Marshfield and will still gather at the fairgrounds. However, the James Montgomery Band which was scheduled to perform that afternoon will no longer be on the agenda.

Five residents living in the vicinity of the fairgrounds came to protest ACRC's event.

"We've accepted the flea market, the Boy Scouts and the powwow," Madeleine McDonald of 95 Main St. said, "This [event] is not agricultural nor horticultural and is not in the best interest of the residents. We would have had more people here tonight if we had more notice."

DEP agrees to CHL hearing in Cohasset

Could take 6-12 months to set up

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) is not required to hold a public hearing to discuss the closure plan submitted by the owners of the Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill. But DEP will hold a public hearing in Cohasset thanks to some persistent lobbying from state Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, D-Cohasset.

The hearing is the result of a two-year effort by Murray to carry out a request of the 1997 annual town meeting. Voters at town meeting approved an article asking Murray to submit a bill to the state Legislature requesting a public hearing by DEP to discuss any effort by CHL to implement a closure and post-closure plan.

Murray submitted Bill 2384 — an act to force DEP to conduct a public hearing with a 30 day comment period for the CHL closure plan — to the Legislature where it languished in committee for two years. On May 17, 1999, the Natural Resources and Agricultural Committee held a hearing on House Bill 2384. Murray continued to discuss the possibility of a hearing with DEP even as the bill wound its way through the Legislature.

"I called them several times and said it was very important that they hold this hearing so people's concerns could be heard," Murray said. "People at DEP said they couldn't promise anything, and would need some time to work on this. I told them they had a week-and-a-half. Then someone from DEP came back and said I had my hearing."

Murray said she plans to keep House Bill 2384 alive in case DEP tries to renege on its promise to hold the hearing. DEP officials told her they would need 6-12 months to arrange the hearing.

"I want to keep the bill in place in case I need to pop it back onto the floor if I have to," Murray said. "I will do whatever I have to do for my three towns."

John K. McNabb Jr., vice president of SAFE, said Murray did a great job of pressuring DEP to hold the hearing. He said it seemed that DEP agreed to the hearing only when it became obvious that the Natural Resources Committee planned to give House Bill 2384 a favorable recommendation.

McNabb said he was wary of DEP's promise and would prefer to see House Bill 2384 passed to ensure that DEP holds a hearing. McNabb is also wondering whether DEP plans to hold a 30-day public comment period after the hearing.

"I haven't seen anything in writing yet, so I don't know exactly what their promising to do," McNabb said.

According to McNabb, the timetable for the hearing creates some potential problems for CHL. In the closure plan, CHL states its plan to begin the closure work by the end of the summer. But if DEP waits 12 months to hold a hearing and make a decision, CHL may have to postpone its plans.

McNabb said the hearing comes at a good time, because DEP just ended a several-year moratorium on new and expanded landfills. Six landfills proposals may receive approval from DEP, McNabb said. If CHL were still open, it might be able to receive DEP approval for an expansion, McNabb said.

Several public officials and private citizens have assailed the closure plan as inadequate and dangerous to the local environment. The anti-landfill group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE), the board of selectmen, and the water commission have each sent letters to DEP Commissioner Lauren expressing displeasure with the closure plan.

SAFE met with the board of health on June 8 to try and convince them to also send a letter to DEP requesting the hearing. SAFE is also pressuring the health board to begin site assignment hearings, which were originally scheduled to begin on June 8, 1998. The site assignment hearings have been postponed so that the town's CHL-subcommittee can work out a closure plan with the owners of the landfill. The CHL-subcommittee meets only in closed-door sessions and its members have refused to discuss any details of their meetings over the past year with CHL-owner Paul Barry and his attorneys.

McNabb said state regulations require DEP to approve CHL's closure plan within 60 days. He added that he is not sure why DEP may wait as long as 12 months to render a decision about the closure plan.

Community blood drive

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, June 23. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House at 23 North Main St. from 2 to 7 p.m. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3 to 5 p.m. The Red Cross depends on regular donations to meet the ongoing need for blood and blood by-products.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset, so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and especially needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time, or if you have any questions, call Carol Riley at 383-6215 or Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

Private funding for school programs floated

But legal hurdles need to be cleared

By Josh Myerov
CORRESPONDENT

With the recent budget shortfall of several hundred thousand dollars, questions have arisen as to what will become of school activities and services scheduled to dissolve this fall.

While some taxpayers may have come to terms with the reality that cuts will be made, the school committee intends to do everything in its power to save as many of those programs as possible.

For school committee member Pat Martin, that means putting into high gear the alternative funding subcommittee that she established last year with the support of the PSO, school councils, the chamber of commerce and others.

The subcommittee's goal is simple: to identify and tap into potential funding sources which could provide additional monies for Cohasset school programs. Among the laundry list of alternative funding possibilities are grants, corporate solicitations, matching gift options, and stock donations.

At last week's school committee gathering, however, legal and ethical concerns were on everyone's minds. How public can privately funded programs be? How public should they be? What role can the schools play in distributing private donations?

While committee members expressed varying perspectives on many such hypothetical questions, all agreed that Superintendent Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey's request for official counsel on the matter would answer at least the legal questions.

Nonetheless, once some very basic questions are answered, the logistics of operating the alternative funding subcommittee will still need to be worked out.

For example, the proposed cuts to the school system are across the board and include everything from custodial services and administrative costs to library books and art supplies. Replacement funding sources, however, may have their own criteria for which activities are worth their money and which are not.

School committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo pointed out that "it's dangerous to allow other groups to fundraise in our name." At the same time though, committee members agreed that the alternative funding subcommittee should not function as an approval board, with the power to reject or accept funding offers.

Instead, DeGiacomo said the alternative funding subcommittee is meant to serve as a clearinghouse for potential contributors. "One of the roles of the committee," said DeGiacomo, "would be to help those [charitable] groups understand the immediate needs of the schools and to match them up with the appropriate programs."

"One of the roles of the committee, would be to help those [charitable] groups understand the immediate needs of the schools and to match them up with the appropriate programs."

MARK DEGIACOMO, SCHOOL COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

School committee members however recognized that donators may not share similar priorities with the schools and may not be so flexible with their money to take the school's recommendations to heart.

Sports, for instance, may be the best example of the difficulties that such a scenario inevitably creates. The odds of finding a private contributor to sports programs such as soccer, freshman basketball, ice hockey, skiing, or sailing (all to be cut) is probably much greater than finding contributors, for say, a daytime custodial position (also to be cut).

School committee vice-chairman Kathy Ofsthun said school "priorities will become a matter of the haves and the have-nots."

The school committee also mentioned that complications arise when considering alternative funding sources within the various sports. A sport like soccer, for example, may be fortunate enough to have numerous contributors, all of whom concede management and responsibility of the program to the athletic department.

But, a sport like sailing, whose program could conceivably be supported by a single wealthy individual or a lone corporate sponsor, may prove more difficult to keep independent from outside interests.

A final legal issue was raised concerning Title IX, which guarantees equal access to public school activities and services. If, for example, a donator was willing to support a girl's soccer team but no such contributor could be found for a boy's team, the creation of one team but not the other is quite possibly illegal.

"If it's a program that's sanctioned by the public school's," said Superintendent Malvey, "it has to be open to all students."

METCO brings diversity to homogeneous Cohasset

By Josh Myerov
CORRESPONDENT

The METCO program was initiated in Cohasset in 1968 both as a means to create diversity in a homogenous white suburban community and to allow a few inner-city students the opportunity to enjoy a quality public school education, school officials say.

At the time, school committee chairman Mark DiGiacomo was in the 7th grade.

"If you think Cohasset is an isolated community now," said DeGiacomo, "you should have seen it back then. I think it was the first time I'd ever seen a black person."

And while 31 years ago may seem like ancient history to some, the reality is that the same exact scenario is quite possible today if, for whatever reason (i.e. budget cuts), the METCO program were discontinued.

The METCO discussion was part of a new agenda at school committee meetings. The school committee is setting aside up to an hour, starting a 8 p.m. during their meetings, to fully air an issue or topic. The public is encouraged to attend. The METCO program was the first of what the committee hopes will be many in-depth reports on school activities, issues, programs or concerns.

The METCO numbers say it all. In 1994 (the last year such statistics are available) 47 non-white students attended Cohasset Public Schools. According to a "diversity profile" for that year, every single one of them was a METCO student.

In other words, if it weren't for the METCO program bringing inner-city black and Hispanic students to Cohasset's classrooms five years ago, all 1177 Cohasset students would have been white.

Today, 49 METCO students board buses from Boston sidewalks each school day and make the long commute to the Cohasset schools. Junior Marcina Boone and sophomore Antoine Miller are two of them. Both have attended Cohasset public schools since the first grade and both have struggled to balance their schoolwork and extracurricular activities with an arduous, often unreliable commute.

Marcina credited her Cohasset host family, the Afshar's, for her success, saying "that's why I'm here." As a basketball and football cheerleader, Marcina said a late bus would make life a lot easier on her. Antoine, a member of the wresting team and the child of a 1980 METCO graduate, said that his host family, the Gledhill's, have "treated me like a part of their family."

"If you think Cohasset is an isolated community now, you should have seen it back then. I think it was the first time I'd ever seen a black person."

— School committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo

According to Jones, the first stop on the high school bus route is at 5:30 AM, 6:30 AM on the elementary school route.

The cost to the Cohasset taxpayer is a matter of debate. The state's reimbursement of close to $3000 per student for the town brings in a total of almost $143,000. According to some, that translates to a net gain of $47,000 once transportation, supply, and administrative costs are deducted.

METCO coordinator Yvonne Jones said that METCO students only fill empty class seats, never placing an extra burden on teachers or taxpayers. "I can only bring in students," said Jones, "based on what the principal tells me."

Superintendent Edward (Ted) Malvey agreed. "Because the students are dispersed into usable classroom space, we can accommodate a certain number of students without any increased cost to us."

Others, however, like resident Roy Fitzsimmons, cited $7,100 as the per student cost in the Cohasset public school system, meaning the town loses more than $4000 on each METCO participant.

DeGiacomo concurred that the state should provide additional funding, but regardless, he said, the program is far too beneficial to threaten its continuation.

The benefit to the METCO students themselves is evident. Statewide, 86% of METCO graduates go on to post secondary education, compared with a Boston public school average of 65%.

In Cohasset all five graduates will be continuing their education, two at Northeastern University and one at the University of Massachusetts. Of the 24 middle and high school METCO students this past year, 7 made the honor roll.

If there's one place the METCO program has fallen short, at least in the Cohasset schools, it would be their third goal: To provide closer understanding and cooperation between urban and suburban parents and other citizens in the Metropolitan Boston area.

While Jones credited the host family program, the PSO, and the diversity committee for their role in supporting METCO, she said Cohasset school administrators need to make more of an effort to involve METCO parents in the school's policies and activities.

As a pledge of support for the program, the school committee agreed to hold one meeting each year at Roxbury Community College to foster better communication between Cohasset schools and METCO parents.

"A lot of parents," Jones said, "don't come [to school activities] because they don't feel comfortable....We need to meet each other half way."

Cohasset Carillon 75th anniversary celebration

The 75th Annual Series of Summer Carillon Recitals will be given on the 57-bell Taylor carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, on 10 successive Sunday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., beginning June 27 and continuing through Aug. 29. The public is invited to attend free of charge, and may bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers. Program booklets and carillon brochures will be available in a stand by the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, and will also be handed out on the Common and at other listening places mentioned in the program booklet. In case of rain, the recitals may be heard from parked cars. The church is situated on a cliff overlooking Main Street and the Cohasset Common.

This is a special year for the Cohasset Carillon: it is the 75th anniversary of both the instrument and the longest continuously running carillon recital series in North America. An anniversary souvenir program booklet is being issued to mark the occasion, and free copies will be available at each recital.

The first program will be performed June 27 by Gordon Slater, Dominion Carillonneur of Canada, whose home instrument is the carillon in the Peace Tower at the Houses of Parliament in Ottawa. Other recitalists on successive Sunday evenings will be Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of St. Stephen's, Cohasset; John Courter of Berea College, Berea, Ky.; Beverly Buchanan, Carillonneur of Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn.; Helen Hawley of Lawrence, Kan.; George Gregory, Carillonneur of the First Christian Church, San Antonio, Texas; Janet Dundore, Carillonneur of St. Thomas' Church, Whitemarsh, Pa.; Todd Fair, Acting Carillonist of the University of Michigan, Daniel Kerry Kehoe, Carillonneur of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. On the weekend of Aug. 28/29, a special festival will take place, featuring a recital of 1920s music by Sally Slade Warner and Mary Kennedy, Assistant Cohasset Carillonneur, an address by Calvin Coolidge (in the person of actor James Cooke), a clambake, and a recital by Milford Myhre, carillonneur of the Bok Singing Tower, Lake Wales, Fla. Following each of the summer recitals is a tower tour and carillon demonstration for those interested.

For more information, call Sally Slade Warner at (978) 475-2599, or Mary Kennedy at (781) 383-9599, or the church office, (781) 383-1083.

Social Service League names new members

The Social Service League of Cohasset held its 87th annual meeting and luncheon May 13 at Walton Rodgers' Hall, St. Stephen's Church.

The current president, Motoko Deane, who will serve another term, announced the new officers and board of directors: vice president, Gail Stevens; treasurer, Kyle Lubitz; assistant treasurer, Denise Desmond; secretary, Carol Riley; personnel, Mary Hartwell.

Named to the board of directors were: Jeff Steele (Meals-on-Wheels Chair), Merle Graham (Nursing Chair), Margie Steele (Family Service Chair), Peg Tis, Eleanor Smith, Peg Schroeder, Barbara Cook, Betty O'Sullivan, Sydney Peterson, Sue Reardon, Selma Ingber, Amy Cutler, Sandra Halverson, Joanne Lennon and Mary Sullivan.

Annual reports were delivered by Social Worker Patricia Carleton, LICSW, Public Health Nurse; Judy Fitzsimmons, R.N.; and Consignment Shop Manager Andrea Merrill.

Hingham Symphony String Quartet, conducted by director Jin Kim, performed W.A. Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik." The musical presentation was followed by a buffet luncheon for about 70 Social Service League Consignment Shop, Meals-on-Wheels volunteers and members of the community.

Summer Solstice celebration at World's End

The Trustees of Reservations has announced that its 16th annual Summer Solstice Celebration will be held on Monday evening June 21, from 6 to 8 p.m. [If weather is questionable, please call the World's End Ranger Station at 781-749-8956 after 4 p.m.] So pack a picnic supper, load the entire family into the car and join many of your friends and neighbors atop Planter's Hill for a most entertaining evening.

Tractor-drawn hayrides will be offered from 6 to 8 p.m. The night's festivities will be highlighted by the musical entertainment of the Ecuadorian musical group Yarina which means "Remembrance." Yarina's members, who are descendants of the Incas, will perform a selection of colorful music on a pan pipe, wood flute, guitar and drum. As always, soft drinks and popcorn will be available and cookies will be provided for dessert.

An admission fee of $5 for members of the Trustees of Reservations and $7 for non-members will be charged to cover expenses. Children 12 years and under will be admitted free. Sorry, no dogs.

For more information about the Summer Solstice Celebration, please call Marge Balzotti at The Trustees' Southeast Regional office. Telephone: 781-821-2977, extension 110.

PLUMBING MUSINGS

by Philip Von Iderstein M.P. #8829

GLADES CLUB

The north end of our coastal town is a peninsula consisting of marshes, rocky out croppings, and hills covered with scrub oaks and bushes. This section of shoreline has remained pristine and unchanged for many years because it is owned by a private club and few changes can be made without every club members' approval. There is a large hotel-like structure dating back to the nineteenth century that stands at the northern most end of the land and looks out to the next town's harbor and lighthouse. It is a relic of the past and stands as a reminder of times gone by when a few summer residents had a lot of money and the townspeople lived off the land, the sea and any odd jobs they could find. I work out there occasionally, and it's not an unpleasant feeling to return in your mind to a time long ago when things were simpler, although perhaps harder for a lot of the people.

As you become older you yearn for the times when you were younger and life seemed easier and less hectic. The Glades is one of those places where you can turn back the clock to a time when you could still daydream.

Is Your Back Getting In The Way Of Good Health?

Ideally, good health should be natural. Given a chance, the body can work seeming miracles. But if something interferes with normal body functions, natural health is harder to achieve. All too often, the back is the source of health problems. That sudden twist or fall you paid no attention to could have forced a vertebra out of position. And in the process, the nerves that spread out from between the vertebrae can no longer properly serve body organs. The result? Poor health. To make sure your back isn't getting in the way of good health, get a chiropractic checkup.

Track teams finish strong

By Andrew Mahoney
STAFF WRITER

The Cohasset High track team wrapped up an impressive season as Brian Krupczak, Ashley Ulmer and Daniel Trowers all qualified for this past week's all-state meet, although they did not place.

In the state class meet on May 29 at Norwell, Krupczak was fifth in the 200. Ulmer high jumped five feet to take fourth, while Trowers was fourth in the long jump with a leap of 19'7.

Others who did well in the state class meet were Morgan Hurley, who did the 300 low hurdles in 50.8, while Maureen Equi was right behind in 51.4. Catherine Flaherty ran the 400 in 1:06, and Stefan VandeWeil had a personal best in the 110 high hurdles with a time of 16.8

Freshman Peter Maitlin was 10th in the javelin with a personal best toss of 155'11. Maura Duffy triple jumped 31 feet, and Craig Parker made it to the semifinals in the 200. Alyssa McNamara threw the javelin 99'3 and the discus 80'11. The boys 4x100 team of Krupczak, Trowers, Parker and Khalil Madyun took sixth, while the girls squad of Tamara DeVaughn, Kerry McCarthy, Duffy and Flaherty had a personal best by two seconds of 53.7

"The kids had a great year," said coach Al LaFountain. "The program's really improved."

The middle school also concluded a successful season. Megan Rizzotti finished the 100 meters in 13.5 to be league champion. Ian Kidder was third in the 400 and high jumped a school record 5'2. Shelly Carter was fourth in the hurdles. Ross Lappen took fifth in the mile.

Lindsey Grossman was third in 800. For the boys, Scott Faber took fourth in 800 and Jared Krupczak was fifth in 200. Deirdre Bigeley was fourth in the 400 .

Legion squad hopes for a long summer (post) season of playing

By Barry McGurn
CORRESPONDENT

If Scott Arnold could just hang in another 15 years or so. Arnold, the coach, organizer and recruiter of the Cohasset-Scituate George H. Mealy Post # 118 Legion team, admits it's a lot of work running a legion baseball team.

"It's tiresome," said Arnold, when reached by phone on Sunday night. "These kids play two months out of the year. I go year-round. I do all the recruiting. I do the fundraising - with help from the legion. It costs us about three to four thousand a season just to put this program on."

But later Arnold laughed.

"I have nine-month old triplet boys (Scott, Sean and Christian) at home, so I'm going to hang in there until it's their turn to play."

The ages range from around 16, said Arnold, to players that cannot be 19 by August 1. So, this group even includes some college freshmen.

The George H. Mealy team plays against six other teams in the Norfolk County and opened up last night against Braintree.

This Cohasset-Scituate edition, in its fourth season of existence, should be improved from last season, when Arnold's 8-12 team just missed the playoffs. But there is reason for optimism: last year's 8-12 campaign followed 3-17 and 5-15 records the first two years.

Based on this consistent progression, Arnold was asked if he expected the team to be over .500 this summer.

"We do," said the suddenly confident-sounding fourth-year coach. "We expect to be. We've got a lot of talent, we've got a lot of returning ballplayers."

Arnold, however, wanted to refrain from mentioning ballplayers' names before the season began.

As far as the rest of league?

"Everybody's pretty much secretive at this point," said Arnold, who lives with his wife, Christine, a Boston school teacher, and three sons, in Scituate. "We're that competitive. There's really no (team) that's better than the others. Every year is like a rebuilding year. You get the same kids over and over but you're always building new kids to your program. So, if you do it right you should be effective every year."

Effective is what Arnold eventually hopes to be every year. Right now he is still building. Four years ago, though, Arnold, himself a former legion player at Hingham and high school player at Cohasset, was voted as the builder.

At the legion "it was brought to our attention that kids in the town wanted to go back to playing legion baseball," said Arnold, a Lebanon-Grenada veteran, "We had a team 19 years ago.

AAU squad takes hoop scene by storm

By Bob Buckley
CORRESPONDENT

Look out Memphis, Tennessee. Here come the Mass Metro Pops.

When one thinks of AAU basketball, there is a stereotype of inner city teams being coached by basketball gurus recruiting the best players from all over the state and beating everyone else silly. Paul Wholey and the rest of the cast of the Mass Metro Pops is changing that.

The Mass Metro Pops 13 year old team has taken the rest of the AAU scene by storm playing in seven tournaments this spring and compiling an impressive 27-1 record.

The team is now headed for the nationals in Memphis on June 26 and hopefully before the end of the July 4 weekend, the team will be coming home with a championship.

"The best thing about our program right now is that we are having success and it is all local kids from the South Shore," said Wholey, who is the Marshfield High basketball coach. "We are proving we have some outstanding talent right here on the South Shore."

Wholey, who along the with Tom Cuddihy, Leo Coppens and Chuck Schneider coaches the Mass Metro Pops team, became involved in AAU basketball to make sure his sons, Michael and Bryan, had a place to play during the summer. Now, he is traveling across the country with a talented group of all-stars who enjoy playing within the team concept.

"We have a group of kids who are eager to learn," said Wholey. "We have practices every Wednesday night and they want to be there, they are starving for basketball knowledge. We have a team that consistently is changing defenses and have a specially designed offense which is not the easiest

COHASSET RECREATION

REGISTRATION FOR LACROSSE CLINIC '99

The Cohasset Recreation Department is now taking registrations for a full-contact boy's rules lacrosse clinic the week of July 19 through July 23. The clinic will be for grades 4 to 6 from 7:30 until 9 a.m. and grades 7 to 8 from 9 until 10:30 a.m. at Miliken Field. The fee per participant is $58 and checks can be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. The fee includes the tournament entry fee for Carver, Mass. Tournament on Saturday, July 24 and a Cohasset lacrosse T-shirt.

Mr. Chuck Jaffee will direct this unique lacrosse opportunity. Details regarding the lacrosse tournament in Carver on Saturday, July 24, will be forth coming. We will carpool to this tournament and signed forms permit participants to engage in both the week-long clinic and tournament/travel.

Registration forms can be obtained at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

BASEBALL CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 through 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Camp has been contracted again this year to provide the baseball camp, which will be held for one week, beginning Monday, June 28 through Friday, July 22, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over, and half-day, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5 and 6 year olds (age 7 optional for either half or full-day camp).

The week long camp costs $140 per child for the full day, and $75 per child for the half-day program.

Participants should bring lunch, snacks, and any drinks other than water they might want. Please bring your own glove, which should be marked with your name.

ADULT EVENING TENNIS LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis classes for all levels of instruction by calling 383-4109.

Classes will be scheduled as follows: beginners, 6 to 7 p.m., Tuesday; intermediates, 7 to 8 p.m., Tuesday; advanced, 6 to 7 p.m., Thursday; beginners, 7 to 8 p.m., Thursday.

Other classes will be scheduled as demand indicates.

All sessions are four weeks in duration and will cost $40 per person, per session. Teaching, will be Amanda Gontarz of Cohasset Recreation Department's tennis staff. Participants who do not own or have access to a racquet, should indicate this at the time of registration. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis. Another evening will be made available should demand indicate.

SUMMER BASKETBALL CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the South Shore Basketball School will sponsor a summer basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two camp sessions will be available this July. Boys and girls, ages 8 through 11, will have camp from Tuesday, July 6 through July 9, at Cohasset High School's Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the four- day camp is $120. The full-week camp, for boys and girls ages 12 through 15, will be held Monday, July 12 through Friday, July 16 at the Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the five day camp is $150.

Brochures and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Town Hall, Recreation Department office.

VIP SOCCER CAMP REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4 and 5 year olds and meets from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 19 to July 23. The cost is $50 per week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 19 to July 23 for 6 and 7 year olds. The cost is $80 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the Front Field of Cohasset High School. For brochures and registration forms, please come to the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

SOUTH SHORE SOCCER CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department is now accepting applications for South Shore Soccer Camp for boys and girls ages 8 to 18. This is the South Shore Soccer Camp's ninth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp, it is suggested that you contact the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, town hall, or call 383-4109, in the near future. Brochures and registration forms are available at the recreation office.

South Shore Soccer will be offered to both boys and girls Monday through Friday, Aug. 2 to Aug. 6, and Aug. 9 to Aug. 13. Should a camper wish to attend both camps, this is now possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camps must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Cohasset's Miliken Field. The cost for the camp is $195 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players for the New England area.

Third annual Cohasset C of C Networking Golf Tourney

Join us for the third annual Networking Golf Tournament to be held on Tuesday, June 22 at Widows Walk in Scituate. Following the golf, we will adjourn to Chester's at the Mill Wharf overlooking Scituate Harbor for lunch, networking and presentation of prizes and raffle giveaways.

The tournament will begin at 8:30 a.m. at Widows Walk and end with lunch at Chester's at 2 p.m. The full golf package (golf, cart and lunch) is $95 per person or $360 per foursome. If you would like to join us for golf only, the cost is $68. Lunch only is $30. The chamber has a limited supply of hole sponsorships available for a cost of $75.

For one reason or another, it just didn't fly. They canceled it after three seasons.

"When it came up at the meeting, they asked us if we could bring it back. Of course everybody pointed the finger at me and asked if I'd run with it and I told them I'd be delighted to. We just started from scratch, went out and built a program."

Ralph Berry, another former legion player, will join Arnold as an assistant for the second year in a row.

"It was one of the best times I've ever had in my life," said Arnold of his time playing legion baseball. "When you go to a team that takes the 18 very best athletes it can find, it's a whole completely different level of baseball."

Do the kids today appreciate it as much?

"They do," said Arnold. "Plenty of them come out and only 18 make it. (Ralph) and I are trying to prepare these guys for college and competitive play. We're working miracles here. Cohasset and Scituate students just aren't going to get the kind of recognition that we're helping them to achieve."

thing in the world to learn. But the kids love it and want to do more things."

Wholey's squad consists of players from seven different South Shore towns and each of them came with their own impressive basketball background.

It is safe to say that these kids are most likely the best on their own playground. The challenge Wholey and the rest of his staff faced was to blend these potential stars as a cohesive unit.

"It's easy to be the best player in your own school but learning the team concept that is where basketball starts to get hard," said Wholey. "These guys have to give up the ball, make the extra pass, cover for one another on defense or quite frankly they don't play. But these guys like to play that way and it shows on the court."

The players headed for Memphis include: Ben Camobreco of Duxbury, Sean Connolly of Cohasset, Joe Coppens of Rockland, Tom Cuddihy and Mike Garland of Scituate, Tom McIvor of Plymouth, Mike McCellan and Bryan Wholey of Marshfield, John Mohan of Norwell, Mike Ricketts of Hingham, Matt Schneider of Rockland and Jeremy Weisberger of Hingham.

The team also plays in a junior varsity league at South Shore Voke in Hanover and has complied a 7-2 mark against teams with much older and more experienced players. The team will play in a tournament this weekend at Bentley College in preparation for the Memphis tournament.

The Mass Metro Pops are named in memory of Wholey's father who was a major contributor to amateur basketball for many years.

There is also a high school aged team which qualified for the nationals that will be played in Disneyworld in July. This Mass Mmetro Pops team finished third in the state in order to qualify.

The members of that team include; Dan McNamara of Norwell, R.J. Gifford of Weymouth, Scott Norton and Mike Wholey of Marshfield, Brendan and Scott Gill of Bridgewater-Raynham, Diron Martin of Avon and Keith Motley of Stoughton. The team is coached by Wholey, Avon head coach Rich Gifford and Peter Gill.

Anyone who would like to make a contribution to offset the cost of the trips to the Nationals for both teams can do so. The address is Mass Metro Pops P.O. Box 1303 Marshfield,. Ma. 02050.

IT'S HAPPENING

Spaghetti supper at Beechwood Church

A spaghetti supper will be held at the Beechwood Church, in Cohasset, on Saturday, June 13 at 6:30. Dinner will include spaghetti with meatballs, rolls, salad, dessert and a beverage. Entertainment will be provided by the Beechwood Bell Choir. The supper is a fund-raiser for the Bell Choir, who will be participating in the 1999 American Guild of English Handbell Ringers' Conference, in Orono, Maine.

Getaway for two to Bermuda

The Cohasset Little League is selling raffle tickets for its annual fundraiser.

This year, the grand prize will be a getaway for two to Bermuda! Four Days, three nights at the lovely Grotto Bay Beach Resort. The prize includes roundtrip airfare on Delta Airlines, hotel taxes and transfers. The raffle tickets are available for a donation of $10 each or, if you'd prefer to increase your chances of winning, 6 for $50.

The drawing will take place June 26 at the Little League dance. Tickets are sold by the various Little League players, their coaches and their families.

If you would like additional tickets, call Mimi Maich at 383-6553 or Michele Sacks at 383-0417.

Come one, come all! Put your "red shoes on and dance the blues!" Cohasset Little League will be hosting an evening to dance the night away to your favorite music. Oldies, not so old and contemporary music that has filled our past and our present with the glorious memories of our not so distant youth! A full bar and light food will also be available. Get there on time to peruse and bid on those silent auction items for your kid's next birthday . . on air visit and lunch for two with EEI's A team Dale Arnold and Eddie Andleman, tickets to the Bruce Springstein concerts for their parents or perhaps a round of golf at Wollaston Golf Club in Milton for a threesome. Lunch and drinks on the 19th hole included!

Where: South Shore Community Center, Saturday, June 26, 8 p.m. to midnight, $25 per person.

The little League needs your support to maintain the field, refurbish equipment and make the program affordable to the boys and girls of Cohasset.

To purchase tickets, call Michele Sacks at 383-0417, Mimi Maich at 383-6553 or stop by Capt. Hugh's Snack Shack.

Tickets are $6.99 for adults and $3.50 for children. Reservations are needed. Call 383-0362.

Taverna '99 is coming

For almost 20 years the Greek Taverna of Cohasset has become synonymous with the Fourth of July weekend on the South Shore. This year the Taverna '99 Committee has decided to move the largest Greek festival in Southeastern Massachusetts ahead one weekend.

This year's annual festival will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 24, 25 and 26, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day. Admission is free! Rain or shine!

By moving the Taverna '99 away from the busy July 4 weekend, it is expected to draw record crowds this year. But the committee has been able to add more than 25 percent more space to accommodate the additional fairgoers, and there will be many new features and surprises promising to make Taverna '99 the largest and most exciting ever.

Friday, June 25, is Taverna's Senior Citizen Day. From noon to 3 p.m., seniors will receive a 15 percent discount on their meals and the soft drink is free. Come and join for a "Taste of Greece." Join them for Taverna!

Paul Revere rides again

The sound of hoof beats can be heard echoing through the halls of the Deer Hill School this week as Paul Revere rides again in a play, written and performed by the fifth grade, entitled the "Road to Rebellion." This original play highlights the people and events that led up to the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

This play comes at the culmination of an interdisciplinary unit of study by the students on the American Revolution. Using information learned in their social studies classes, the students worked together to write a class script. The children have also been busy in their music and art classes designing murals and learning songs to use in their production. This week the students are putting final touches on scenery, practicing their lines and trying on costumes. The play will be performed this Thursday, June 10, at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. in the Deer Hill cafeteria.

Celebration at Deer Hill

On Friday, June 11, there will be a grand celebration at Deer Hill School from 8:45-10:15 a.m.

All parents are invited to share with sixth-grade students in the Civil Rights Celebration, which is the culmination of six weeks of study. All sixth-grade students have participated in a unit of study which investigated the nature of prejudice and discrimination and the historical ramifications of the civil rights era in this country. After intensive study of the bus boycott in the South, students wrote letters to Rosa Parks. In an effort to understand history through primary sources, students wrote letters to newspapers in the South requesting readers to respond about personal experiences during the civil rights era.

Respondents ranged from Freedom Riders to Ku Klux Klan members: their personal responses will be on display. Students also requested respondents to send seeds to plant in our "Freedom Garden," which will be dedicated during the ceremony.

The study was also integrated with the art program, and students created original freedom mosaic murals, which will be dedicated in the courtyard at 9:15 a.m. Original student poetry, music and artwork will be on display in the Deer Hill Library, and we encourage you to share in a meaningful program.

Maritime studies program launched

Cohasset High School teachers are launching a new summer science course called "An Introduction to Maritime Studies." It is a three-week, on-the-water, interdisciplinary course in which students will learn to row, study marine biology and oceanography, and explore Boston harbor islands while earning CHS quarter science class credit.

The course, which runs from July 12 to 30, will take place in the context of a "Boat Journey" as students learn how to crew traditional pulling boats and turn them into research vessels. For two weeks these "research vessels" will explore three distinct local environments, the inner harbor, the outer harbor, and the salt marshes of Baily's Creek and the Gulf River.

The class will then spend a week exploring the islands of Boston Harbor. Students will be put to the test of applying to the harbor island environments the scientific principles learned in Cohasset.

The three-week program will conclude with an expedition and camping adventure on one of the harbor islands under the tutelage of the Hull Lifesaving Museum.

Students and parents interested in more information about the class should plan on attending an informational meeting Monday, June 14, 8 p.m. at Cohasset High School. The room location will be posted inside the front entrance. If unable to make the meeting, call Dave Magnussen or Jack Buckley at 383-6100.

The idea to launch a summer science class evolved out of a UMass/Boston research grant awarded to a team of five Cohasset teachers to study the efficacy of establishing an extended school year program, i.e. a summer Maritime Studies Program.

According to Magnussen, chairman of the math and science department., "This grant allows us to continue moving our science curriculum into the field where students learn to do science rather than only reading about science in a book. It dovetails beautifully with the many programs and initiatives we've instituted recently which give students the opportunity to do hands-on, investigative field work."

Magnussen and his colleagues see this course as a great opportunity for students not only because they see it as a fun way to study the environment, but because they see it as a beginning for both students and teachers.

Said Buckley, who collaborated with Magnussen to create the class and authored the grant, "The island expedition may mark the termination of our summer class, but the students will be offered the opportunity to continue to develop their skills year round. Not only can they sign up for other maritime related classes at CHS, but they can get involved with the Lobster Lab and its research, with the Lifesaving Museum and its Boston Harbor Islands Project, or with Cohasset Maritime Institute and its boating programs. These continued learning opportunities play a critical role in the vision of the Maritime Studies program laid out in our grant proposal."

The staff is looking forward to working with students who are interested in getting more involved with the maritime world and all it has to offer.

"At the very least," says Magnussen, "we expect students to be willing to meet periodically with the staff once the traditional school year begins again in September. It will be their turn to teach us how to grow our program."

Children's drama workshop

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold registrations for the Children's Drama Workshop for ages 5 to 12. The workshop meets from 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday at the Cohasset High School Auditorium beginning Tuesday, June 29. There are dress rehearsals scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 5, and Monday, Aug. 9, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tentative dates for performances are Tuesday, Aug. 10, at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m., and Wednesday, Aug. 11, at 1 and 7 p.m.

The fee for the seven-week session is $195 for members of the playground program and $210 for nonmembers, with a $15 discount per additional child in each family.

Registrations for "The Lion King" will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall Monday through Thursday, June 14 through 17, from 9 a.m. to noon, 1 to 3 p.m., and Thursday evening from 5 to 7 p.m. Early registration is advised.

Police made nine arrests last month

May was a relatively quiet month for the police department. There were a total of nine arrests. Five were for warrants and three were for motor vehicle violations. There was one arrest for Operating Under the Influence, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

There were no Breaking and Enterings reported during the month of May.

During the month of May, the department issued 174 Motor Vehicle Traffic Citations for fines totaling $6,240. Additionally, during May, the department issued 100 parking violations for fines totaling $2,175.

During May our Emergency Dispatch Center received 651 calls for service. Of those, 65 were Emergency 9-1-1 calls.

All officers of the police department completed their firearms requalifications at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club. The training was done by firearms instructor, Det. Frederick Grassie with assistance from retired Sgt. Richard Abbadessa. All officers have successfully completed the required 40 hours In-Service Training. Special Officer, Sasha Geddes, successfully completed her training requirements, Noonan said.

Some street lights will be turned off

Due to FY00 budget cuts

By DeAnna Putnam
STAFF WRITER

Next year, Cohasset will be 52 streetlights darker.

The Board of Selectmen have approved a list of streetlights to be shut of as of July 1, 2000. Cohasset currently has 524 streetlights the town pays for and roughly another 100 paid for by individual residents upon request.

Prior to this year, the electric company only allowed towns to reduce streetlights at a rate of 10 percent per year, but now there is no limit. Cohasset is still going with the 10 percent rule.

Each streetlight costs roughly $100 per year to run and the town currently has a budget of $53,000. The budget for the year 2000 has been cut, however, to meet the constraints of Proposition 2 1/2 and the streetlight budget will be chopped by $7,000.

"People think we need to have all these streetlights," Selectman Merle Brown said, "But Hanover is a bigger town with more people and their budget is $34,000. Norwell is a larger town and they have less streetlights. They put them on corners and sharp turns, but not on every pole."

Police Chief Brian Noonan., DPW Superintendent Harold Litchfield, Safety Officer Richard Yocum and Town Manager Mark Haddad physically went out to all the lights in town to determine which were the best candidates.

"The criteria for elimination were the lights that least affected pedestrians and traffic," Haddad said.

They eliminated no streetlights on main drags or at intersections.

> "The criteria for elimination were the lights that least affected pedestrians and traffic."
> — Town Manager Mark Haddad

Selectman Merle Brown voiced concern over streetlights at the end of very dark streets or cul de sacs, saying darker areas may provide greater opportunities for burglaries.

Residents living in the two or three nearest homes to the streetlights being shut off will be notified ahead of time. Residents have the option of making arrangements with the electric company to keep the light on and be personally billed for it.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris advised the board be flexible with the list and willing to listen if residents could make a case for a particular streetlight should be left on.

Haddad cautioned the board they would be hit with a number of requests to keep lights on.

"Someone could make a case for every light on the list," he said, "But we've already cut the budget."

LAST CLASS OF MILLENNIUM

Speeches make commencement special

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Cohasset High School Principal Curtis Collins couldn't stop smiling Saturday.

He beamed with pride as three students — all members of the Class of '99 — each took their turn at the podium to speak to their fellow graduates under the big top at the Music Circus.

While each address was unique, they all shared a common theme — this is a special class, an appreciative one whose potential is yet untapped.

"You can see why we're so proud," Collins told the assembled family and friends at one point during the hour-long commencement.

Valedictorian Steven Sceery drew laughter as he shared anecdotes about the 80-member class' years in Cohasset schools.

But it was his remarks about teachers and their profession that were most uplifting.

"We are fortunate to have teachers that could inspire us, challenge us," he said.

And at every turn, Sceery praised Cohasset teachers and their contribution to the classroom. He reassured all that as we embark on the information age, the Internet and technology are still no match for the teacher who makes a difference.

"No matter how sophisticated or advanced tools become, remember they are only tools," Sceery said. "They are not or never will be a substitute for the teacher in the classroom."

Benjamin Littauer, class salutatorian, said being the last class of the millennium gave its members a special distinction.

Phone service cut off

Severed cable isolates town

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

For those men and women whose duty it is to serve and protect the citizens of Cohasset, the phone outage on Monday which temporarily severed their ability to be reached by those residents was a frightening experience.

"I was certainly worried about something happening and us not being notified."
— Police chief Brian Noonan

"It was a feeling of instant fear," said Police chief Brian Noonan.

"I was certainly worried about something happening and us not being notified," Noonan said about the outage which affected much of town on Monday afternoon and evening and left some Cohasset residents without phone service as late as Tuesday evening.

"At its worst, there were 8,000 lines out of service in Cohasset and Hingham," Bell Atlantic spokesperson Bob Noble said on Tuesday.

AT&T seeks antenna on Bear Hill tank

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

There will not be a second water tank on Bear Hill. But, there might be a telecommunications antenna on the existing tank. AT&T Wireless Services is seeking permission from the water commission to weld an antenna to the top of the 65 foot high structure.

The water commission plans to discuss the proposal on Monday, June 21 at 9 p.m. AT&T will have a number of experts in attendance to address questions from water commissioners and residents. William E. Irwin, a health and physics consultant from MIT, Jeffrey Dunakin, a radio frequency engineer for AT&T, and Tony Man-

Cafeteria contract on agenda

The special topic at tonight's school committee meeting is the cafeteria contract, including a presentation by Chartwell, the contractor.

The school committee plans to look again at ways to reduce the annual deficit, member Kathy Ofsthun said. The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. in the AV room at the middle-high school. The special topic is slated to be discussed at 8 p.m.

Ten minutes for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays.

The next selectmen's meeting is Monday, June 21.

Reports of elder abuse rising on South Shore

By Seth Jacobson
STAFF WRITER

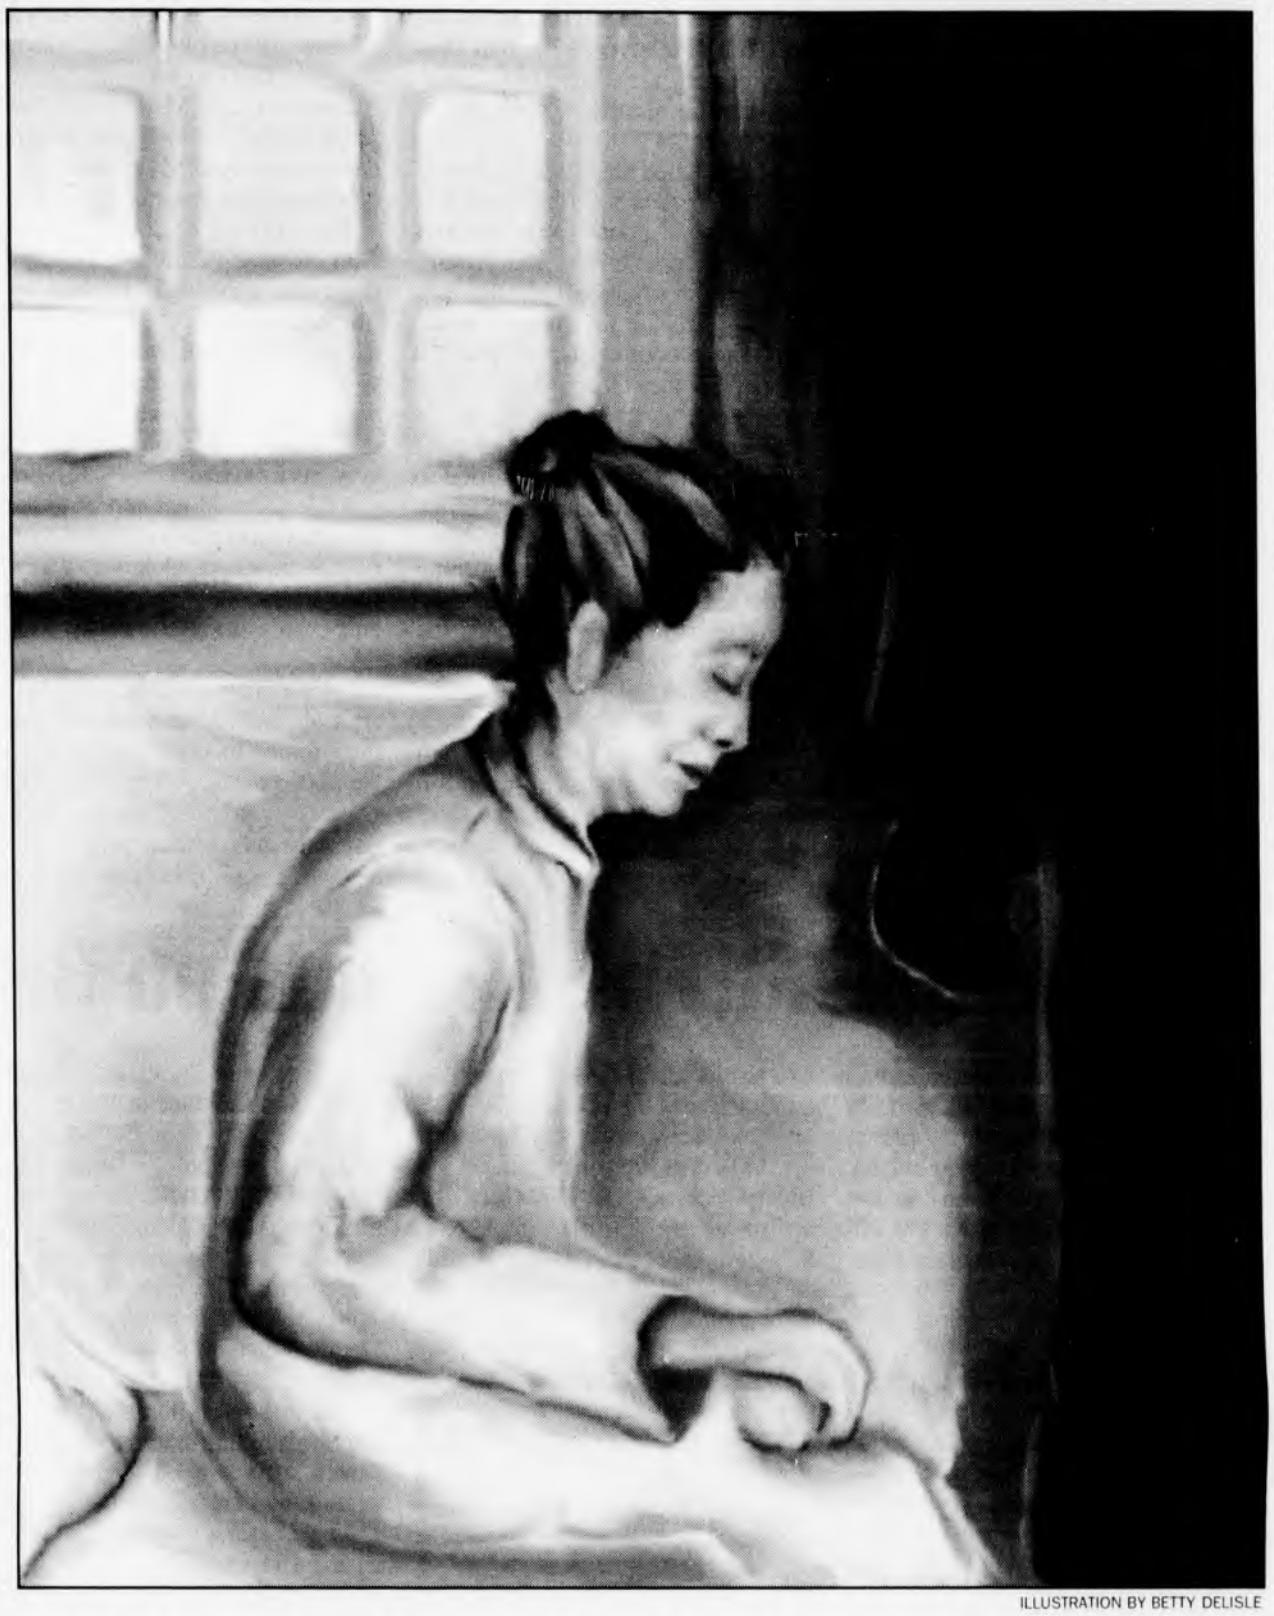

ILLUSTRATION BY BETTY DELISLE

Shortly after last Christmas, a 50-year-old Pembroke man was arrested for beating an 81-year-old woman so viciously that she almost died.

She suffered from multiple fractures, a collapsed lung, broken ribs, and severe bruising on her face, arms, and shins.

But this was no random attack or everyday robbery attempt.

The victim was the alleged assailant's mother.

The elderly woman remained in poor condition at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth for several weeks before being transferred to a long-term care facility. Meanwhile, her son's fate will be decided by a Brockton Superior courtroom, where his case was transferred from Plymouth because of its severity.

It is just one of many elder abuses incidents happening on the South Shore. Recent cases have brought to light a growing problem in the area as well as the nation.

In the affluent town of Cohasset, with its stately homes and pristine neighborhoods, a man got into a heated and brutal argument with his elderly mother.

According to Cohasset police Sgt. Robert Jackson, the argument escalated, and when the woman tried to flee, her son allegedly slammed the door of the home on her hand, severing two of her fingers.

"Her fingers have not been put back on," Jackson said grimly. "There had been previous restraining orders against this young man on several occasions. This was not an isolated incident."

Jackson said despite the details of the case, the man's mother did not press charges. But that's nothing unusual, say experts trained in the area of elder abuse cases.

According to Lillian Glickman, state Secretary of Elder Affairs, the number of incidents involving the emotional, neglectful, and physical elements of elderly abuse is only going up and not all of them are even reported to authorities.

"The recently-released Elder Protective Services Report shows that 1998 marked the 13th consecutive year in which the number of elder abuse reports increased in Massachusetts," Glickman said. "Other statistics are no less striking: From 1988-1998, reports of abuse increased 117 percent, from 2,769 to 6,010."

The report is a yearly document which is prepared by the Elder Affairs office in order to illustrate the status of elder abuse within the state. It also shows what programs are being implemented by state and town officials to control the epidemic.

"As the number of people over age 60 grows, we project a continued increase in the number of elder abuse reports in Massachusetts well into the 21st century," said Glickman.

The report reveals that nearly 31 percent of all abuse cases found in the state involve physical abuse. And what may be surprising to some is the perpetrator in a physical abuse case is often the child or grandchild of the elderly victim. In many of those cases, the victims will often hold back on pressing charges against their children.

"I do notice reporting problems when it involves a person's child," said Mary Willis, director of the Pembroke Council on Aging. "They love their children. If a child is abusing a parent, that's usually difficult to prove."

Adds Marshfield Council on Aging Director Carol Connolly, "Most of the time, a client won't report abuse if it involves a child."

Experts say the reason most do not report the incidents is because the victims are unwilling or too embarrassed to acknowledge that someone they love is abusing them. Other factors which discourage some elderly individuals from reporting abuse are "fear of retaliation [by a caretaker] or nursing home placement, the dependence of the victim on the perpetrator for their care needs, and the inability of some elders to report abuse due to mental and/or physical frailty," according to the state report.

Muriel Boyce, director of the Kingston Council on Aging, said she feels incidents involving all types of elderly abuse, not necessarily just physical abuse, are not reported enough. Other kinds of abuse include financial and/or emotional abuse, neglect, and even self-neglect cases.

"It's more underreported than rape is," she said. "Off the top of my head, I'd say about 80 percent of these incidents don't get reported. It's going on, but nobody talks about it."

State statistics support Boyce's claims. The report from elder affairs states, "The prevalence and incidence of domestic elder abuse are believed to be both underestimated and underreported."

Ed Flynn, director of South Shore Elder Services in Braintree, said he too has noticed the trend where elders who have been abused by their children choose not to report the given incidents.

"We run into that a lot," he said. "In terms of our investigations, if an elderly person is competent, and they don't want to press charges, we're limited in what we can do. It's very difficult for a parent to do that to their child. It has something to do with the overall urge to protect."

Flynn explained that South Shore Elder Services is one of the main protective service agencies in Massachusetts mandated not only to report instances of abuse to proper authorities, but also to investigate them.

Flynn noted that "big numbers" of abuse incidents are falling into the "neglect" category of abuse. Flynn described two neglect cases with which he has come into contact in the past.

The first concerned an elderly husband and wife who lived together on the South Shore. Flynn said the husband in the case had a habit of wandering due to a "dementia" condition. He said although the wife knew the husband's habit was a danger to himself, she was unable to stop him because he was much larger than her. Therefore, she was left with no choice other than to do nothing about it.

"By law," Flynn said, "that's neglect. It wasn't intentional, though, because it was beyond the wife's control."

Flynn said in that case, his agency intervened and tried to remedy the case with people who could have put the situation in check.

The second case of neglect he described involved an elderly mother being cared for by her daughter. The daughter, knowing very well that her mother was incapable of caring for herself, left the house one day to go about doing her daily routine. While the daughter was gone, a fire started, putting the elderly victim at great risk. Fortunately, Flynn said, the mother was rescued, but his agency was mandated to intervene in the situation to try to find some extra help for the daughter to assist in her mother's care. In addition, the mother needed to get "emergency placement" in a nursing home.

A Matter of Money

Flynn said whenever there are cutbacks in funding provided to the protective services organizations, instances of neglect increase.

"The state needs to adequately fund protective services," he said. "There just isn't enough money. With the numbers growing, the cases are getting more intense. We are seeing tougher situations, and we want to make sure we have enough staff."

Flynn said there is a large turnover rate within the protective services field, noting that the recently-passed House budget did provide protective services with the extra $1 million it was told it was going to get.

Rep. Tom O'Brien (D-Kingston) explained that for the Fiscal Year 2000 budget, Gov. Cellucci took $200 million — an amount he projected would come from a pending tobacco company settlement — and used it throughout the budget despite the fact that the $200 million was not technically available yet.

"That money shouldn't have been counted," O'Brien said, noting that the use of the funds "created false expectations." He added that the House of Representatives refused to incorporate the tobacco monies into its draft of the budget. Therefore, the original sum of $1.3 million was the

Cohasset phone service cut off due to severed cable

"More than 6,000 were back by 11 o'clock Monday night."

The outage was caused by severed phone cables on Route 3A, about 100 yards past the Hingham-Cohasset line in North Hingham, which Hingham Light workers cut as they drilled a hole to sink a pole into the ground. Hingham Light general manager Joseph Spadea said on Monday afternoon that his workers were not at fault in the incident.

"We called Dig Safe [a clearinghouse which notifies the utilities that they need to mark the cables] and, apparently, one of the phone companies didn't mark a cable and that's where we were putting the pole," Spadea explained.

Dig Safe spokesperson Bob Finelli echoed Spadea's comments about where responsibility lies in marking the cables. "We are just a notification facility," Finelli said. "By Massachusetts state law, we have to be notified when digging takes place, and we then notify the utilities. It's their job to mark the cables. We don't have field personnel to do that."

Noble said that an investigation would be done after all residents' phones are back in service, but that his workers were focusing on fixing the problem first. In a telephone interview yesterday, Noble said that several dozen phone lines were still out in Cohasset, and that a specific type of cable was presenting a problem.

"Those phone lines that are still out will come back gradually, rather than all at once," he said. "There is a different type of cable involved, called a pulp cable, and there is a great deal of manual activity involved in fixing the damaged cable."

While most of Cohasset's phone lines appear to be up and running once again, including 911 service and the phones of the fire and police department, Noonan realized the danger that the outage represented.

"We lost all 911 service, police and fire phones and the fire radio," he said. "Several 911 calls were routed to Scituate, which is our backup plan in this type of emergency, but they were all false alarms.

"If someone calls 911 from a cell phone, the call goes to the State Police in Framingham and they notify us through teletype," Noonan said. "Fortunately, there were only a couple of false alarms in that case as well."

He explained that two extra officers were called in to help and that officers went around town to notify nursing homes, banks, and jewelry stores of the situation. He also said that Bell Atlantic gave the police department a couple of personal cell phones, but they didn't work correctly.

"There were activation problems," Noonan said. "I know they tried to help, but I am a little upset about the police department being without phones from 10:30 in the morning until 9 at night.

"We've had 911 for five years," he said, "and we've never lost both phone service and 911 simultaneously before."

Should such an outage happen again, Noonan realized an option that may be available next time.

"We have cell phones that we give to people in domestic abuse cases that only dial 911, so they can reach us no matter where they are," he said. "Those may be of use should something like this happen again."

Town manager Mark Haddad was proud of the way the police and fire departments reacted despite the unnerving circumstances.

"I'm very pleased and satisfied with the way the fire and police departments responded," Haddad said. The backup plans of 911 calls going to Scituate and cell phone calls going to Framingham worked extremely well. Both the fire and police departments called in extra patrols. I'm very, very pleased."

While there do not appear to have been any emergencies caused by the outage, much of Cohasset was affected, especially those residences and businesses located near Route 3A.

Cards and Shards, a gift shop located at 45 South Main St., experienced only minor inconveniences due to the phone outage. "We got a couple of credit cards, but we just wrote down the information and ran them through later," said Nancy, a store employee. "We couldn't fax or get phone calls, but it didn't affect business. It was just kind of a pain in the neck."

Noble indicated that Bell Atlantic was doing all it could to serve those people and businesses whose ph[illegible] were still out of service.

"We have people canvassing the area with flyers describing the two messaging services we have available for them," he said. "We have Call Intercept, where incoming callers get a message saying the line is temporarily disconnected, as well as Call Forwarding, where calls get switched to a number of the customer's choosing.

"For instance, if someone's phone was out and they went to stay with their sister, they could have their calls directly forwarded to that number and the caller wouldn't even know it," he said.

Noble indicated that he expected to have all phone lines in Cohasset operational by Thursday, and Bell Atlantic workers were still at the site working in the sweltering June sun on Tuesday afternoon. "Those left tello, a professional engineer with Clough Harbor Associates of Albany, NY, will answer questions about the proposal.

"We hope that Bear Hill residents will attend this meeting and hear the presentation," said Water commission Chairman John K. McNabb Jr. "The water commission is holding this meeting to hear the presentation, and has not made a decision one way or the other on the proposal. We will hold one or more additional meetings to consider this if the residents or the commission want to."

Charles Schwartz of the site development consulting firm Tea Group Incorporated (TEA) is seeking the approval on behalf of AT&T. Schwartz said AT&T needs the antenna to improve wireless communications service in the central Cohasset area. According to Schwartz, the idea to use the tank avoids the need to construct yet another telecommunications tower in Cohasset.

In a letter to the water commissioners, Schwartz proposes erecting a small antenna array housed in a 'stealth structure' to conceal the apparatus. Schwartz provided drawings that show the stealth structure as a triangular building-like structure that would sit on top of the tank. Although the exact dimensions of the structure are not provided, the triangular enclosure appears to be about 15 feet wide and 6-10 feet high. AT&T also would need a 12-by-20 foot pre-fabricated equipment shelter on a 2,500 square foot diameter concrete pad to house electronic support equipment for the antenna. The equipment shed would sit at the base of the tank enclosed in the existing chain-link fence. A vertical coaxial cable would run along the side of the tank, connecting the antenna to the shelter.

Schwartz said AT&T would need access to the unmanned equipment shelter at all times for repairs and maintenance, although the company plans to send out a work crew only once every two or three months.

AT&T would pay the water commissioners a monthly rental fee for the use of the tank. The company would finance all construction costs for the proposal. Schwartz said AT&T is seeking a five-year lease with five-year extensions.

Welding an antenna to the top of a tank poses some unique problems for AT&T. Most tanks are lined inside with a special epoxy paint to prevent rusting. Traditional arc welding, which works by passing an electrical current through a welding rod to join two pieces of metal, produces a temperature of 1,600 degrees. The epoxy paint melts at 240 degrees. Although the paint is inside the tank, the heat from the arc welder would transfer through the metal to the interior of the tank and certainly exceed 240 degrees. AT&T is proposing a special capacitor discharge welding system that delivers a high electrical charge to the welding surface for only about five-thousandths of a second to produce a solid bond.

McNabb said he is concerned about the potential energy output from the antenna. McNabb said the closest home to the tank is on Juniper Rise only 160 feet away from the structure. He wants to be certain that the antennaís energy output would pose no threat to any abutters.

Senate passes CHL hearing amendment

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has issued a verbal promise to hold a hearing about the Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill's closure and post-closure plans. Apparently, DEP's promise isn't reliable enough for the state Senate. On June 11, Senators approved an amendment to the Senate budget submitted by State Senator Robert L. Hedlund requiring DEP to hold a public hearing on CHL. The amendment prohibits DEP from approving any closure plans submitted after April 1, 1999 without public participation in the approval process.

The amendment still requires approval from the state House of Representatives and the governor, but it places greater pressure on DEP to hold public hearings.

"DEP agreed to hold a public hearing, but this legislation would prevent DEP from backing out on their promise."
— John McNabb of SAFE

"It is my understanding that DEP doesn't want the Legislature to pass legislation that sets a precedent for the future," said John K. McNabb Jr., vice president of the anti-landfill group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE). "DEP agreed to hold a public hearing, but this legislation would prevent DEP from backing out on their promise."

McNabb said he spoke with representatives from Hedlund's office shortly after DEP promised to hold the hearing. Hedlund's aides wanted to know if they should suspend the amendment to force DEP to hold the hearing.

"I told them they should not pull the amendment unless we get something in writing from DEP," McNabb said. "We're perfectly happy to let the amendment die if we get a written guarantee from DEP."

Last week, DEP promised to hold a public hearing on CHL's closure plans along with a 30-day comment period. According to McNabb, DEP agreed to the hearing only because of intense lobbying from landfill foes.

Several town officials and residents have criticized what they see as severe deficiencies in the closure and post-closure plans. Among the alleged deficiencies are inadequate drainage, poor gas collection systems, and the potential for leachate reaching the town's water supply.

Arthur Lehr is a champion of recycling

Recognized as recycler of the year

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Arthur Lehr could be called the king of recycling in Cohasset.

Lehr, still vibrant at 80 years old, has been on the town's recycling committee since its creation in 1982. But Lehr's recycling efforts extend much further back into the past. At the tender age of 12, he participated in early recycling efforts with Boy Scouts Troop 1 of Cohasset. He has served in the Boy Scouts in various capacities for more than 60 years. Even now, he helps his former Troop, now Troop 28, collect returnable containers as its chief source of income.

"In the 1950s, I conducted paper drives with the Boy Scouts to raise funds," Lehr said. "We would gather up a group of volunteers with pick-up trucks and other vehicles, collect the newspapers and sell them to recyclers. I was always involved in some type of recycling. Now I spend a lot of time volunteering at the RTF."

Lehr developed a passion for recycling over the years thanks to his formative years learning about the environment in the Boy Scouts. In the 1980s he found himself serving on the recycling committee and eventually helping the town open the Recycling and Transfer Facility (RTF) after the town landfill closed in 1988.

The town landfill has come a long way since its conversion from municipal dump to an RTF. The town has had to cope with the changing nature of the refuse recycling industry. Lehr said newspaper drives turned a tidy profit in the 1950s and 1960s when recyclers paid top dollar for each ton of material. Now, the town pays $22 per ton to haul newspapers to a recycling facility. The town is still able to offset RTF costs by selling profitable materials like corrugated cardboard, plastic and glass to recycling companies.

"Our grandchildren will be the ones who benefit from our efforts to provide a cleaner, safer world."
— Arthur Lehr

Lehr doubts whether the town will ever make a decent profit from the RTF. But turning a profit is not the best reason for recycling, Lehr said. Even if the town isn't making any money, recycling is still an important step for the people of the town to help preserve the future of the planet.

"Recycling reduces pollution, for one thing," Lehr said. "We're chopping down forests for paper, and although loggers say they're re-planting, it takes generations to restore those trees. Our grandchildren will be the ones who benefit from our efforts to provide a cleaner, safer world."

Lehr pointed out that some innovative companies have developed ways to crush televisions, mix the debris with melted tires and create a high-quality paving mixture.

The people of Cohasset have responded well to local recycling efforts, Lehr said. He is proud that about 80 percent of the population recycles in some way. It hasn't always been easy getting people to recycle. Lehr points out that people have to pay a hefty annual fee, $80 currently, for the privilege to dump garbage at the RTF. Many people feel they've paid for the right to throw away whatever they want.

Which is why Lehr is a strong advocate of the ill-fated buck-a-bag plan. The buck-a-bag proposal, which was soundly defeated at the 1997 annual town meeting, would have charged residents $1 for every bag of garbage they brought to the RTF. The idea was to encourage residents to recycle more.

"People would be surprised by the number of recyclables they throw away," Lehr said.

"Plastic toothpaste tubes, cardboard packaging, a lot of that stuff

Arthur Lehr is a champion of recycling

can be profitable for the town."

But residents voted against the project and Lehr admits the proposal is quite dead at the moment. But life continues, even in the recycling world. Lehr continues to volunteer at the RTF, helping the staff cope with new recycling regulations.

"Recycling is always growing and expanding," Lehr said. "Newer requirements will force us to recycle televisions, computers, fluorescent tubes, paint, automobile batteries and tires."

There's always more that can be done and that's how Lehr keeps busy. The recycling committee coordinates the paint collection and probably will take over the television recycling. There are also many new programs just being implemented or waiting in the background. He pointed to a town program offering free compost to residents.

Don't be fooled into thinking days at the RTF are dull. Lehr said the Boy Scouts run a boutique at the RTF that allows residents to discard old items that are still in good working order. Other residents can drop by the RTF and take anything they want from the boutique. But it can get a little interesting at times.

"Occasionally, we have a near fistfight when two people reach for the same item like shoppers at Filene's," Lehr said.

Lehr laughs at the thought of people wrestling over items at the boutique. He said it keeps life interesting at the RTF.

Selectmen Merle Brown is a good friend of Lehr's. He said Lehr Cohasset would not have such a successful and profitable recycling program without Lehr.

"Arthur spends a great amount of time each year gathering, researching, and putting together the information required to receive grant money from the state of Massachusetts," Brown said. "Last year, the town received 100 recycling bins for the schools and town hall. Also last year, Arthur was instrumental in getting $3,200 for the town through meeting the requirements in the recycling program and has been helpful in procuring many other available grants."

Brown is not the only one who recognizes Lehr's efforts. MASSPIRG named Lehr the recycler of the year just a few weeks ago.

Lehr doesn't spend all his time recycling. He is also the town's emergency management director, although recycling remains his first interest. Anyone visiting the RTF can probably see Lehr there on most days doing some kind of work, although he stands ready to correct people who call it a dump.

"People still call it a dump, which is inaccurate because we don't dump anything there anymore," Lehr said. "I figure it will take at least two generations for people to get used to calling it the transfer station."

Speaking with Lehr, one gets the feeling he'll be around for both of those generations to teach them about the importance of recycling.

Chiropractic for HEALTH
by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor

CAUSE AND EFFECT

To see how chiropractic treatment helps disorders that seem unrelated to the spine, consider the man who injures his back while lifting a heavy object. This injury may result in pressure being exerted on the spinal cord, which may cause a pinched nerve. Whether the injury results in pain (only some nerves in the spinal column transmit feeling) or loss of feeling, the nerve's function is affected. And, since this nerve may be part of the autonomic nervous system that controls such involuntary actions as breathing and digestion, a pinched nerve could cause digestive or breathing problems. Chiropractic strives to remove blockages of nerve impulses that may adversely impact the autonomic functions of the body and cause disease.

Being pinched anywhere hurts, but to pinch a nerve? It could happen anywhere in the spine. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, we believe in educating the public and telling them about vertebral subluxations and the need for periodic spinal checkups. Chiropractic is the only healing art designed to locate and correct vertebral subluxations. No painkillers, muscle relaxants, or other drugs or medical procedures can do it. No surgery can do it! Anyone suffering with this condition needs a proper chiropractic analysis and spinal adjustment. Please call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment and let us help you. Our "Mothers Morning Out" program can help you give your children self-confidence and self-trust. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor.

P.S. In addition to the spine, the chiropractor may make adjustments to other joints.

IN WEST AFRICA

Tammy Maitland, a 1966 CHS grad, has been in Boston University's Naimey Language and Liberal Arts Program in Niamey, Niger, West Africa, for the spring semester. While in Niamey, Tammy was involved in a community placement and in classes offered in cooperation with la Faculte des Lettres er Sciences Humaines de l'Universite Abdou Moumouni. The students in the program live in communal apartments and travel to the interior of Niger as well as to neighboring countries. Tammy will be a senior at Boston College in the fall.

Tammy has also been accepted as a staff person for the summer in the Appalachian Service Project. She is assigned to Chavies, Kentucky, and is currently in training at the ASP headquarters. For the past five years Tammy has been part of the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project ecumenical group that travels to Appalachia (Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia or West Virginia) for a week to be part of a home repair ministry in those states.

Tammy is the daughter of Heidi and Ken Maitland, and a very special young lady, indeed! Are we ever proud of you, Tammy!

WHAT A WEDDING!

We had the pleasure of attending a wonderful wedding last weekend, that of Amy Neher and David Shultz. The Mass was held at Our Lady of the Assumption Church in Osterville, the reception at the Oyster Harbors Club. When I tell you that it was a real event is an understatement. Naturally the food, the company, the surroundings were indescribable, but the main thing present was LOVE! Dave's Mom and Dad, Larry and Linda, have always let their love shine, but never more than that day — his brother, Bob, along with his family, were just beaming themselves — Brian was so happy for his brother's happiness (now you are getting the picture of a truly loving family).

Then go to the best man and his family; Stephen Myers was outstanding as "toastmaster," his Mom and Dad, Dottie and Tom, lit up the whole place with their dancing and great love.

To complete the picture, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Neher were so welcoming, loving and beautiful, they lit up the party, also! Their love for the newlyweds was evident all night long! If you haven't surmised, it was elegant, joyful and memorable and we surely wish Mr. and Mrs. David Shultz the very best!

ROUND OF APPLAUSE

We send a round of applause to Brian Duffy, son of Dan and Rosemary Duffy. Brian is now a proud graduate of UMass/Amherst — cum laude! Brian graduated in February with a BA in German and French, cum laude, and is a Commonwealth Scholar. YEAH!

AIR FORCE ACADEMY

Andy Kamataris, '94 graduate of Cohasset High School, graduated from the US Air Force Academy with a BS degree in Engineering Mechanics June 2. He was commissioned as 2nd Lieutenant and will conduct pilot training at Columbus Air Force Base in Columbus, Miss.

Andy Kamataris

Andy also celebrated his 23rd birthday June 10, we celebrated that with you, Andy, and congratulate you for all you have achieved!

Andy's proud mom is Normandie Nigh, 8-year-resident of Cohasset, who now lives in California.

ROUND OF APPLAUSE

We send a round of applause to Brian Duffy, son of Dan and Rosemary Duffy. Brian is now a proud graduate of UMass/Amherst — cum laude! Brian graduated in February with a BA in German and French, cum laude, and is a Commonwealth Scholar. YEAH!

DEAN'S LIST

Carolyn Pratt finished her freshman year at Roger Williams University, located in Bristol, R.I., and [illegible] made the dean's list. She is working toward a degree in Early Childhood Education. We haven't been able to give you a "standing o" since your CHS gymnast days, Carolyn; we do so again now! You are the best!

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

We (I) always seem to make a lot of athletes when I write, guess it is because I always hear that news first! Let me tell you that we appreciate the scholars ever so much as well — being a student who does a superior job is ever-so-important, and the following junior class members at CHS SHINE! Being inducted into the National Honor Society of Secondary Schools, which is based on scholarship, leadership, service and character is such an honor; wait 'til you see the students who accomplished this feat! Please be sure that you give them the recognition they deserve when you see them! Sara Bertovich, Maura Duffy, Grace Gardner, Elizabeth Hassan, Danielle Kupsc, Emily Libby, Jackie Kahn, Rebecca Moje, Ben Peterson, Melissa Pyfrom, Eileen Ridge, Caitlin Stansell, Kate Stone, Stefan Vanderweil and Jessie Zerendow. You are a spectacular bunch, and we are all so proud of you and the educators who helped you achieve your goals!

IT'S HAPPENING

Taverna '99 is coming

For almost 20 years the Greek Taverna of Cohasset has become synonymous with the Fourth of July weekend on the South Shore. This year the Taverna '99 Committee has decided to move the largest Greek festival in Southeastern Massachusetts ahead one weekend.

This year's annual festival will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 24, 25 and 26, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day. Admission is free! Rain or shine!

By moving the Taverna '99 away from the busy July 4 weekend, it is expected to draw record crowds this year. But the committee has been able to add more than 25 percent more space to accommodate the additional fairgoers, and there will be many new features and surprises promising to make Taverna '99 the largest and most exciting ever.

Taverna, a word which means a cafe where you go to sit and philosophize while you listen to foot tapping Greek music. Taverna, the place where you can go to enjoy the very best in Greek cuisine. Taverna, the place where you can experience all the sights and sounds of the Mediterranean Greek Islands. And we have it all right here on the South Shore, courtesy of the Greek Orthodox Community of Cohasset.

Friday, June 25, is Taverna's Senior Citizen Day. From noon to 3 p.m., seniors will receive a 15 percent discount on their meals and the soft drink is free. Come and join for a "Taste of Greece." Join them for Taverna!

Getaway for two to Bermuda

The Cohasset Little League is selling raffle tickets for its annual fundraiser.

This year, the grand prize will be a getaway for two to Bermuda! Four Days, three nights at the lovely Grotto Bay Beach Resort. The prize includes roundtrip airfare on Delta Airlines, hotel taxes and transfers. The raffle tickets are available for a donation of $10 each or, if you'd prefer to increase your chances of winning, 6 for $50.

The drawing will take place June 26 at the Little League dance. Tickets are sold by the various Little League players, their coaches and their families.

If you would like additional tickets, call Mimi Maich at 383-6553 or Michele Sacks at 383-0417.

Come one, come all! Put your "red shoes on and dance the blues!" Cohasset Little League will be hosting an evening to dance the night away to your favorite music. Oldies, not so old and contemporary music that has filled our past and our present with the glorious memories of our not so distant youth! A full bar and light food will also be available. Get there on time to peruse and bid on those silent auction items for your kid's next birthday . . on air visit and lunch for two with EEI's A team Dale Arnold and Eddie Andleman, tickets to the Bruce Springstein concerts for their parents or perhaps a round of golf at Wollaston Golf Club in Milton for a threesome. Lunch and drinks on the 19th hole included!

Where: South Shore Community Center, Saturday, June 26, 8 p.m. to midnight, $25 per person.

The little League needs your support to maintain the field, refurbish equipment and make the program affordable to the boys and girls of Cohasset.

To purchase tickets, call Michele Sacks at 383-0417, Mimi Maich at 383-6553 or stop by Capt. Hugh's Snack Shack.

EDITORIAL

Class Of '99. It's your turn to shine

Class of '99. It's your turn to shine. You have seen so much in your young lives. Just look at the year when most of you new high school graduates were born — 1981.

While you were wrapped in your pink or blue bunting, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" burst onto Broadway. As you became the golden girl or boy in your new home, Henry Fonda was winning the Oscar for "On Golden Pond." While friends said you had your mother's eyes, Kim Carnes was singing the top song of the year "She's Got Bette Davis Eyes."

Dwight Evans of the Red Sox was home run king and Carney Lansford was batting champ. A terrible disease called AIDS began to surface. "Hill Street Blues" premiered on TV.

President Ronald Reagan was shot by John Hinckley, who wanted to impress movie star Jodie Foster, and the president's press secretary James Brady was paralyzed by a stray bullet. Pac Man devoured video machines. Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer were married at St. Paul's Cathedral in London. And MTV unveiled its first video. What a year it was!

How about the year you let go of your mother's hand to enter the new world of kindergarten. Was it "Les Miserables" for you? That's what was playing on Broadway. Or did you enter your new world like a brave soldier mirroring the men in the best picture of the year —"Platoon?"

Maybe that year was the first time you ever saw your father cry. Why? Everybody in Boston did. The Red Sox were one strike away from winning the World Series for the first time in 68 years as an easy little grounder dribbled through the legs of Billy Buckner and a bit of sparkle left the diamond forever.

You probably were among the millions of little children watching the Challenger take off because a beautiful young teacher from New Hampshire named Christa McAuliffe was aboard. And you watched in horror as it exploded into a ball of fire.

While you were getting used to your one and only new school shoes, the public learned that Filipino First Lady Imelda Marcos had 2,700 pairs. The Oprah Winfrey Show went national that year and Ted Turner began coloring black and white movies. What a year it was!.

But how about the year you entered high school — 1995. O.J. Simpson was found not guilty of the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman in the trial of the century. Dismayed by the baseball strike, Michael Jordan returned to basketball and promptly racked up 55 points in one of his first games. Latin music's Madonna, Selena, was killed by her fan club president.

Superman Christopher Reeve was paralyzed in a horseback riding accident. The Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia and Yankee great Mickey Mantle both passed away that year.

Ah, what you have seen since your freshman year! You have seen a beautiful princess, Lady Diana, killed in an car crash in Paris. You have seen sextuplets born in the United States. You have seen the impeachment and acquittal of a President, the ethnic cleansing in Kosovo, and the horror of 12 students and a teacher murdered by two classmates at Columbine High School.

You have seen El Nino, not-so-smart bombs and the fumbling of the Patriots in their quest for a new stadium.

When you were born the Y2 K bug could have been a Star Wars character, "yahoo" was what rodeo stars yelled when they rode a bull, an amazon was a muscular woman and dot-com was the end of one sentence and the beginning of another.

A cellular phone was non-existent. A laptop was an afghan you put on your grandmother's lap. And the word internet was not even in the dictionary.

Now it's your turn. You must travel the information superhighway and use its tools with wisdom and compassion. You must put a stop to the violence in our homes, in our schools and on our streets. You must be a warrior against poverty, disease and homelessness. You must use your youthful idealism to end racism and wipe out illiteracy.

Class of 1999. Take us into the new millennium.

Bus subsidy is a must

TO THE EDITOR:

Plymouth & Brockton Street Railway Co. is planning to reduce the Scituate route to one round trip a day. They claim it is because of low ridership & no subsidy. I am afraid that if no subsidy is provided, this run will eventually be eliminated. I would therefore strongly urge that a way be found to provide a fair subsidy for this run.

Public Transportation is not only a right, but a necessity. The Expressway is out-of-date & obsolete. It cannot handle the cars that use it now. Any additional cars, put on it by any Plymouth & Brockton reduction, or elimination, of runs will cause even more congestion on the already congested highway. If people find that the changes in the P&B schedule do not fit their schedule, they will have no other option but to drive to the Rockland Park & Ride, the Hingham boat, the Red Line or Boston. All of these alternatives would put additional stress on a traffic system that is already strained to the breaking point. Now is the time to take cars off of it, not put cars back on it.

Currently, if you are going to board the Red Line at Braintree, you have to arrive before 7 a.m. in order to find parking. I have also heard that it is basically the same situation at the Hingham Commuter Boat with the parking lots filling up early. Any additional cars put on it by any Plymouth & Brockton reduction or elimination of runs, will cause even more problems at these parking lots.

For the towns of Scituate and Cohasset, Plymouth & Brockton is the only game in town. We have no other options for direct public transportation to Boston. For many people, especially those who don't have a car, or only have one car in the family, P&B is their only option. In my case, being single, I do not even have the option of having someone else drive me to alternative transportation. If, for example, I had to have my car serviced, and the Scituate route was eliminated, I would have to take the day off.

Scituate is a part of the MBTA district. It pays a healthy annual fee to the MBTA. For this amount, It gets no direct service.

At a meeting on June 9, I learned that Plymouth & Brockton gets a $36,000 annual subsidy for the Scituate service. My understanding was that this money was transferred from the subsidy once used to fund the former Brockton service. This subsidy needs to be increased because Brockton is only 20 miles from Boston, while Scituate is further away from Boston.

One of the transportation options which the P&B Scituate route competes with for ridership is the Hingham Commuter boat. This transportation alternative gets a subsidy. In order to have a level playing field, the P&B Scituate route needs a subsidy. How competitive would the boat be, at least in terms of the ticket cost, without a subsidy?

Finally, I believe that the ridership numbers that P & B is using are skewed because they do not take into account the passengers who get on at Rockland - even though all the Scituate buses pick up passengers from Rockland. The fares from these riders help to pay the cost of the run. I think that the Scituate to Boston route has to be considered as a whole, not just the sum of its parts. I would be curious to see what the average ridership is if you include Rockland.

In conclusion, there needs to be more transportation alternatives from the South Shore, not less. Any reduction or future elimination of P&B service to Scituate, Cohasset, & Hingham would effectively reduce the transportation options for those of us who commute to Boston on a daily basis. This would be counterproductive to the desperately needed goal of reducing the number of cars which use the expressway. You would see an increase in the number of single-passenger cars, using the highway. I would therefore strongly urge that a way be found to provide a fair subsidy for this run, and keep this route as a viable option.

I would, therefore, strongly urge any P&B riders, from Scituate, Cohasset, or Hingham, to send a letter, urging a subsidy, to Robert Prince - General Manager of MBTA (Fax 1-617-222-6180) prior to June 23.

Composting, part II

[A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by the Cohasset Recycling Committee]

Before returning to the fascinating world of composting, we wish to remind everyone about the urgency to obtain current stickers. A new sign will be posted at the RTF by the time this newsletter goes to press:

AFTER JULY 1, 1999
ABSOLUTELY NO ADMITTANCE
WITHOUT CURRENT STICKER — SECURITY GUARD WILL CHECK

Details about obtaining the stickers have been published regularly. If you have difficulty making the posted hours, mail in your request per directions.

"The better part of a man is compost," said Henry Thoreau. With all due respect to Thoreau's love of irony and his multi-dimensional thinking in general, he certainly believed in the recycling of organic matter and loved to garden.

Our fifth-grade students will tour the RTF the morning of June 17. One of their favorite stops is the composting area, and a fact we'll be handing on to them is that our Cohasset RTF is one of the state-approved composting sites. The children are always fascinated by the heat generated by the composting process, observable by steam and by the temperature readings of up to 140 degrees.

Summer is the optimal time for composting, as warm weather encourages the organic breakdown which itself creates heat.

What can be composted? Almost anything [except plastic; aluminum and glass take a long time to break down]. Our RTF's popular "Black Gold" is created by the breakdown of grass clippings and leaves mixed with some earth. Some aeration is necessary to avoid mere mold, and some water is necessary, but not so much as to make sludge. In suburbia it is just as well not to compost meat scraps because of animals, but vegetable matter such as peelings and stalks are ideal. Tired fruits and vegetables are of course perfect.

Cohasset RECYCLING TRANSFER Facility
Cohasset Green to Recycle Everything

Wow! Time's up again. Next time we deal with how long composting takes, compost containers, and just how we do it [how we help Mother Nature]. Don't forget your stickers! See you next time. [Time — a wonderful element ...]

HEALTH NOTES

A newsletter created by a volunteer staff issued periodically by the Board of Health.

EEE Warning

As we approach another summer season, the Board of Health warns you about Eastern Equine Encephalitis. EEE is a rare but serious disease caused by a virus transmitted by mosquitoes. EEE is so rare that since 1938, only seventy-four human cases of EEE have been documented in Massachusetts; more than half of these were children under ten years of age. While the chances of contracting EEE are extremely small, the disease is considered the most devastating mosquito-borne encephalitis in North America, since infection often results in severe illness, permanent impairment or death.

Cohasset is in a high risk area.

Symptoms and Treatment for EEE

The first symptoms of EEE are a high fever (103° to 106°F), stiff neck, headache, and lack of energy. These symptoms show up two to ten days after infection. Swelling of the brain, called encephalitis, is the most dangerous symptom. The disease gets worse quickly, and many patients go into a coma within a week.

There is no cure for EEE, and three of every ten people who get the disease die from it. All doctors can do is lower the fever and ease the pressure on the brain and spinal cord. Some people who survive this disease will be permanently disabled. Very few people recover completely.

Mosquito repellents

The most common and effective insect repellents for outdoor use are those that contain the active ingredient N-N-diethylmeta-toluamide, usually called DEET. Different formulas have different concentrations of DEET. Lower concentration products are appropriate for most uses. Never use DEET on infants. Avoid using repellents with DEET concentrations above 10% for children. Always read the label for DEET concentration information and follow the directions.

Use just enough repellent to cover exposed skin and clothing. Do not use repellents under your clothing. Do not apply repellents containing perinethrin to skin.

You do not have to apply repellent more than once or use heavy, "soaking" amounts to make the repellent work better. Always wash repellents off after coming inside.

Do not apply repellent to the hands of young children or infants. Children will often put their fingers in their mouths or rub their eyes.

Never use repellents on cuts, open skin, sunburned, or irritated skin.

Do not apply repellents to eyes and mouth.

Avoid breathing spray mist or vapors in enclosed areas such as cars, tents, etc. If you are using a spray repellent make sure it's in an open area with plenty of fresh air.

After you come inside, wash the repellents off your skin with soap and water.

Don't reuse empty mosquito repellent containers. Throw out or recycle empty containers carefully. Wrap the container and put it in the trash. Never try to burn aerosol cans.

There may be side effects from mosquito repellents

Repellents may be absorbed through the skin. Very rarely, this can cause serious illness. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has received a small number of reports of adverse reactions (side effects) after heavy use of DEET on skin. The symptoms which were most commonly reported in small children are: headache, mood changes, crying, irritability, confusion, and nausea. In very rare cases convulsions (seizures) and unconsciousness (fainting) were noted. Swallowing products with DEET may cause poisoning. The Poison Control Center number is (617) 232-2120. When you go to the doctor, take the repellent with you to show the doctor.

Thoughts on Metco program

To the Editor:

I read with interest your paper's article on Metco in the Cohasset schools. Many years ago when my children were students, Thelma Burns was the excellent coordinator. We had many interesting programs as well as exciting students both African-American and Asian-American in the schools.

The costs were subsidized by state legislation and places for those students were "empty seats" in the classroom. Also, a teacher or two was subsidized. We always worried about state funding level. However, the good of the experience for our children and the inner-city students far out-weighed any additional cost. It still does.

The reverse education of our students to Boston was utilized by a few. Boston was not, and probably still feels that many of the motivated students leave for the suburbs. This of course hurts their diversity.

If the education programs and population of the region was more diverse, we would not need Metco programs. I heartily support its continuance at the present level.

The Case of the Cursing Canoeist

HENSHAW

Tom Henshaw

I can't believe I did it! With Kosovo in ferment and Dr. Mudge on trial for malpractice and the Red Sox losing their fourth or fifth game in a row, I sat around my TV set for nearly eight hours Friday and watched the great state of Michigan try Timothy Joseph Boomer for swearing.

In case you're not a trivia fan or collect lawyer trading cards, Tim is the 25-year-old computer programmer from Detroit who fell out of a canoe on the Rifle River in Michigan and uttered an impressive string of four-letter Anglo Saxon functional verbs within the hearing of a child.

Tim apparently was unaware of the law but Tammy Smith, who was floating down the river in a canoe with her hands over her 2-year-old daughter's ears, certainly was.

Would it surprise you to learn that Michigan has a 102-year-old law that bans the utterance of "indecent, vulgar, obscene, immoral or insulting" language in front of women and children and you could get a $100 fine and 90 days in jail if you are convicted of doing it?

The section about women, Beth Karas of Court TV informed us, has been declared unconstitutional since the law was enacted in 1897 when women were chattel before they got the vote and were able to get restraining orders against their menfolk.

But I digress . . .

Tim apparently was unaware of the law but Tammy Smith, who was floating down the river in a canoe with her hands over her 2-year-old daughter's ears, certainly was. That's why the dirty language police were waiting around the bend in the river to clamp poor Tim in irons.

The cops also asked Tim's party if they were old enough to drink and singled out one young lady (whose name escapes me) and asked her to stand up. She did. "You're old enough," said the cop. "She has a rather voluptuous figure," explained Beth Karas.

But I digress again . . .

This happened last August but it took Michigan authorities all this time to build a case against him and the ACLU to work up a head of constitutional steam on behalf of Boomer. And Court TV, which hasn't made much of a splash since O. J. Simpson beat the rap a couple of years ago, was on hand to record it for posterity.

Even without Court TV, you could tell the Case of the Cursing Canoeist was a milestone in the legal profession because gift shops up and down the Rifle River were selling T-shirts emblazoned with the message, "I canoe the Rifle River but I don't swear on it."

The highlight of the trial involved the efforts of the prosecutor, Richard Vollbach, and the defense attorney from the ACLU, William Street, to get their witnesses to tell exactly what it was that Tim said. Once they got past their inhibitions, the witnesses used it a lot, a bit too enthusiastically, I thought.

I'd repeat it here but I won't because I don't want to get yelled at. Suffice it to say it's a word heard frequently in the late night on Cinemax or Showtime. Its initial letter is located in the alphabet somewhere equidistant between the "b" and the "i." Is that good enough?

Court TV trotted out its usual stable of lawyer commentators, including our own ubiquitous Alan Dershowitz, who criticized the defense for trying the case on facts rather than principle and the prosecution for wasting the court's time by bringing the case in the first place.

"This trial will probably be made into a humorous movie," he predicted.

I don't often agree with Alan Dershowitz (which upsets him, no doubt) but I sure am with him on that one.

Reports of elder abuse rising on South Shore

only amount of money allocated to protective services, rather than having the extra $1 million which would have been provided by the tobacco monies added to the total.

Certain caseworkers agree that not enough money has been allocated toward protective services programs, but they still enjoy their jobs despite all the trials and tribulations.

"We all enjoy the challenges of problem solving and resolving crisis," said Dorothy Crane, a caseworker at Old Colony Elder Services. "But yes, we're underpaid. Sometimes, it's like society doesn't even recognize what we do. If we were in the computer field, we'd probably be making millions, but we're in the business of saving lives."

"The whole field of social services is underpaid," said Theresa Kourtz, another caseworker at Old Colony. "But I've always wanted to help people, and there's a lot of gratification that goes along with it."

Money also presents some challenges of another kind. Nearly 14 percent of all the cases investigated by authorities actually involve financial exploitation of the elderly.

A case in Norwell dating back to 1989 illustrates the magnitude of the problem, officials say.

An elderly woman with Parkinson's disease who had a fear of being placed in a nursing home hired a part-time housekeeper. Months after she was hired, the housekeeper had the elderly woman's VNA home health services taken away and moved into the elder's home with her husband and four children.

Sources said eventually, the housekeeper began blocking visits from the elderly woman's friends and family. In addition, the housekeeper and her family started to take expensive cruises and ski trips and making costly renovations to the elder's home. All costs were at the expense of the elderly woman.

Moreover, the housekeeper and her husband found an attorney who drafted a new will and a trust for the elderly woman. In addition, the lawyer transferred the power of attorney from an out-of-state niece of the elderly woman to the housekeeper.

Within a period of two years, the elderly woman died, and the housekeeper was discovered to be the beneficiary of her estate. At that time, reports of drugs obtained illegally in the elderly woman's name surfaced.

After a long legal battle, a court overturned the will and the trust naming the housekeeper as the beneficiary, but many questions remained.

"We're seeing more financial exploitation in a lot of cases these days," Fielding said. "Those are sometimes easier to prove because there's a paper trail. For elders, financial exploitation can be the most devastating form of abuse."

"Early detection is one of the keys to prevention," Fielding said of financial abuse.

But sometimes, incidents of abuse are hard to detect, as Boyce found out when a mysterious instance in Kingston occurred.

Boyce said an elderly woman used to call her at the Council on Aging on a frequent basis, constantly inquiring what she could do about abuse, and where she could get help. Boyce always tried to counsel her over the phone, and gave her various numbers of help agencies.

However, the elderly woman never gave her name to Boyce, and always seemed to be on edge.

Boyce said one day, the woman called again, sounding especially disturbed, asking her the same questions, but ended the conversation abruptly, saying to Boyce, "I'll call you tomorrow."

"She never called tomorrow," Boyce said grimly. After Boyce had not heard from the woman for some time, she tracked down the phone caller through records and interviews around Kingston. She eventually found a number which she had reason to believe was that of the elderly woman in question.

When Boyce called the number, a familiar elderly woman's voice picked up the phone, and when Boyce identified herself, and questioned her about the phone calls, the woman denied ever talking to Boyce or asking for guidance.

"I still have no way of knowing if this was a serious abuse situation," Boyce said.

Boyce said she feels that instances such as the one with the elderly phone caller could be avoided if Councils on Aging would be incorporated more into the protective services system. She said that usually, once an abuse case is discovered at the Council on Aging level, the case is immediately transferred to a higher level of the protective services department such as elder services branches.

"I would like to work with them more," she said. "We'd have more power in numbers, and would be able to protect these people better. The line of communication is not as open as it should be. The door is only swinging one way. Once a case goes to an agency, it's lost [to Councils on Aging]."

"I'd like to have more of a role," Conolly said in support of Boyce's claims. "We're the ones that these people call first. We interact on a daily basis. If we could work together more, it would be a way to maximize support for elders through Councils on Aging and elder services."

Conolly added that because of the lack of communication, sometimes when cases are referred to elder services, the workers at given Councils on Aging do not even know if elder services "opened or closed certain cases."

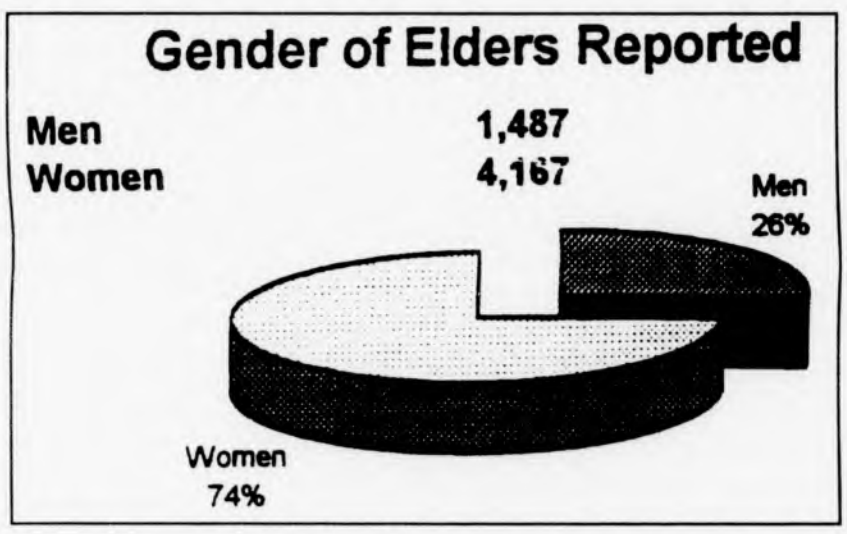
Gender of Elders Reported



Reaching a boiling point

Taking care of elderly leads some caregivers over the edge

By Seth Jacobson
STAFF WRITER

It generally boils down to frustration.

That's what many experts say is the root cause of elderly abuse. As people continue to live longer and become more dependent on family members, frustration often builds as the need for care becomes more intense.

Alan Gruber, a psychologist from Neuro Behavioral Associates in Hingham who works out of South Shore Hospital, agrees it all comes down to frustration with and the misunderstanding of the aging process.

"People attempt to care for the elderly mostly in the home," Gruber said, "but they don't understand what the person they're caring for is going through. In turn, they become very frustrated, and that frustration leads to a lot of elderly abuse. Some people may not mean it, but they tend to get very impatient. They can't tolerate [a given elderly person's] repetitive nature. It really has to do with a lack of understanding."

In addition to a lack of understanding, a vast chunk of abuse has to do with the abusers having problems related to drugs and alcohol, Gruber noted.

He said that most caretakers who do not seek assistance will most likely experience frustration, and he stressed that if various caretakers came to terms with the process of aging, elderly abuse incidents would likely decrease.

"Aging is not a disease," he continued. "Most people age gracefully, but some age with a lot of problems. The great shame is that [caretakers] don't seek assistance when they see these changes. The fact is, if you treat the disease, the frustration ceases, and the situation calms down. It's the diseases associated with aging that prompt frustration, not just growing old."

Like other officials involved in the crusade against elderly abuse, Gruber agreed that instances involving physical, neglectful, emotional, and financial abuse are rising. He said he sees victims of abuse at South Shore Hospital "several times a month."

Although Gruber said he never gets involved in investigations of abuse, he noted that more and more caretakers and the elders for whom they are caring are showing up in his office to try to understand the problems surrounding aging.

"It's a good sign," he said. "We're seeing many more [caretakers with their patients]. More caretakers are saying 'I don't want to feel this way. I'm scaring myself.' They are realizing that there's a problem and that they have no understanding of it."

"Abusers are carrying the weight of the world on their shoulders," added Muriel Boyce, director of the Kingston COA. "Sometimes, the abusers just don't understand. They're living with it everyday."

Marshfield COA Director Carol Conolly says caretakers also have to take care of themselves. "Who takes care of the caretaker? They're isolated themselves. We want to encourage caretakers to come forward, and not to feel guilty about it. A lot of people feel the way they do. If they have understanding, it will help eliminate the problem."

She added that the Marshfield Council on Aging is "applying for a grant for a caregiver's support group in order to arm people with information before they get burnt out or frustrated."

Experts say no caretaker is immune to the frustration that caring for an elder can sometimes cause, and every caretaker is capable of abusive actions. They say it's possible for anyone to find themselves in a situation and urges people to spot any potential warning signs.

Meanwhile, there are various agencies monitoring the problem, trying to make it better. The people closest to the incidents of abuse are the caseworkers, who find the work to be sometimes disturbing but always gratifying.

"It's hard," said Theresa Kourtz, a case worker at Old Colony Elder Services in Brockton. "In this line of work, you have to have an emotional investment. We use our team a lot to support each other. It's a tough situation, but you have to put it in check and go beyond emotion. It's just the nature of the job. But if you're going into a tough situation in this business, you know you're not doing it alone."

In addition to the local level, the state Executive Office of Elder Affairs is establishing further improvements in the overall system for the future.

"Elder Affairs' efforts to strengthen the protective services system in Massachusetts will continue," according to a recently released state report on elder abuse. "However, there are some needs which cannot be addressed without the availability of additional resources for the protective services program."

Some of those needs include increased protective services staffing, examining pay increases for certain protective services staff, improving staff training and community education, and increasing the staff responsible for monitoring the elder abuse hotline.

"Since 1984," said Lillian Glickman, state Secretary of Elder Affairs said, "the (the Elder Affairs office) has run a statewide protective services program that includes 24 local protective services agencies and a round-the-clock toll-free hotline. Early detection and reporting are key to responding effectively to elder abuse. Suspected cases of abuse must be identified and conveyed to protective services as early as possible."

The number of the toll free elder abuse hotline is 1-800-922-2275.

Community blood drive

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, June 23. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House at 23 North Main St. from 2 to 7 p.m. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3 to 5 p.m. The Red Cross depends on regular donations to meet the ongoing need for blood and blood by-products.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset, so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations cails. New donors are welcome and especially needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time, or if you have any questions, call Carol Riley at 383-6215 or Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

Did you know?

- An adult body contains 9 to 12 pints of blood.
- You must be 17 years or older and weigh at least 110 pounds.
- Donating blood rarely hurts. To see what it feels like, pinch your skin at your elbow joint.
- It takes 24 hours for your body to replace your blood volume.
- It is impossible to get AIDS from giving blood.
- One unit of blood can be separated into components and used to treat three or four patients.
- Whole blood has a shelf life of 35 days. Red blood cells last 42 days and platelets only five days.
- The most common blood type is O positive; the rarest blood is AB negative.
- The average healthy person will be eligible to give blood more than 330 times in his or her lifetime.

Farmer's Market open for summer

The Fourth Annual Cohasset Village Farmers' Market starts at 2:30 p.m. Thursdays on beautiful Cohasset Common.

Fresh, locally grown produce, herbs, bedding plants, perennials, wreaths, baked goodies and breads, jams and jellies, flowers and handcrafted soaps will be available every Thursday all summer long through the middle of October.

Anyone interested in helping to sponsor the Farmers' Market, and local growers and crafters interested in participating in the market are welcome to call Jennifer Warshaw at (781) 383-6992 for more information.

Summer solstice fair

On Saturday, June 19 from 5-8 p.m., the New England Wildlife Center at 19 Fort Hill Street in Bare Cove Park, will hold a Summer Solstice education and children's fair. Each year the Center celebrates the arrival of summer with children's games, live animal demonstrations, a nature walk, a campfire and marshmallow roasting. The admission is $1. Refreshments will be available. For more information call (781) 749-1248.

Last class of millennium graduates

"The Class of '99 is a great title," he said. "....It's the last class of a great millennium, not just a decade or a century."

He went on to describe man's accomplishments and challenges over the past 1,000 years from discovering the New World to putting a man on the moon.

Littauer told his classmates they had a responsibility to carry on more great accomplishments into the new millennium.

Class president James O'Sullivan said the class was lucky for the support of family and friends, to be graduating before more effects of education reform and to have not fallen victim to the horror of violence like that in Colorado.

"We're lucky but we've also been pretty darn good and that's a great combination," he said. "Let's show them how far we can go."

For Supt. Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey, who came on board last fall, this was his first CHS graduation.

"It is a tough act to follow three wonderful students," Malvey said.

But then paraphrasing Shakespeare, he said, "the world is a stage and we are all actors upon it."

He said Act I is closing in the students' lives but not for long.

Malvey told the graduates to follow their dreams, accept responsibility and be committed.

"As the curtain rises for Act 2, you need to know full well you leave with the full support and best wishes of the Cohasset school community," he said.

Members of the Cohasset Concert Band. Directed by Lee Beatty, provided music for the processional and recessional.

Senior class chorus members sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." National Honor Society awards were presented by honor society advisor Paul Narkiewicz and diplomas were awarded by School Committee Chairman Mark DeGiacomo.

Police chief's portrait wins prize

Likeness on display at Festival on the Common

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

If you are headed to the 44th annual Festival on the Common this weekend, presented by the South Shore Art Center, don't be surprised to see a familiar face staring back at you as you look at the artwork.

A prize-winning portrait of Cohasset's own Chief of Police, Brian Noonan, will be on display as part of the juried exhibition of visual arts and photography, which will be held in a large tent on the grounds of Cohasset Common. Noonan's portrait, which won second prize in the Festival's oil and acrylic category, was painted by Braintree artist Lisa Johnson, who formerly lived in Scituate, and has strong ties locally.

"He [Noonan] knew me through friends, and I thought he'd make a great subject," she said, explaining her reasons for painting Noonan.

The judges evidently agreed with her assessment, and Johnson was thrilled with the award. "It's a wonderful prize," she said. "I'm very excited about it." Noonan was also excited for Johnson, but admitted to a bit of sheepishness about thousands of people seeing his portrait.

"I'm very happy for Lisa, because it's a great thing for her, but I'm a little embarrassed," he said. "Somebody at the [South Shore] Art Center made a joke about 'hard chief turns soft'."

Even while admitting a degree of embarrassment, Noonan was quite impressed with the work that Johnson put into his portrait.

"She put lights all around me and then took about 40 pictures from all different angles. She painted the portrait from those pictures so I didn't even have to sit for a long time," he said. "It took her a couple of months to do."

Noonan said that he planned to "take a peek" at the portrait on Thursday before the Festival begins, but was prepared to brace for the ribbing that he will inevitably receive from his fellow officers.

"Oh, I'm sure once the papers come out and they [the police officers] all see it, the scanners will be going with people making comments," he laughed.

Those who wish to see Noonan's award-winning likeness will have a lot of company.

"We expect to draw 10,000 people over the three-day period," spokeswoman Sara Hannan said of the Festival, which runs this Friday through Sunday. "There will be 69 pieces in the juried exhibition and 106 in the members show and, in addition, we will be showcasing 190 young artists in a separate tent."

There will also be a food court and musical entertainment along with the art exhibitions and demonstrations. The festival opens at 2 p.m. Friday and is open from 10 a.m.-7p.m. on Saturday and from noon to 7 p.m. on Sunday.

There will be free parking available at the old Osgood School and the parking lot of the Cohasset Swim Center. A trolley will be available to provide shuttle service to the common. For more information and a free program, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-2787.

Big little memories

By Jim O'Sullivan
CORRESPONDENT

Excerpts from an Essay by a Washed-Up Little Leaguer: The video shows me pounding my fist into my mitt, which is comically too large for my scrawny forearm. A plug of Big League Chew is wedged in my cheek, loosely contained in a wide and joyful grin. As the last out is recorded, I let out a holler and sprint from shortstop to hug my dad, who is holding the scorebook over by the third base dugout.

I remember standing on the mound, a mere 44 feet from home plate, blowing smoke slower than highway speed limits past batters under five feet. I remember sitting in dugouts, joking in prepubescent voices with my teammates, guys I'll always remember as teammates. I remember our parents and little brothers and sisters driving to watch us play in the summer, then going out to ice cream or pizza with us afterwards.

For me, Little League was magic. I played from the time I was six until the summer I turned thirteen.

For me, Little League was magic. I played with great players and ones who had a hard time finding a soft pop fly. I played from the time I was six until the summer I turned thirteen, my birthday conveniently nestled fourteen days after the ominous August 1st cutoff date. Having a July birthday was like a curse if you wanted to play Little League.

When we get together nowadays, guys still want to talk about Little League. We kid We talk about games and plays that are forever cemented in our memories. We talk about playing Hingham in the summer, about guys we played against and where they're playing now. Friends of mine who haven't picked up a bat or a glove in years still talk about plays they made in the dramatic closing moments of a six inning thriller staged long ago. Everyone has a story about being robbed of a home run by the steel monstrosity erected in left field just before our final season. The batting cage wall served as a wonderful anecdote prop for most of us. Nearly everyone who played that year would have gone yard at least three times if that cage hadn't been there.

Girls and guys who didn't play Little League, or those who didn't enjoy it, laugh at us and tell us that we shouldn't think of the time when we were eleven as our glory days. But we smile and gently remind them that they don't understand what it was to play Little League.

We'd run to the concession stand after the game and, before it became a moneymaker, hand a wadded dollar bill to somebody's seven year-old brother, who would plop a charred hot dog onto a bun, his grimy fingers then flying to the candy rack to snag a Skittles or a Snickers bar. If our team wasn't playing, and we were there to watch, we'd play basketball across the street on the Adams' lowered rim. Or we'd congregate out behind the left-field fence and get a good game of pickle going. Sometimes, legends would emerge from these games, myths even. People whispered in hushed tones of the time Dave Payne hit a kid so hard with the tennis ball that the kid's brain started bleeding out his ear. I was witness to another guy hitting a kid in the chest with such force that the kid landed on his butt.

For those of us lucky enough to be selected for the summer team , an honor which sometimes owed more to who our father was than how we played, our season could stretch an-

MIAA new office could mean less money for teams

By Chris Szechenyi
CNC PROJECTS EDITOR

The organization that sets the rules for interscholastic sports competition for more than 170,000 Bay State high school students has revealed plans to spend nearly $2 million to build new and bigger headquarters.

After 21 years, the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association is flush. Once burdened with debt, the organization has money in the bank and big plans to expand.

The MIAA plans to sell its one-story brick headquarters in Milford, where its 20-member staff has worked since 1987, to move to a new location where it can double its space for offices, storage and training conferences.

Developing a new 16,000 square foot office building on seven acres of land in Franklin's Forge Park represents "the best proposal on the table," according to Richard Neal, the MIAA's executive director.

Other sites under consideration are in Holliston, Marlboro and Bellingham.

If the move means a better facility for the MIAA, it means higher costs for local school districts. That's because the organization plans to finance the new building, in part, through increases in the annual membership fees it receives from 343 high schools. It also plans to keep the schools' share of the MIAA's net profits, which traditionally are sent back to the schools at the end of each year.

The association, a non-profit organization that arranges the schedule, venue and staff for interscholastic tournaments in 33 sports, will increase the $35 per sport membership fee that schools pay by $10, the first increase in dues since 1985.

"We don't like to see increases in costs in any way, but it won't break the bank," said Framingham High School Principal Ralph Olsen. "We'll have to absorb the costs."

Cohasset AD Clark Chatterton tends to agree.

"They really need a new building," said Chatterton "Especially with all of the programs they run for athletes and coaches, it's well worth it. There's over 400 member schools involved, and there's an awful lot of work to do. The money that we usually get is such a small fraction, and the increase in dues is minimal."

"They really need a new building, especially with all of the programs they run for athletes and coaches, it's well worth it. There's over 400 member schools involved, and there's an awful lot of work to do."
CLARK CHATTERTON, COHASSET AD

Yet even Chatterton isn't sure how he'll make up the difference.

"We already have user fees," said Chatterton. "The budget's been cut so much, a couple hundred dollars won't matter at this point."

The average high school now pays an average of $810 a year to the association to compete in 16 varsity sports. But under the MIAA's new plan, those dues will increase to an average of $970 in fiscal year 2001 and to $1,130 in fiscal year 2002, an amount that depends in part on how many students participate in sports at each school.

As part of its strategy to finance the new headquarters, the MIAA also plans sell its present headquarters this fall for about $800,000. And the MIAA will retain $73,887 schools were scheduled to receive in the fall and will also suspend an estimated $60,000 in payments to the schools during each of the next two fiscal years.

The board of directors of the association recently approved the plan to move to a new building instead of expanding or renovating the existing headquarters. The move is motivated, in part, to create more space to train coaches and to offer other programs in leadership, sportsmanship and wellness.

"We would like to stay in Milford, but it looks like it would cost us hundreds of thousands of dollars more in site preparation," Neal said, citing the problem of penetrating the granite bedrock beneath the town.

Milford currently provides the association with property tax exemptions, but "Any Milford development would cost approximately $500,000 more than the proposal submitted by the developers of the Forge Park property," an MIAA memo says. The organization will pick a new site for its headquarters later this month and move next summer.

Founded in 1978 to regulate interscholastic sports, the MIAA has grown into an organization with $2.8 million in annual revenues from state grants, school fees and ticket sales. The organization's biggest money making tournaments are in football, soccer, baseball and softball; it often

Running group starts Tuesday

By Joe Reardon
CORRESPONDENT

The loneliness of the long-distance runner will be lessened thanks to a new program starting up in Norwell next Tuesday evening, June 22. The brainstorm of Chuck Martin, the Norwell High cross country and track coach, the program's goal is to give local marathoners and road racers the chance to train as a group, at least a couple of evenings a week.

The program is open to runners of all abilities, from first-time marathoners to seasoned veterans. Road racers who aren't necessarily training for a marathon are also welcome to attend the workouts. Martin, who ran under renowned distance coach Bill Squires at UMass Boston, believes runners will be able to get more benefit from their workouts training with a group and the boredom factor of running so many miles alone will be alleviated.

"You're talking about a three-to-four-month training period, and if you don't have that group to train with, you tend to lose focus," said Martin. "I want to gather local runners who basically need people to train with." Martin is hesitant to call his program a "track club" and admits it is in its infant stages. Several runners he has spoken with, though, have expressed a definite interest in taking part in the workouts.

Runners can meet at the Norwell High track on Tuesday and Thursdays at 6:15 p.m. with Sunday morning long runs to be held at various locations.

Martin is looking at running the Sunday workouts on softer surfaces and said Hingham's Worlds End and Wompatuck State Park as possible locations to meet. The Blue Hills reservation is another tentative area Martin is looking into.

Many of Martin's training techniques have been Squires influenced. Squires, who coached the Greater Boston Track Club is regarded as one of the foremost distance-running coaches in the world. Four-time Boston Marathon winner Bill Rodgers, Alberto Salazar, Greg Meyer, Randy Thomas and former Norwell resident Bob Hodge all trained under Squires.

One of Martin's goals is to find runners who want to run a marathon in late October or early November to qualify for the Boston Marathon next April. Eventually, members will be doing several of their training runs on sections for the Hopkinton-to-Boston route to prepare for the April race.

Martin learned from Squires that running a marathon course before racing on it is essential.

"He's a big believer in getting out and training on a course," Martin said. "That will be a goal, to get out and train on the Boston Marathon course. I would never hesitate to consult him on anything. He's that type of guy."

Marathoners and road racers alike will have a hard time passing up what Martin is offering. You can bet the training group will grow larger every week.

For more information, call Chuck Martin at 659-4033.

Junior high boys lax finishes with 18 wins

Cohasset's 7th and 8th grade boys' lacrosse team, playing both a middle school schedule and a full slate of Massachusetts Bay Youth Lacrosse games, set a program record with 18 wins this week.

Capping their season with a win over North Andover and a tie against Billerica at the annual statewide jamboree held Saturday at Fort Devens, the junior Skippers finished at 18-4-1, concluding their season with a nine-game unbeaten streak.

Coached by Terry Kahn and Ken Ekberg, the Cohasset boys knocked off Hingham, Duxbury, Hanover, two Newton junior highs, Scituate, Falmouth Academy and Weymouth in their season-ending streak.

On Saturday, it was announced that four members of the team — midfielders Matt Davis and Robert Hickey, defenseman Nick Spirito, and attackman Curt Kahn — had been selected for the statewide all-star game to be held next weekend in Beverly.

At the state jamboree, Cohasset twice came back from four-goal deficits against teams which had led their divisions during the regular season. Losing 4-0 to Billerica, a team Cohasset had never beaten, Hickey and seventh-grader Mike Rasmussen keyed the comeback. Rasmussen scored three goals, with Hickey assisting on two, as well as scoring once himself. The defense, led by Spirito and seventh grade goalie Nick Murphy, then stopped a Billerica counterattack in the waning minutes to hang onto the tie.

Cohasset engineered a similar comeback against North Andover. Losing 5-1, with three minutes left in the first half, the junior Skippers scored three times before intermission on goals by Kahn (2) and eighth-grader John Dwyer.

Then Cohasset dominated the start of the second half, reeling off four more unanswered goals. Rasmussen, seventh-grader Mike Devine and Hickey led the scoring charge, with Matt Davis picking up three of his four assists. The Skipper defense, led by Spirito, Stephen Davis, Dan Roth and Garreth Curran, shut down North Andover without a goal the entire half.

After the game, coach Terry Kahn singled out several players for praise.

"Paul Digan stepped into the first midfield," said Kahn, "and gave Hickey and Davis a chance to create. Robby Carpenter had an all-star level season, centering the second midfield and our man-down middies. Roth was our most improved defender. And players like Dwayne Morris, Mike Hajjar, Mark Davis, Mike Geddes, Malcolm Stansell, Conor Buick, Ian Hickey, Adam LaVoy, Ryan and Barry Tufts, John Durkin and Reed Smith all contributed in fundamental ways to our success. That said, the coaching of Ken Ekberg and Jim Murphy, our MBYLL assistant, is probably the reason this team succeeded at a level no Cohasset lacrosse team has ever reached."

Hickey, Kahn, Spirito and Davis will join players selected from throughout the South Shore and Cape Cod and the Islands as members of the South team for the state all-star competition.

loses money on other games.

The MIAA also receives about $40,000 in revenues each year from sponsors such as Spaulding and Wilson. It charges local cable companies and other media about $20,000 a year to broadcast the tournaments.

In addition to tournaments, the MIAA trains hundreds of athletes, coaches, principals and superintendents in leadership and sportsmanship. It also offers health-related programs designed to persuade teenagers not to smoke or drink alcohol.

"We're doing a lot with relatively little in financial resources," said Neal, a graduate of Marion High School in Framingham.

Despite the organization's statewide activities, many athletes and sports fans know relatively little about the MIAA.

"I go to a lot of the events we sponsor and most people know nothing about the organization," said Sherry Bryant, the MIAA's controller and assistant director.

In the past, the MIAA has sparked controversies by prohibiting students from taking part in competitions when they violated the organization's rules. The association has fought to uphold those rules in several high-profile court cases.

And it has been better known for the strict image it casts in signs it has posted at its tournaments that once said: "In accordance with MIAA policy, NO balloons, horns, posters, banners, signs, confetti or noisemakers are permitted."

In recent years it has tried to soften that image. Now its tickets are printed with the words "sportsmanship, integrity and ethics" in bold red letters.

And the new motto on its signs reads: "Building the Future Through Athletics."

Neal said the MIAA is no longer devoted to tournaments alone.

"Our mission is educational. It's not sponsoring tournaments – it's to produce life-long lessons," he said. "If we can teach good citizenship, integrity and leadership, then we're going to make a difference."

One strength it can apply to those goals is sheer scale.

The MIAA is now the largest high school sports association in New England.

And the pay it provides top managers reflects that scale.

Neal, who has worked for the organization from its inception, earned $92,705 during its last fiscal year. He also earned another $10,511 as the chief executive of the Massachusetts Secondary School Administrators Association, a non-profit organization based in the same building in Milford.

He and the MIAA's associate executive director, William Gaines, who earned $80,544 last year in addition to $9,130 from the MSSAA, both enjoy the use of company cars. Neal makes no apologies for his salary or benefits.

"I'm worth a lot more," he said.

And while the MIAA once borrowed money to put on some tournaments, it now has a healthy bottom line. The organization had $876,598 in its emergency and capital fund last fiscal year, and on top of that, it usually sends 45 percent of its net revenues back to the schools.

"I don't feel any need to apologize to anyone that we're getting too big," Neal said.

Big little memories

other twenty games. We got to travel to Stoughton, Randolph, Norwood; even today I'm confused when I hear pros complain about the travel. To us, nothing was better than riding to the game with your teammates, playing the game, then riding home with the same guys.

For us former Little Leaguers, now moved on to the jaded world of high school athletics, to think about our days in Little League is to pine. We long to recapture those days of innocence and baseball. If we'd only appreciated then what we had. If you get a chance to talk to a Little Leaguer, don't regale him with stories about how it was when you played, like I just did for seven hundred words. Instead, encourage him to remember his days in Little League; urge him to remember something, anything, everything. I take away my memories of 44 foot fastballs and multi-error plays and twenty-eight inch bats. I remember my Dad's smile when I hugged him, and thinking then that maybe he knew something I didn't.

Cohasset junior lacrosse ends season on an up note

The Cohasset youth lacrosse program saved its best for last this season, finishing its campaign June 11-12 with a rousing game between its two teams, and then combining for an upset win in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League Jamboree.

Both Cohasset Blue and Cohasset White — the two Under-12 teams — suffered through a tough season, each winning just one game, so the June 11 tilt would give one team local bragging rights — and it was played like a lot was at stake.

The two teams swapped goals in the first quarter, with Jon Grimm netting two for the Blue squad and Jake Previte two for White, as the game grounded to a 3-3 tie at the end of one period.

The Blue team then broke out in the second quarter, with Grimm netting one goal and two assists in a five-goal run for the Blue squad. White scored twice — with Previte finishing a hat trick — to make it 8-5 at the half.

White narrowed the margin to 9-8 at the end of the third quarter and Aidan Buick's second goal of the game tied the score early in the fourth quarter, before Sam Steele scored his third goal of the game — the eventual game-winner — for Blue. Mike Barnes made most of his eight second-half saves down the stretch to keep White from coming back, and Blue pulled away to a 12-9 win.

With that game fresh in their minds, the two teams were combined into one squad for the Jamboree, which attracted 128 teams and more than 2,500 lacrosse players to Fort Devens in Devens, Mass. The Jamboree is the largest one-day youth lacrosse event in the country.

Cohasset dropped its first game of the Jamboree, 8-2, to a rough, physical North Andover team. Coach Chuck Jaffe noted that the game was closer than the score, an important factor because the second game of the day was against North Andover's second youth team, which was equally big and had an impressive record.

This time, the Cohasset group put out its best effort of the season, with seven different players scoring goals en route to an 8-3 victory. Previte and Chris Barber each had a goal and an assist to lead the way offensively, and Chris Simms had his best game of the season in the goal, stopping 12 North Andover shots and snuffing out repeated comeback attempts.

The defense of Mike Barnes, Kirby Bukowski, Casey Coleman, Patrick Flynn, Lisa Spirito and, especially Dominic Strazzulla, also combined for its best, most aggressive performance of the year.

Jaffe noted that the win was good because of what it showed the players. "We had said all year to ignore our record, which was hard to do because the two teams totaled 2 wins, 17 losses and 2 ties going into the last weekend of play," Jaffe said. "We felt it was in the best interest of the kids to have two teams, to make our seventh-graders play with older kids — where most towns bring seventh-graders down to dominate the younger league — and to give the players as much experience as possible. We said all year that we would have done a lot better record-wise had we fielded just one team; now, after beating a team that had eight seventh-graders and that had won most of its games, our kids know it was true."

The coach praised the players for sticking to the game all season in spite of the losing.

"No one ever slowed down or let up for a moment, even though we usually were outmanned and outgunned," Jaffe said. "I couldn't be more proud of these kids, even if we had an undefeated season."

Previte, Grimm, Barber and Jonathan Littauer were selected to attend the Mass Bay All-Star Jamboree in Beverly June 19.

Previte was the team's leading scorer this year, finishing with 27 goals and 10 assists for 37 points. The rest of the team's final scoresheet looks like this:

Jon Grimm (19 goals-4 assists-23 points), Aidan Buick (18-5-23), Chris Barber (15-6-21), Sam Steele (11-2-13), Zach Markert (12-1-13), Trevor Brady (8-1-9), Toffer Noering (6-2-8), Jonathan Littauer (6-1-7), Jake Kovach (2-5-7), Michael Martone (6-0-6), Timothy Pilczak (4-2-6); Danny Sullivan (4-2-6), Matt O'Connell (3-3-6), Joey Durkin (3-2-5), Ned MacPherson (2-3-5), Mark Donovan (2-0-2), Mike Barnes (0-2-2), Corey Chase (1-0-1), Jared Kinch (1-0-1), Colin Regan (1-0-1), Evan Sacks (1-0-1), Chris Simms (1-0-1), Brandon Smith (0-1-1), Zach Etkind (0-1-1).

In the goal, Chris Simms led the team with 128 saves and .516 save percentage. Mike Barnes made 103 stops and had a save percentage of .518. Lisa Spirito contributed 35 saves during limited time in the goal, and had a save percentage of .593.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will hold its registration for the spring 2000 season late this year. The program currently plans on fielding just one Under-12 team and one Under-14 squad. The Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League also has expanded to create a program for third- and fourth-grade children, but Cohasset will not field a team in that division unless new coaches step forward to coach at that level.

"To continue the game's growth here in town, we need additional coaches," said Jaffe. "Already, the plan is to field just one Under-12 team next year, which means we probably will have to turn interested players away, but we can't do two teams again without significantly more volunteers."

For more information on the youth lacrosse program or to volunteer to coach in 2000, call Chuck Jaffe at (781) 383-9858.

Seahawks golf tourney Friday

The South Shore Seahawks will hold its annual golf tournament on Friday, June 18 at Widow's Walk, 250, Driftway, Scituate, starting with an 8:30 a.m. shot gun start. There will be a dinner to follow at Pier 44.

CHS student's life is fondly remembered

Scholarship, memorial dedicated in Corcoran's honor

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Friends and loved ones of Bourke Corcoran, the 18-year old high school senior who was killed in a tragic car accident last June, honored him this week with a pair of memorials that ensure his legacy will forever remain a part of the Cohasset High School community.

An engraved stone bench and plaque were placed on the lawn in front of Cohasset Middle High School between a pair of newly-planted dogwood trees at a special tribute to his memory on Thursday evening. The plaque bears the inscription "To Bourke Corcoran, Our Forever Friend," and several hundred people, many of them students, came to witness the dedication of the memorial, an indication of how much his legacy still lingers throughout Cohasset.

The Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church conducted the remembrance, at which those in attendance stood in a large circle surrounding the memorial. Ritts led the assembled in prayer and encouraged them to recall fond memories of the manner in which Bourke lived, rather than focusing upon the tragedy that took his life.

"Think of something Bourke said that made you laugh or a memory of him that makes you smile," Ritts said.

After those at the remembrance paid their silent respects to Bourke, his parents, Merlyn and Bourke Corcoran, thanked them for their help in getting through a difficult year. "Thank you all so much for the overwhelming compassion and support you've shown us this past year," Mrs. Corcoran said. "We love you all."

Mrs. Corcoran also said at the ceremony that she hopes the bench which bears her son's name will be a place to share fond remembrances. "I hope if you see my husband and I sitting on this bench, you'll come talk to us and share some memories of Bourke or just come up and say hi," she said.

As they have all year, those brought together by Bourke's tragic death leaned on each other for comfort and support. Tears and hugs were both plentiful as students consoled each other and continued to mourn their collective loss.

"We have all grown stronger and closer together as a result of this tragedy," Ritts said in noting the bonds that have been strengthened in order to deal with the grief following Bourke's death. "We have learned what true friendship means."

That ideal was demonstrated by the dedication of a scholarship in Bourke's name, the money for which was raised through donations to the scholarship fund which the Corcorans established after Bourke's death, and through the generosity of local businesses, who contributed generously toward honoring Bourke Corcoran's legacy with a gift that would help further the educations of deserving Cohasset High students.

The Bourke Corcoran Memorial Scholarship will be presented annually to one male and one female from the senior class based on their essays about the meaning of true friendship. This year's essays were judged by a panel of 12 parents, including the Corcorans, and the identities of the authors were unknown to the judges, aside from their gender.

This year's recipients of the Bourke Corcoran Memorial Scholarship are Justin Golden, who is bound for Harvard University, and Tara Hettstrom, who will attend Boston College.

Golden was moved by the award that bears his friend's name, but indicated that receiving it was a bittersweet experience. "It meant everything to me," he said. "It's the greatest honor I've ever received. But all I could think about the whole time was how much I miss him."

Hettstrom was also overcome with emotion at the awards banquet on Wednesday night. "It was so overwhelming because the Corcorans were up there [on stage] and I was so emotional just thinking about Bourke and what a great friend he was," she said. "When they called my name, the tears came even harder. No amount of money would have meant more to me than to receive an award with Bourke's name attached to it. It's the most wonderful honor I can imagine."

Tara said her essay about the meaning of true friendship that she entered in the scholarship competition was about Bourke and that she submitted the same essay in her application to Boston College. "Bourke was just such a wonderful friend," she said. "He will always be the epitome of what true friendship means to me. He was always there for me."

The dedication of the bench the following night left Tara feeling emotionally drained, but she was touched deeply by the ceremony. "It was beautiful," she said. "I loved the idea of a bench where people can sit and reflect. Afterwards, I went up and hugged the Corcorans. It seemed like a 10-minute hug. It was very emotional."

The Corcorans wrote a note of congratulations to each of the scholarship recipients, a gesture that touched Tara's mother, Karen Hettstrom. "It was so wonderful of the Corcorans to take it upon themselves to write she and Justin a note," Mrs. Hettstrom said. "They are such wonderful, giving people."

Supporting local talent

Musicians are invited to participate in summer services at St. Nicholas United Methodist Church in Hull Village. Every week throughout July and August, students will be the featured soloists in an ongoing effort by the church to support local talent. All ages are welcome to participate. The music director, Joan Jensen, would like to see instrumentalists and/or vocalists perform, and is willing to rehearse with the students if necessary. Groups are also welcome. Previous participants have been a 7-year-old pianist, high school vocalists and a string quartet.

To arrange an interview and make a date to perform, parents or students may call Joan Jensen at (781) 383-2240.

LIBRARY CORNER

What's new for summer in the children's room

The summer reading program begins June 28 at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This year's theme is "Funny things happen when you read."

Children entering grade 1 and up are eligible to participate. They can pick up their reading logs in the Children's Room and record the minutes they spend reading during the summer. Each week different prizes will be awarded to everyone who has read at least 15 minutes and brings their log to show the librarian. Prizes include alien key chains, pencils, insect tattoos, funny drinking straws, buttons, stickers and more.

Kids can sign up for the raffle of a special assortment of alien "beanie babies," to be held at the end of the program. There will also be the popular estimating contest with candy in the glass jar. Certificates will be awarded to all children who join the program.

Also, Mrs. Murphy, Deer Hill School librarian, will once again lead the popular "Puzzle Club" Monday nights from 7 to 8:45 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for children entering grades 3-5.

In addition, the library will offer a craft program for children entering grades 3-5. This class will meet Tuesday afternoons for four weeks, beginning July 20. Materials will be supplied and there is no charge for the program.

For the younger set, a story hour with a simple craft will be offered for children ages 3-5 Tuesday mornings for four weeks beginning July 20.

For more information on any of these programs or to register, call the library at 383-1348. Look forward to a summer of reading, puzzles and fun!

Summer Solstice at World's End

The Trustees of Reservations has announced that its 16th annual Summer Solstice Celebration will be held on Monday evening June 21, from 6 to 8 p.m. [If weather is questionable, please call the World's End Ranger Station at 781-749-8956 after 4 p.m.] So pack a picnic supper, load the entire family into the car and join many of your friends and neighbors atop Planter's Hill for a most entertaining evening.

An admission fee of $5 for members of the Trustees of Reservations and $7 for non-members will be charged to cover expenses. Children 12 years and under will be admitted free. Sorry, no dogs.

For more information about the Summer Solstice Celebration, please call Marge Balzotti at The Trustees' Southeast Regional office. Telephone: 781-821-2977, extension 110.

Rusty Skippers tune up for Festival on the Common

Community marching band seeks members

By Shirley J. Loomis
CORRESPONDENT

All that's needed to become a part of The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset Community Marching Band, is a good dose of enthusiasm and a desire to play an instrument —even one that has collected numerous years of dust.

That combination has proved successful for the 20 -member band founded in 1995 by the late Rev. Edward Atkinson, long-time pastor of First Parish Church.

Roger Whitley, band leader for this group of local talent formerly known as the Harborfest Marching Band, said one of the most notable things he's observed in the four years since the band's inception is "how much fun the members have getting together to practice and perform."

And the two practices before each engagement isn't a deterrent.

"It's not a big commitment," Whitley said. "But it's a commitment everyone can maintain, and we enjoy what we do."

There is a real diversity of members both in age and background, Whitley, a WWII veteran, was especially pleased that Taps was performed this Memorial Day by The Rusty Skippers' Janet Hoyler, now a college student in Delaware. As a Deer Hill pupil, Hoyler studied under Steven Biagini, who is music director at school and also directs the Rusty Skippers.

"It's especially gratifying to have a former Cohasset student continue on and become one of the town's band members," Biagini said. "And also to have so many working people, many with families, making time in their schedules to get together and play, in some cases after being away from music for many years."

The band members support one another. They have pulled their members in wagons, when health would not have permitted them walking the distance and shuttled members from one function to another when performance scheduling conflicts have arisen. One year, a get-away car was strategically located, complete with motor running, so one member could make a hasty exit and rapidly be chauffeured to a local wedding performance.

At 12:30 p.m. Sunday, June 20, the band will perform during the Festival on the Common.

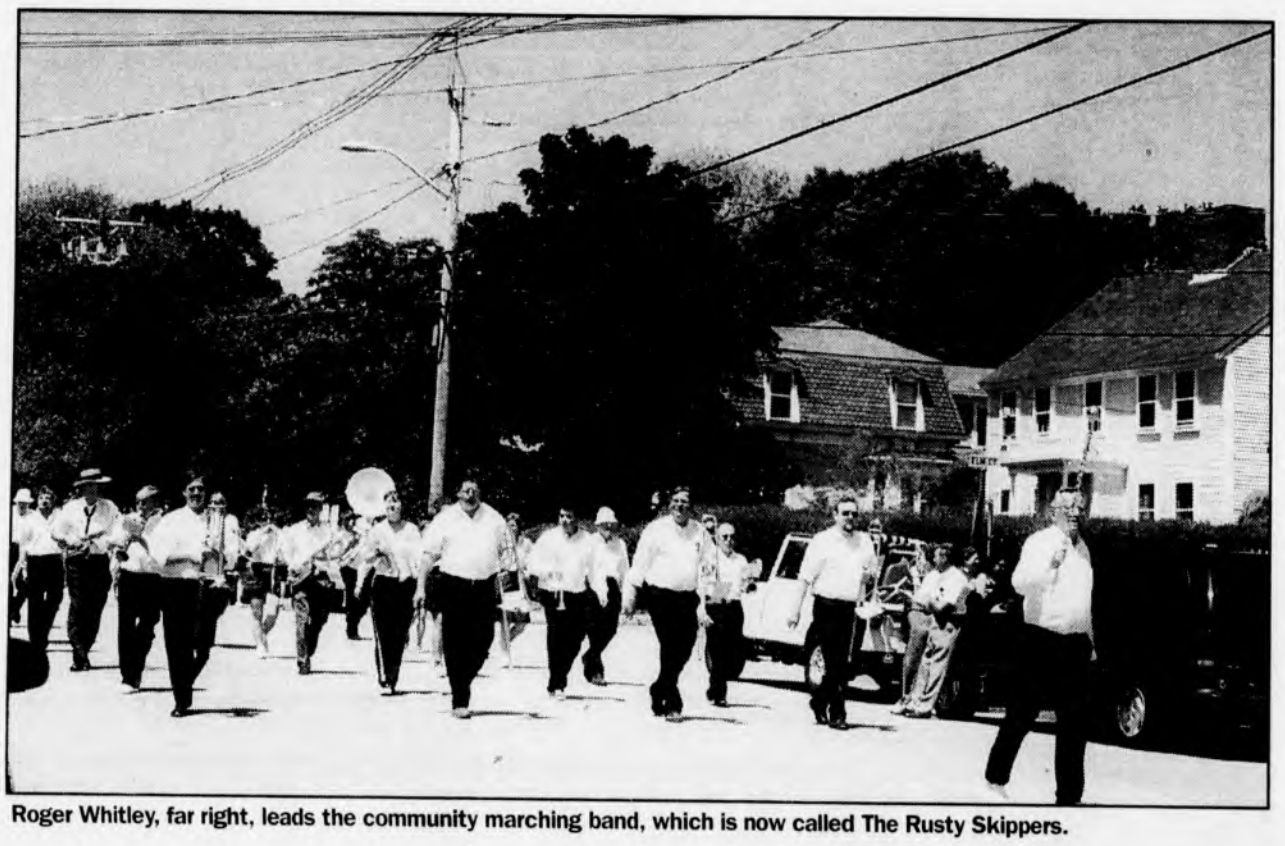
In addition to the Memorial Day Parade and art festival, The Rusty Skippers, also performs at the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony on the Common. If you would like to request the band's appearance at a performance other than the ones mentioned, contact Biagini at Deer Hill School, 383-6115.

If you'd like to join the band, call Biagini or Betts Murray at 383-9444.

"Look in your attics and basements for instruments that have been collecting dust for years," says Murray, a band member. "The band always has room for more. We welcome new people. We need people!"

Biagini said the band needs clarinets and trumpets, although anyone is welcome. Some high school (or later) experience playing an instrument is all the experience required.

"We have a great time and it's a chance to get back to playing an instrument," he said. "And we laugh a lot."



Roger Whitley, far right, leads the community marching band, which is now called The Rusty Skippers.

Condos seek sewer hookup

But commission says no

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

A move to a condominium development in upscale Cohasset conjures up handsome images of old converted estates amid ledge outcroppings tucked well off the beaten path.

"We're not willing to pay $50,000 to $70,000 for a septic system that is marginal. That's not a good investment."
— Mark Brennan, 2 Mendel Road

That's the way it's supposed to be.

But for five homeowners in Olde Farm Hills Estate off Mendel Road, their dream of life in this beautiful coastal town has turned into a nightmare.

After spending upwards of $26,000 to seek a remedy, the neighbors' joint septic system is still in failure with the odds for a successful up-

Village effort going strong

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The Farmer's Market is in full swing every Thursday, offering fruits, vegetables, plants and home-baked goods throughout the summer. Hundreds of people enjoy a Thursday afternoon on the common, although few probably remember that the Farmer's Market was the first project initiated by the Village Revitalization Task Force in 1996.

The effort to revitalize Cohasset Village is proceeding at a brisk pace despite a complete lack of local public funding. Local officials would love to fund the revitalization effort, but the coffers are dry, as anyone familiar with recent budget developments knows. Despite that lack of funding — or maybe because of it — members of the task force have been seeking out innovative ways to fund downtown revitalization efforts. Last month, the task force learned that the state had approved its application for special status as an official Downtown Organization. The special status improves the town's prospects for receiving state grants and

Festival is a family affair

Event appeals to all ages

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Cohasset often has the look and feel of a Norman Rockwell painting, of small-town Americana at its most pure. Rarely has the town better captured that look and feel than it did last weekend, as the South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common attracted young and old alike to Cohasset Common on a picturesque Father's Day weekend.

Juliana Lovell, chairwoman of this year's Festival, said the event was well-attended and that she was appreciative of the turnout.

"We think we had about 6,000 to 7,000 people come out, but since we don't charge admission, that's really just a guess, an estimate", she said. "We loved that we saw so many families enjoying themselves."

Lovell felt that the clear blue skies and comfortable temperatures were important factors in the Festival's success.

"We couldn't have asked for better weather," she said. "This is my first year in charge of the Festival, and I'd heard horror stories about torrential downpours and 90-degree heat. I'm thankful for the three days of good weather."

As any parent knows, keeping the kids entertained is of paramount importance if both parents and children are to enjoy themselves, and the Festival organizers obliged with activities in the Kids Tent to keep the youngsters happily occupied.

"We went through several hundred pounds of rice and over 1400 balloons," Lovell said of just a couple of the materials the children used. "The kids had a great time."

While many children reveled in creating their own masterpieces in the Kidstent, other budding DaVincis and Michelangelos had their work displayed as part of the Young Artists Exhibition, a separate tent which housed pieces done by children ranging in age from preschoolers to high school seniors.

One such young artist is Osgood kindergarten student Travers Craven, who won a first-place blue ribbon for his painting entitled "A Sunny Day."

Teen center project forging ahead

Need donations of skilled labor to finish

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

A potential buyer emerged this week for the old DPW garage building which is currently being transformed into a teen center, yet those involved in the teen center project are resolute in seeing it completed.

The Youth Resources Committee, which consists of four adults, four students, and chairman Jack Worley, who is also the town's recreation director, voted to go ahead with the project at their meeting on Tuesday night, in spite of the fact that someone had looked into purchasing the building which they have been working on since last September.

"It's a matter of lining up volunteer tradespeople."
Jack Worley, recreation director

"We know there is someone who has expressed an interest in buying the building, but the kids didn't want to give up what they've worked for, especially when it's so close to completion," Youth Resources Committee member Liz Bates said.

The vote was held at the request of the Board of Selectmen and Town Manager Mark Haddad, who wanted to see whether the YRC wished to go ahead with the teen center before he explored the possibility of a sale of the garage building. Haddad did not wish to disclose the name of the potential buyer.

"The selectmen made sure we wanted to continue," Worley said. "When we said that we

Selectmen ask for meeting with Bell Atlantic

The Board of Selectmen will ask Bell Atlantic representatives to come in to discuss how to avoid another phone outage like the one that occurred on June 14th and knocked out phone service in much of Cohasset.

"The telephone outage was a problem," said Selectman Fred Koed, who made the suggestion that Bell Atlantic come in for a meeting.

"That's the second time somebody's punched through an underground cable on that part of 3A. It's within a couple of hundred feet of where it happened before."

The police and fire departments were among those losing phone service, and 911 service was out temporarily as well, though calls were rerouted according to police and fire contingency plans, a fact which Town Manager Mark Haddad reminded everyone at the meeting about.

"I would like to once again commend the police and fire departments," he said. "They had good contingency plans."

Koed said he would like to see a permanent solution to the problem with cables on 3A.

"Perhaps we should encase that whole section in cement," he said.

Camp Marist trip reinstated

Students entering the 9th grade can once again look forward to an overnight camp trip designed to bond the class as they begin their high school years.

Cohasset Middle High School principal Curtis Collins secured school committee approval to for the trip to Camp Marist, which is located in Ossipee Lake, New Hampshire. The trip will take place on September 7th and 8th, which are the Tuesday and Wednesday after Labor Day, and Collins feels the experience is vitally important.

"I'm really gung-ho about getting this back on track," he said. "We do a lot of problem-solving, trust-building, and leadership training activities at Camp Marist. Those are very important for kids as they enter high school."

Guidance counselor Anne Porter added that students will learn values which they need as part of the high school community.

"We'll talk a great deal about setting goals for the high school years. The trip will help to set a positive tone."

School committee member Betsy Connolly said her own kids have been to Camp Marist, and wholeheartedly supported Collins' request.

"Having had two daughters who have gone through it, I can say that it truly does bond the class," she said.

Collins said the price for the trip will be approximately between $65 and $75 per student, which includes the charter bus, meals, and a DJ for a dance to be held on Tuesday night.

Ten minutes for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays.

The next selectmen's meeting is Monday, July 12.

Beach, RTF stickers expired

Cohasset author writes book about Civil War nurses

Remarkable woman tells story of others like her

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

When one thinks of the "golden years", he or she is apt to imagine days filled with relaxation, a respite from years spent working feverishly in his or her chosen profession. Perhaps one might travel, get in a few rounds on the golf course, or grow some exceedingly large tomatoes. While leisure activities may vary, the time has finally arrived to enjoy the fruits of one's lifetime of labor. Nancy Garrison, however, is different. A Cohasset resident, Garrison decided to thrust herself into the world of academia at an age when most are winding down their careers, and her first book, With Courage and Delicacy: Civil War on the Peninsula; Women and the U.S. Sanitary Commission, was published this January.

Garrison's history of three somewhat sheltered women from New York and Newport who volunteered their services as nurses for the Union Army during the Peninsula Campaign of 1862, the Union's first major attempt to capture Richmond, Virginia, is the pinnacle of an academic career which she embarked upon when she enrolled as an undergraduate at Milton's Curry College in 1991 at age 61.

"I had always dreamed about going to college," Garrison explained. "I worked as an interior designer in the 1960's and bred and trained golden retrievers for the better part of 20 years. My children were grown. I thought, why not?".

Nancy Garrison also designed the jacket for her new book.

Not only did Garrison graduate with bachelor's degrees in both English and women's studies from Curry in 1994, but she did so with a perfect 4.0 average and as valedictorian of her college class.

"The next morning, I started graduate school at Simmons College," Garrison said without a hint of arrogance about her accomplishment. "I graduated from Simmons in January 1997 with a master's degree in Liberal Studies, but my concentration was in American History. While I was at Simmons, I kept thinking of this book I wanted to write. Even as an undergrad, I thought about it."

" I think every English major thinks they have a book in them somewhere," she laughed.

The idea for her book had been on Garrison's mind since she found a book of letters written by Katherine Wormeley, one of the three Civil War nurses who are the subjects of her book, at the summer house in the White Mountains of New Hampshire where she and her husband Fred often brought their children to enjoy some peace and serenity.

"It was one of those rainy days where you're just looking for something to read," Garrison said of the day she discovered Wormeley's letters. "It was at least 20 years ago and maybe even 30 years ago. It's a small book of her collected letters, which she published in 1898, titled The Cruel Side of War. That book always stayed with me."

"When I went to graduate school, I was fairly loose and open as to what I would specialize in. I took a women's history course and Katherine's book came rushing back. I looked for the best books I could on the Civil War and just started soaking up Civil War history."

Garrison wrote her master's thesis about Katherine Wormeley and her two fellow nurses, but felt she couldn't tell the story as fully as she wished, bounded as she was by the constraints of the thesis assignment.

"In a thesis, you have to make an argument, and that's not how I wanted to tell this story," Garrison said. "I wanted to tell it in a real timeline and arrange it as a novel. The thesis was about the role of women in the Civil War, and these three women in particular. The book is about women and men. I really wanted to tie the women's stories in with the battles."

To find out more about the military history behind the Peninsula Campaign, Garrison and her husband took a couple of research trips to the Richmond battlefield.

"At the visitors' center, I found a picture and a map in a book that had been published by Savas (a publishing company based in Mason City, Iowa) that I really wanted to use. I wrote to them asking permission and told them about the project. I finished the thesis in December of 1996 and worked on it for the next six months. I finally sent it to Savas in June of 1997."

It was standing room only for Nancy Garrison at a recent book signing at Buttonwood Books.

When a couple of months passed and she hadn't heard back from anyone at Savas, Garrison feared her dream would not be realized.

"I tried to forget about it, but I still fantasized," she said. "In November of 1997, I got a call from Savas out of the blue saying they wanted to publish it. I had anticipated it in my mind for so long, but it still felt like a dream."

> "As a writer she tells an unbelievable story."
> - Theodore Savas, publisher

Theodore Savas, Garrison's publisher, was astonished by the quality of her manuscript.

"I was glancing at it [the manuscript] on the freeway outside of Los Angeles, and I had to pull over and keep reading it," he recounted. "As a writer she tells an unbelievable story.

"I can say, in all honesty, that we've never had a book that well-written on its first draft."

Garrison finished writing the book in October of 1998 and, as she did after going right from her undergraduate studies to her graduate work, she immediately embarked upon another challenge, that of designing her book in addition to writing it.

"I made some suggestions to Ted (Savas) about the design for the book cover. I had gathered some great pictures from the Institute for Military History at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania and had some other photographs and illustrations I wanted to include in the book.

"He finally asked me if I wanted to go ahead and design the book myself. I learned how to use graphic software when I got my first computer back in 1994. When design programs started to flower in 1998, I gave myself a crash course. But I had never done desktop publishing before, so it was a challenge."

Savas said that Garrison's extensive dual roles of author and designer of her book were unprecedented at his publishing company.

"We've never, ever had someone do both before," he said. "But she had a background in graphic design and she had some great ideas. She really helped to craft her own book."

Garrison said that she wishes more people of her generation would start using computers. "I definitely think there is a generation gap as far as using computers goes. A lot of friends my age are afraid of them. But when you go to college now, you have to learn e-mail and how to use the internet. I think if more older people went to college, they could explore the creative potential computers. I'm a computer nut."

Now that the book is finished and has been released, Garrison reflected on what the experience has meant to her.

"It's just such a huge experience," she said. "I've never learned so much."

Not one to rest on her laurels, Garrison is back teaching women's studies at Curry, where she has taught since 1997.

"I love being around the students," she said. "They are so much fun."

Parties strategize in wake of Hedlund's plans

Gearing up for a fight

By Mary Ford and Julie Mehegan
STAFF WRITERS

Both political parties are wasting no time putting strategies together after learning this week that State Sen. Robert Hedlund has added his name to the growing list of candidates entering the Weymouth mayoral race.

Hedlund, who ended months of speculation and made his plans official Monday, is considered by many to have an edge in the Weymouth race. Political observers from both parties believe Hedlund has a good shot and will add momentum in Weymouth.

Hedlund will square off with other Weymouth mayoral candidates in a non-partisan primary in September. The top two vote-getters will compete in a run-off election in November with the winner taking office in January.

If Hedlund wins, he would have to resign his senate seat because the Weymouth charter does not allow the mayor to hold another elected position. Then a special election — the timing of which would be determined by the senate president Thomas Birmingham — would be called to determine Hedlund's successor.

The ink is hardly dry on Hedlund's announcement and it raises all sorts of possible scenarios for Democrats and Republicans alike who are eyeing the Plymouth Norfolk District senate seat.

Local Republicans aren't going to take the wait-and-see approach when it comes to holding on to the seat.

"We're not waiting 15 seconds," said James Claypoole of Hingham, which is the one of the largest towns in the district that stretches from three precincts in Braintree all the way to Duxbury. "We're moving ahead by first finding out who's interested."

Claypoole, who is a long-time member of the Hingham Republican Town Committee, was mum about who might be on the Republicans' short list.

Democrats are equally intrigued at the possibility of recapturing the Republican seat.

"I think it's very important," said Garrett Bradley, a well-known Hingham Democrat, who ran an extremely close but unsuccessful campaign against State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray in 1998. "If he runs and wins, he has to step down. If he runs and loses, I think it would say he's vulnerable, which I think a lot of Democrats are looking at."

"Either way it's exciting for the district," Bradley added.

'Nothing to lose'

Cohasset's Polly Logan, vice chairman of the state Republican Party, said Hedlund has nothing to lose by seeking the mayoral spot.

"It renews his organization by getting a lot of people involved," Logan said. "It's a win-win for him. He's a good campaigner."

Logan said Weymouth makes up one-third of the district, so win or lose, Hedlund's mayoral candidacy will provide him with a forum to discuss the issues.

Hedlund, 37, is midway through his fourth term as a Republican state senator in a predominately Democratic state. He is one of only seven Republicans in the state senate.

Hedlund pointed out he may not be going anywhere.

"The point of this conversation might be moot, if the voters decide I'm not the person they want," he said. "I may have the Bill Weld syndrome. The voters may want to keep me in the senate," he said. (Weld, a popular governor, lost a race for the US senate, which kept him on Beacon Hill).

"We're not waiting 15 seconds. We're moving ahead by first finding out who's interested."
— James Claypoole, Hingham Republican Town Committee

But Hedlund has proven he can get the votes to win tough races.

A virtual political newcomer at the time, Hedlund—who grew up in Hingham and has lived in Weymouth full-time since 1989—defeated Don Hussey of Hingham and Christy Mihos of Cohasset in the 1990 Republican primary. He went on to beat state Rep. Robert Ambler, a Weymouth Democrat, for the Plymouth-Norfolk senate seat.

In 1992, Hedlund lost to Brian McDonald of Weymouth but regained the seat by defeating McDonald in 1994. In 1996, Hedlund soundly defeated challenger Robert Delahunt Jr. Then in 1998, Hedlund ran unopposed for reelection.

A fellow Republican, state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset said Hedlund has a good chance becoming Weymouth's first mayor.

"Look at the numbers," she said. "As a senator, he has carried Weymouth, a big Democratic town—the largest in the district. He didn't grow up there but he loves Weymouth and they support him."

Logan does not see Hedlund's potential departure from the senate as a net loss for the state Republican Party.

"Anytime you can get a Republican to run for major of a city, it's a plus," she said. "The whole district will get involved and go over to help him."

Claypoole of the Hingham Republican Town Committee said Hedlund is clearly the favorite in the Weymouth race that has attracted 11 candidates so far.

"Hedlund has been so abundantly successful in towns that have divergent views," he said. "He will be able to bring Weymouth together."

Claypoole said Hedlund's successor does not necessarily have to be from Weymouth. He said character is more important than geographic location.

"It all starts with the genes," he said. "You need fortitude, wisdom and the vision about how to address problems in state government."

Hedlund said if elected mayor, he would miss state government but looks forward to a new challenge.

"It will be the kind of challenge that would make me a better elected official," he said. "In the legislature the buck sails right past your desk. It's the house's fault or the governor's fault.

"That's not the case when you're the chief executive officer of a municipality. The buck stops right on your desk."

Democrats want seat

Whether Hedlund wins or loses in the fall, capturing his seat is important to Democrats in the Plymouth Norfolk district despite the fact that they offered no opposition to Hedlund in 1998.

Two Democrats mentioned as potential candidates for Hedlund's senate seat are James Cantwell, an aide to Congressman William Delahunt and a former Norfolk County assistant district attorney and former Marshfield selectman, and Ted LeClair, also of Marshfield, who has already formed a campaign committee with the state's Office of Campaign and Political Finance.

LeClair, 30, is a Scituate native who lives in Marshfield. He is the founder and president of LeClair Brothers Cranberry Co., is part owner and vice president of Webster Cranberry Co., and is a former Navy officer.

"I have put the pieces together for a run at the state senate seat," LeClair said. "I have made my intentions clear to different leaders throughout the district that I have had very serious interest in this seat for quite a while."

LeClair has begun raising money but stopped short of formally announcing his candidacy. "I think it would be more appropriate to make a formal announcement at another time. This time should really be devoted to Weymouth and the candidates seeking to establish its first city government."

Cantwell, a Marshfield native, is currently in the process of purchasing a home in Weymouth, prompting speculation that he is maneuvering for a run at the seat from the biggest city in the district.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, left, and Massachusetts Highway Commissioner Matthew Amorello examine the Fore River Bridge where concrete and steel joints show decay.

"To be honest, a number of people have approached me over the last few months about being a candidate for this office," Cantwell said Tuesday. "It is something I am looking at very seriously."

Bradley, 28, of Hingham, said he does not plan to run for Hedlund's seat himself, but said he is seriously considering another go at the seat held by Murray, a Republican.

Regardless of what happens in the mayor's race, Bradley said, voters can count on having a Democrat in the race.

"There's no way that seat will not be contested next time around," he said.

Condos seek sewer hookup

grade given just a 50-50 chance.

Mark Brennan, 2 Mendel Road, said the condo association doesn't like those odds.

"We're not willing to pay $50,000 to $70,000 for a septic system that is marginal," he said. "That's not a good investment."

The homeowners went before the board of health Tuesday to plead their case. The only viable solution, they say, is hooking up to the Central Cohasset sewer district through 100 Pond Street, a condo development that abuts Olde Farm Hills Estate. Plans are to connect 100 Pond Street to the new sewer line.

But the residents said the sewer commission that voted last week not to allow them to hook up has stonewalled them. To make matters worse, they were not notified that they were on the sewer commission agenda and therefore did not get the chance to explain the situation in person.

"We desperately need your help to hook up to 100 Pond Street," Brennan, the spokesman for the condo association, told the health board.

The health board agreed to send a letter to the sewer commission explaining that the failed system at Old Farm Hills Estates constitutes a public health emergency. The estate is also near the sewer line that will connect 100 Pond Street and there is capacity in the Central Cohasset District, criteria the sewer commission has established for potential connections.

The homeowners are willing to foot the bill for to hookup.

Olde Farm Hills is an old estate on about eight acres whose buildings have been converted into individual homes. The first joint septic system was built in 1991 before Title V, the state environmental code. About 18 months ago, it was discovered the replacement system built in 1995 to Title V standards and approved by the health board had also failed when one of the homeowners tried to sell triggering an inspection.

The health agent also recently found "break out" on the surface.

"This would be our third system, so it's not like we haven't tried," Brennan explained. He said the residents have spent $26,000 in remedial efforts since February of 1998 when the failure was discovered. They event spent $6,000 to have a new system designed but were advised by the engineer that it, too, would likely fail. The neighbors said the soil is clay-like.

The health board put the condominiums on a "tight tank" last month but the expense of being pumped every two days was too high for the homeowners. They unplugged the tank allowing the effluent to flow back into the failed leaching field. They said fines of $50 a day are less costly than emptying the 2,000-gallon tank at cost of $375 each time.

Brennan said the neighbors, who are using as little water as possible, are very upset and will take legal action if necessary.

Health board member Stephen Bobo suggested they also write to the sewer commission. He speculated that sewer commission members might not have known all the facts when they voted last week and might not be aware of the urgency of the situation. Bobo said the commissioners were invited to Tuesday's health board meeting, but they did not attend.

All hoped the sewer commission would call an emergency meeting to discuss the matter before its next scheduled meeting July 26.

The sewer commission could not be reached for comment by presstime.

Cohasset summer school programs get the go-ahead

Town will not subsidize course offerings

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

To parents eager to rescue their children from hours of television reruns and Playstation video games, the news that there will be summer educational programs at Cohasset schools comes as a welcome diversion.

With all of the budgetary dilemmas facing the school system, however, the town will not be able to support the program financially.

"The summer educational activities have to be entirely self-sufficient," said Superintendent of Schools Dr. Edward "Ted" M. Malvey. "We have no budget for it for next year."

In essence, the availability of a particular course will be contingent upon a necessary number of students signing up.

"The courses will be predicated entirely on student enrollment," Malvey said. "We need the enrollment to cover expenses. Without sufficient enrollment we'd have to pull back or eliminate an activity. We do not intend to subsidize the program."

The summer educational programs are now being run under the auspices of the school department rather than the recreation department, as they were last year. Malvey indicated that there were legal reasons for the switch.

"We cannot have staff members selling their services in teaching certain courses," he said. "Legally, they would be private vendors. Under the school department, their salaries for teaching summer courses are governed by the collective bargaining agreement. If we did this, we needed to be sure it was done correctly and legally."

"Without sufficient enrollment we'd have to pull back or eliminate an activity. We do not intend to subsidize the program."
— Supt. Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey

Some of the courses offered at Deer Hill this summer include: Everyday Mathematics, two-week courses designed to reinforce math skills. Suzi Turtle and Laura Keating will teach one class for students entering the fourth and fifth grade, while Elizabeth Cisneros will teach a class for those students entering grades 6 and 7.

Keating and Turtle will also teach a two-week course entitled Writing Workshop. Students entering the fourth or fifth grade will have the opportunity to enhance their writing skills, and it is the aim of the teachers to have the students submit their writing to children's literary magazines by course end.

Lisa Kalapinski will offer a Summer Technology Camp open to students entering grades 5 and 6, where students will learn how to use various multimedia tools including: sound files, special effects, graphics animation, text manipulation, and image capture. The students will use these skills in creating an interactive presentation.

Victoria Sullivan will teach a Summer Remedial Math program, focusing on weaknesses from the MCAS testing. Class sizes will be limited to ensure optimum attention to each child's progress and open to students entering fourth or fifth grade.

Finally, Steven Biagnini will give instrumental music lessons on Tuesdays. These private lessons will allow students a way to keep their skills sharpened during the summer months.

"The course offerings look great," said school committee member Kathy Ofsthun. "We just have to remember that we can not lose money on this."

COFFEE TABLE ANYONE?

It is sometimes said that the coffee table is the only piece of furniture to be invented in this country. In any event, it is nearly as prevalent as its namesake. There is hardly a sofa set into place without a coffee table placed neatly before it. This is not without good reason. The coffee table stands ever ready to accept whatever objects, ranging from glasses to uplifted feet, that sofa loungers decide to place upon it. With this function in mind, the only criteria that defines a coffee table is its height, which should be between 16 and 20 inches high. Other than that, this table can be multi-leveled, nested, or shaped from square to undulating. Thus, people should be encouraged to exercise their imaginations when selecting this ubiquitous piece of furniture.

THE DESIGNING WOMAN can help you find just the right coffee table or other pieces of furniture to complete your rooms. Give us a call at 781-383-6411 to schedule an appointment to discuss your decorating needs.

HINT: In some cases, an ottoman may serve the same function as a coffee table.

COLLEGE HONORS

Jeremiah Stevenson (who was captain of the soccer team with Jim Magner a few years ago) graduated recently from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., with honors majoring in studio arts, and was also inducted into Phi Beta Kappa the day before graduation.

Jeremiah worked hard to earn all of these accolades and we are so proud of him — as are his mom and dad, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Stevenson. You can imagine their delight when, for his senior project, he had his own art show at a local gallery in Hartford!

THAYER MIDDLE SCHOOL

Now let me tell you about Carley Kalus, a recent grad of Thayer Academy Middle School. Carley received honor and achievement awards, the National Award for Spanish and the Marcia E. Reed art prize in painting. She also found time to play the sax in the jazz band, as well as goalie for the ice hockey team (both JV and Varsity).

Carley, we all think you are super, especially your proud mom and dad, Steven and Kelly Kalus!

ON THE MOVE

Here's a little newsflash that should be noted by those involved with Claystrokes in downtown Cohasset — they are moving from their "niche" to a bigger space in Hingham Square (next to CVS) — if you have any artwork there, be sure to pick it up.

BU GRADUATE

Dean Volungis, son of Judy and Dan Volungis, received a bachelor of science degree in computer systems engineering from Boston University Sunday, May 23. With a minor in Asian studies, he learned both Japanese and Mandarin Chinese while at BU. His senior project developed remote interface electronic testing that enables a person to test a project over the Internet when returning to the lab is inconvenient. IBM will employ him. Dean was a 1995 grad of Cohasset High School.

ON STAGE

Thayer Academy Middle School staged the 1950s musical "Pompadours and Poodle Skirts" May 20 and three Cohasset stars shone brightly — Lindsay Feig, Carley Kalus and D.J. Lanzillotti. All the reviews were grand, the audiences were thrilled with the show.

UMASS/DARTMOUTH

News from UMass/Dartmouth is that Kenneth Walsh graduated with a BFA degree in art education and we congratulate you, Kenneth!

HONOR ROLL

Kara Gaughen, daughter of Robert Gaughen and Margaret Corrigan of Cohasset, was named to the Phillips Academy honor roll for the winter term. Great work, Kara!

OFF TO WILLIAMS

Richard and Sabina Noering's daughter, Stefanie, will attend William College in Williamstown, Mass., this fall after graduating from Noble and Greenough School in Dedham.

Congrats!

XAVERIAN GRAD

Kyle R. Bunstein earned his diploma from Xaverian Brothers High School Sunday, May 23. Kyle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Bunstein of 4 Stevens Lane.

Kyle was in an auto accident in Scituate earlier this week. He was listed in good condition Tuesday at Boston Medical Center. Kyle, we send you our love and best wishes to get well soon!

Word is he'll be in the hospital about a week, so we're sure he'd welcome some cards. They can be sent to Kyle's home address.

ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

Kristin Niessink, daughter of Deborah and Jan Niessink, graduated from Saint Michael's College with honors at the 92nd commencement exercises Sunday, May 10. Kristin is a member of Delta Epsilon Sigma, the national Catholic Honor Society that recognizes students for outstanding academic accomplishments, dedication to intellectual activity and responsibility of service to others.

Peppercorn steaks for two!

It seems we always find recipes that are great for a large family, or for a party, or a crowd There are many times when we would like a recipe for just two (after all, they can always be doubled, but not always cut back due to ingredients)

Try this scaled-down menu for just the two of you!

PEPPERCORN STEAKS

1 tablespoon whole black peppercorns, crushed
2 strip or top loin steaks, about 8 ounces each
2 to 3 tablespoons butter, melted
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 cup red wine or beef broth
1 teaspoon ground mustard
1/2 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon water

Rub pepper over both sides of steaks. Refrigerate for 15 minutes. In an ungreased skillet over medium high heat, brown steaks on both sides. Add butter and garlic; cook for 4-6 minutes, turning once, or until meat reaches desired doneness. Remove steaks and keep warm. Combine wine or broth, mustard and sugar; add to the pan. Stir to loosen browned bits. Combine cornstarch and water until smooth; add to pan. Bring to a boil; cook and stir for 2 minutes or until thickened. Serve with the steaks.

Accompany this with side dishes of cheese linguini and green beans, with some cherry tomatoes as a pretty colorful garnish and there you have it! A yummy meal for two!

If you have any recipes you would like to share with us, don't hesitate to give me a call — we would all love to share in your best recipe, and make it a feast of our own!

Summer band concert series

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first concert on the common for the 1998 season will be Tuesday evening, July 6, at 7:30 p.m., Town Common.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

The next concerts are scheduled for Tuesday evening, July 20 and Aug. 3, at 7:30 p.m., on the Cohasset Common.

Concerts are available via the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. of Cohasset and a matching fund grant from the American Federation of Musicians of New York City.

Concerts are fee of charge.

Please bring your own lawn chair or blanket to sit on and from time to time insect repellent can be a good item to have available.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for dog obedience training classes, for beginner and intermediate levels, to be taught by Happy — Dog Training School.

Classes meet for five-week sessions Thursday evenings and cost $80 for the five, one-hour classes. Beginner class meets from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. and intermediate class will be held from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m.

For more details and registration, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-4109. Dogs must be a minimum of three months of age by class starting date.

Good for local politics

State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund's announcement this week that he will seek the mayoral post in Weymouth is causing a stir in local political circles. What it means — if he wins — is that the Plymouth-Norfolk senatorial seat will be wide open.

Sen. Hedlund, a Republican, is in his third consecutive term and fourth term overall. He first won election in 1990, lost to Brian McDonald of Weymouth in 1992, and subsequently defeated Mr. McDonald in 1994 to win the seat back. He was reelected in 1996 and 1998.

While we don't pretend to know the first thing about Weymouth politics, we think Sen. Hedlund's decision — whether he ultimately wins or loses — is good for local politics.

As Cohasset's Polly Logan, who is vice chairman of the state Republican Party, said this week his candidacy in Weymouth, whose population makes up 1/3 of the eight-town senatorial district, will provide a forum for the issues. Sen. Hedlund ran unopposed for reelection last fall. While that might provide a comfort level to some incumbents, it's no doubt frustrating for someone like Sen. Hedlund who is a good campaigner. And sadly, when seats go unopposed, we — the voters — don't pay much attention.

There's no chance of that happening this time around. Those on both side of the party aisle say they're talking to potential candidates. In the weeks ahead, we'll be hearing more about who they are. What lies ahead for Sen. Hedlund is a non-partisan primary for the mayoral post in September. The two top vote-getters then go into a runoff election in November with the winner taking office in January.

If Sen. Hedlund should become Mayor Hedlund, there would be a special election to finish his unexpired term in the senate. Then another election would follow in November when his term would have been up.

In a telephone interview Monday night, Sen. Hedlund said he has mixed feelings about stepping down from the senate. He loves the district and has found a comfort level in the legislature where he is one of only seven Republicans.

But he's anxious for new challenges and feels he can make a difference in a community like Weymouth, which is in transition.

Sen. Hedlund is proud of his blue-collar roots stemming from years of shining shoes at his grandfather's Weymouth restaurant and pumping gas at the Lincoln Street Mobil Station after classes at Hingham High.

He has bemoaned the lawyer-driven Legislature that needs more diversity.

In a 1996 interview following his landslide reelection victory over Robert Delahunt, he recalled debate on a bill mandating how snow blades were to be attached to trucks.

"I thought, 'I'm probably the only person in the building who ever attached a snow plow to a truck,'" and then he took the floor.

Sen. Hedlund may be a little rough around the edges but there's no question he possesses the common touch and common sense that has won over many Republicans, Democrats and unenrolled voters. Watching the election season unfold in neighboring Weymouth and how it will play out for the South Shore will certainly make things interesting for voters.

COHASSET CARES

[A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by the Cohasset Recycling Committee]

Thursday, June 17, was the day set aside for all our fifth-graders to visit the RTF, to see how the operation runs and to learn more about recycling. Due to a miscommunication of some sort, the field trip did not happen. Recycling Committee members who had been ready to man their stations for the children decided to make best use of the time freed up by discussing their favorite subject, and the conversation went something like this:

First we felt bad that the 100-or-so segment of our school system that has been visiting the RTF for 11 years now, was cheated out of the adventure and drama to be experienced at the RTF. It's a great field trip, spicy and informative. Members reflected on what impact this loss might have on Cohasset's future! We discussed how important childhood lessons are in the process of producing ethical adults. Youngsters have excellent common-sense detectors, and they can grasp quickly what each area of the RTF embodies:

Recycling Committee member Jean said she would have stressed that if we only took the time to flatten our tin cans, we could save the town a lot of money now spent on the $100-per-dumpster fee presently charged.

Merle said he would have stressed that paints are collected once a month, only latex and oil-base, and that other more hazardous waste is collected at specifically-announced times.

Carol, who was wearing an attractive vest made from recycled plastic bottles, said she wanted to tell the children that plastic grocery bags and bubble-wrap can be mixed with sawdust to make weather-resistant, non-skid decking material.

David wanted to remind the fifth graders that we should remove the metal rings from the necks of glass bottles so the loads are not contaminated and thus rejected by the haulers.

Allan wanted to show the kids how the compost emits steam when it is "cooking" and show them the long-stemmed thermometer stuck into the compost reading 158 degrees.

Arthur was to have related the history of the RTF from the old Doane Street days to 1940 when the present site was obtained and that in 1988 recycling was mandated.

Time's up! Got to go! But not before handing on to you what several members related about their visits to Europe and other places — NO plastic or paper bags automatically issued in stores there! Can you imagine? Food for thought! See you next time.

LIBRARY CORNER

What's new for summer in the children's room

The summer reading program begins June 28 at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This year's theme is "Funny things happen when you read."

Children entering grade 1 and up are eligible to participate. They can pick up their reading logs in the Children's Room and record the minutes they spend reading during the summer. Each week different prizes will be awarded to everyone who has read at least 15 minutes and brings their log to show the librarian. Prizes include alien key chains, pencils, insect tattoos, funny drinking straws, buttons, stickers and more.

Kids can sign up for the raffle of a special assortment of alien "beanie babies," to be held at the end of the program. There will also be the popular estimating contest with candy in the glass jar. Certificates will be awarded to all children who join the program.

Also, Mrs. Murphy, Deer Hill School librarian, will once again lead the popular "Puzzle Club" Monday nights from 7 to 8:45 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for children entering grades 3-5.

In addition, the library will offer a craft program for children entering grades 3-5. This class will meet Tuesday afternoons for four weeks, beginning July 20. Materials will be supplied and there is no charge for the program.

For the younger set, a story hour with a simple craft will be offered for children ages 3-5 Tuesday mornings for four weeks beginning July 20.

For more information on any of these programs or to register, call the library at 383-1348. Look forward to a summer of reading, puzzles and fun!

Construction impacting Cohasset streets

During the 1999 construction season there are several sewer, drainage, watermain and paving projects taking place across the entire town of Cohasset. These projects will result in an expanded wastewater collection system and wastewater treatment plant, improvements to the drainage system to help abate flooding in Jacobs Meadow and Central Cohasset, improvements to the water distribution system and improvements to roadway pavements.

Unfortunately, with so much construction taking place, delays in vehicular travel will result. Several of the projects will require roadway closings with resulting detours. Every effort will be made to schedule work in an effort to minimize traffic impacts.

The following is a description of the types of construction that will take place on the various streets.

Water Main Projects

- King Street (from 3A to North Main Street)
- Church Street (from Beechwood Street 460+ feet towards Doane Street)
- Schofield Road (from 3A 100+/minus feet)
- Ripley Road (from Sohier Street to Depot Court)

Unfortunately, with so much construction taking place, delays in vehicular travel will result. Several of the projects will require roadway closings with resulting detours.

- Smith Place
- Cushing Road (from Pleasant Street to James Lane)
- Spring Street (from Cushing Road about 350+/minus feet towards South Main Street)
- Norman Todd Road (from Norman Todd Lane to Beechwood Street)

Drainage and Flood Control Projects

- Elm Street (adjacent to the American Legion and the Memorial Park at Cohasset Cove)
- Ripley Road (adjacent to the Post Office)
- Smith Place (from Ripley to abandoned railroad ROW)
- James Lane (adjacent to Strawberry Parfait)

Paving Projects

- Jerusalem Road (from Atlantic Avenue to North Main Street)

The remaining streets involve sewer construction. The area along Jerusalem Road from Linden Drive to Hull Street and Hull Street from Jerusalem Road to Lamberts Lane involve the installation of sewer services and shcuild only have minor impact on traffic. The sewer, drain and water construction in the downtown Cohasset area will have major impacts on traffic with frequent detours being required.

The time table for completing the construction work varies. The water, drainage and paving work has already started and will be completed in the 1999 construction season. The sewer work will not be completed until mid-2000.

If you have any questions relative to the Cohasset 1999 construction impacts, do not hesitate to call Domenic V. Tutela, PE, Tutela Engineering Associates, Inc. at (978) 658-7493.

A gentleman farmer gives up

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I grew up on a farm. It wasn't much of a farm but it had an onion patch and my grandmother and I were in charge of it. All summer long in the hot central Massachusetts sun we planted, weeded and picked, all the things that make me shudder now.

When I was eight years old we moved from the farm to the city and my days as a boy agriculturist came to an end. Except for one thing. I still planted tomatoes. Every year, except when I was away on business, I planted a crop of tomatoes, some of which even grew to maturity.

When the first buds appeared, I thrilled to the thought that the soil over our old cesspool had given life to a succulent tomato. When the buds turned into vegetables, I promised every friend within earshot that they would share in my largesse once the tomatoes reached edible size. It was a mistake.

I was certain I had a green thumb, even though geraniums were known to curl up and die when I approached. "They committed suicide," suggested my friend one day after my mere presence had wiped out her dahlias and was working on the dandelions.

I was known to the American Horticultural Society as the Doctor Kevorkain of the Poppy Fields.

But I digress...

I would buy a half dozen tomato plants, already half grown, at a local garden shop and plant them lovingly in the spot in the backyard that seemed most fertile. My favorite spot was over the old cesspool that was abandoned when we were hooked into the town sewer system.

I would tie them to thin bamboo stakes so they wouldn't have to bow their little heads in shame. Later, I would change to bigger stakes, anticipating the heavier, juicier tomatoes to come. I would water them assiduously, even resorting to Miracle Gro when that became the fancy of gentleman farmers.

I waited and watered and waited some more. I waited and weeded and waited some more. My tomatoes grew, all right, some of them to as much as an inch or two in diameter. Then they stopped. All the Miracle Gro at "That Bloomin' Place." couldn't seen to turn them into full-blown tomatoes.

"It's the soil," I said. "It's not good for tomatoes. Next year I'll plant them in front of the house. You know, the place where the pansies perished last year and the daisies died the year before that."

"People will steal them," said my friend. "They'll walk past the house and see the tomatoes and steal them."

"If they grow big enough to be seen and stolen, I'll be more than satisfied," I told her.

Well, to make a long story short, they didn't and I wasn't and Mother Nature will be happy to learn, I am no longer a gentleman farmer. I have given up growing tomatoes — if it can be said in truth that I have ever "grown" them in the first place.

I quit just in the nick of time. I read the other day that the first tomato of the season costs the 25 million backyard farmers in the United States upwards of $12.50 with the expenses going down accordingly when the second, third, etc., one come in.

I got as many as six.

In good years, that is.

Village revitalization effort is still going strong other forms of local aid.

The Downtown Organization status is just one of the many components of the effort to revitalize Cohasset Village. The task force is coordinating a series of on-going activities, from numerous grant applications to the next phase of the Harbor Walkway Coastal Access Plan.

Dean Rizzo, chairman of the task force, said the future of Cohasset Village is looking positive despite a tight budget.

"We're trying to do as much as we can without the funds to do it," Rizzo said. "Fortunately, we've had some help from private sources like Peter Roy (of Margin Street) to help us keep things moving along."

The latest phase of the Harbor Walkway Coastal Access Plan — the Elm Street Project — is the most ambitious effort the task force is coordinating. The Coastal Access Plan grew out of a $5,000 grant that funded a study of options to connect the village and the harbor. Local architect Jim Shipsky solicited public input and developed a plan using that information. Part of that plan is for the redevelopment of Elm Street.

Rizzo pointed out that many people who visit the village don't realize there is a gorgeous harbor just a half-mile down the road. Likewise, many visitors to the harbor don't know about the village. Rizzo said many residents feel that Elm Street is too wide and large, like a highway. The Elm Street project would allow the town to re-do the sidewalks with red brick, plant Elm trees on the sides to create a tree canopy, and perform other modifications to create the impression that the street is not as wide and large as it seems. Another possible modification for Elm Street would be underground utilities. The task force is looking at a state plan that could pay 90 percent of the cost of the Elm Street project.

"We just filed an application to see if there is any possibility of us getting this funding," Rizzo said.

The task force has other plans for the village-harbor connection plan. Rizzo said the task force has initiated phase II of the harbor walkway study to examine the feasibility of building a boardwalk from Elm Street along the harbor to the Hagerty property. Phase II will identify the cost of the project, recommend construction strategies, identify permitting requirements, and examine funding schemes.

There is more to the village revitalization effort than harbor connections and boardwalks. The task force is working with the Massachusetts Highway Department on a finalized plan for the new sidewalk in front of St. Stephen's church on South Main Street. Rizzo said the task force is developing a final design based on Mass. Highway recommendations and resident input. One recent development regarding the sidewalk occurred recently when the town sold the Independence building, The original sidewalk plan required the town to provide handicapped access from the sidewalk to the building. Now that the town has sold the building, it will not have to provide handicapped access. Rizzo said the task force is hoping to use the money formerly reserved for the Independence building access to extend the sidewalk project farther along Elm Street.

Grants are an important part of the revitalization effort. The task force has applied for two new grants. One is a Municipal Incentive Grant (MIG) for $30,000 to create an economic development plan for the village. The plan would focus on an overall master plan for Cohasset Village and examine infrastructure needs, streetscape improvements, business retention strategies, build-out studies, and mixed uses. The other grant is a second attempt to acquire $55,000 from the state for ways to connect the downtown business areas of Cohasset, Scituate and Hull. The study would look at ways to improve signage among the three towns and provide a transportation link for people.

Private development is also serving to revitalize interest in the village. The new Atlantica recently opened on the site of the former Chart House. The new restaurant could attract many people to the harbor, Rizzo said. In the village, work is proceeding on the historic Red Lion Inn to turn the former rooming house and bar into a first-class resort.

"Between the efforts of the task force on the public side and private efforts to create viable businesses, we're seeing a resurgence of interest in the village," Rizzo said.

The task force is always seeking public input on its efforts. Rizzo said the task force has just completed a draft vision statement (see related story). The members of the task force are seeking public input on the statement. Anyone wishing to comment on the statement or any of the efforts to revitalize the village and harbor can send a letter to the group in care of the selectmen's office.

Village revitalization task force vision statement

In 10 years, we see Cohasset Village as a healthy commercial and community center built on its rich history, authentic New England charm, and outstanding natural beauty.

We see the village as a community experience for Cohasset residents as well as for visitors attracted by its restaurants, specialty shops and old New England character. Retail and service businesses supply the needs of year-round residents, while visitor-oriented enterprises enhance rather than replace the traditional downtown commercial mix. The town and the private sector work together to provide visitor amenities to attract new businesses and retail development.

The physical revitalization of the village includes new sidewalks, trees and landscaping, street lamps powered by underground utility lines and benches, creating a pedestrian-friendly atmosphere. The landscaped areas and infrastructure are constructed of long-lasting, low-maintenance materials and are well maintained by the town and by private groups.

Adequate access to businesses and parking is provided for all vehicles while preserving the pedestrian scale of the village. Parking is located and managed to meet the needs of all participants in the downtown. Merchants and residents also benefit from the reestablishment of public transportation serving the community.

As the focal point for the town, Cohasset Village is an amenity that cannot be duplicated or replaced. Every effort is made to preserve the historic character and architectural integrity of the village. Accordingly, the village master plan provides guidelines for the town and potential developers. New development is encouraged to provide active ground floor uses for pedestrians. Zoning amendments ensure properly scaled stores, offices, residences and public buildings.

The neighboring harborfront is an important asset to the village. New development on the waterfront is carefully planned to maintain and improve access to the harbor for residents and visitors. Well-designed pedestrian connections between the harbor and village further strengthen both areas.

Use of the village by Cohasset residents continues to increase, as it becomes the center for cultural activities and special events. Moreover, the village provides a place for all ages to interact, drawing the residents of Cohasset closer together and thereby creating a stronger community.

Register for 'Alice in Wonderland'

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold Music Circus registrations for "Alice in Wonderland" Thursday, July 1. The Music Circus children's show registrations will be open to children in the playground program and the show date for "Alice in Wonderland" is Thursday, July 15.

Music Circus registrations are held at the recreation office, 1st floor, Town Hall. Registrations will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and again from 1 to 7 p.m. All tickets for the Music Circus are $6.

Registrations are held each Thursday according to the above times, two weeks prior to the actual show date. The next registration, for "The Frog Prince" will be held Thursday, July 8.

Cohasset Carillon 75th anniversary celebration

The 75th Annual Series of Summer Carillon Recitals will be given on the 57-bell Taylor carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, on 10 successive Sunday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., beginning June 27 and continuing through Aug. The public is invited to attend free of charge, and may bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers. Program booklets and carillon brochures will be available in a stand by the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, and will also be handed out on the Common and at other listening places mentioned in the program booklet. In case of rain, the recitals may be heard from parked cars. The church is situated on a cliff overlooking Main Street and the Cohasset Common.

This is a special year for the Cohasset Carillon: it is the 75th anniversary of both the instrument and the longest continuously running carillon recital series in North America. An anniversary souvenir program booklet is being issued to mark the occasion, and free copies will be available at each recital.

The first program will be performed June 27 by Gordon Slater, Dominion Carillonneur of Canada, whose home instrument is the carillon in the Peace Tower at the Houses of Parliament in Ottawa. For more information, call Sally Slade Warner at (978) 475-2599, or Mary Kennedy at (781) 383-9599, or the church office, (781) 383-1083.

praise for his painting, which he went to see on display.

"I thought it wasn't the best," he said, though he did bring in his blue ribbon for show-and-tell. "I liked some of the other kids' things better."

Travers did admit that he was glad that thousands of people saw hi prize-winning artwork, which he produced at his art class.

"I like that a lot of people saw my painting," he said of the large picture of a flaming orange and yellow sun on a deep blue background which now proudly resides of his home.

Lovell said that she was impressed with the quality of the artwork produced by the youngsters and was glad they had a forum to display it.

"How great it was to take their artwork beyond the refrigerator," she said.

Attractions for the adult art lovers in the crowd included the Members show and juried exhibition tent, in addition to printmaking and woodcarving demonstrations.

For those less enthralled by artwork but still wanting to be a part of the festivities, musical groups in concert included fiddlers, folk singers, brass quintets, and big band music.

Lovell said that next year's Festival would again take place on Father's Day weekend, so Cohasset residents can make arrangements for another weekend of family fun this time next year.

Teen center project forging ahead at DPW garage

did intend to finish. Mark [Haddad] said that he would not pursue the sale of the building. He would have pursued it if we voted not to continue."

"I met with Jack Worley this morning," Haddad said on Wednesday. They're [the YRC] going to continue, and we'll continue to support them."

To finally make the teen center a reality, Bates said that what is needed most are skilled laborers willing to donate their time or materials toward finishing the parts of the garage that the volunteers can not do on their own.

"There are three major projects left," she said. "We had concrete donated for the handicapped ramp, but we need someone to do the do the forms and the railing. We also need to finish the plumbing and electrical wiring."

"It's a matter of lining up volunteer tradespeople," Worley said. "I hope that we'll have this thing up and running in a month or so, maybe five weeks. It's hard to come up with a timetable though, because it's all dependent on when we can get tradespeople in."

Once the skilled workers are finished, YRC committee member Jodi Butman said only cosmetic modifications would need to be made.

"At that point, all that would really be left would be painting, decorating, and furnishing," she said. "The kids can do all of that."

A tremendous amount of work has already gone into remodeling the garage, which Bates said was in horrible shape when they started remodeling in September.

"All we really had was a shell, and it wasn't a very good shell at that," she said. "The building had to be rewired and we've put in new windows, lights, and a door."

Though the teen center is still under construction, members of the YRC were unified in their belief that it will fill an important void in Cohasset.

"It gives teenagers a place to go, where they can hang out with a lot of other kids, as opposed to just going to people's houses," Butman said. "And it's at a central location, so kids can easily walk there from downtown."

"It's an important investment," Bates said. "It would be a safe, supervised place to go and a place the kids could call their own. The YRC wants just want to facilitate and let the kids decide the kinds of programs they want to have and the things they want to do."

Jami Butman, a 1999 graduate of Cohasset High School and one of the youth members of the YRC, said that the teen center will perform an important service to the community.

"There's definitely a need for a teen center," Jami said. "There's really no place to go and hang out, especially for the kids who don't play sports. There's nowhere for those kids to go after school. The teen center would be a free place to go and hang out with friends."

One problem which the YRC faces is figuring out how to staff the teen center. A full-time coordinator position is needed, Jodi Butman said.

"Our goal is to have a coordinator be there, as opposed to trying to gather volunteers, which can be very difficult," she said.

"We really do need a director," Jami agreed. "Without one, it's really hard to get fundraisers and other programs going."

The YRC, which has two vacancies for adult members and will have two youth vacancies once a couple of its youth members leave for college, is holding a yard sale at the old Osgood School to raise money in hopes of making the dream of a teen center into a reality.

"The yard sale will take place on July 17, from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m.," Bates said. "For a donation to the YRC, people can 'buy' old desks, chairs, and blackboards. It would be really good for people who are into crafts and could make something nice out of one of those old desks."

Bates said that the YRC is appreciative of the donations the teen center project has already received.

"We've had some great financial support," she said. "A lot of that support has come from private donations and we're very thankful for those donations."

Haddad mentioned that the Rotary Club of Cohasset made a generous donation to the teen center at the YRC meeting on Tuesday night.

"The Rotary gave the YRC a nice chunk of change, which believe was about $6,000," he said.

For others wishing to donate toward the project, donations for the teen center can also be made to the YRC, in care of the Recreation department, town hall.

Street light complaints are considered

Number of lights turned off will not change

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

A number of Cohasset residents have expressed displeasure about certain street lights being turned off as the result of a cost-cutting measure intended to reduce the town's $54,000 annual street light bill.

Fifty-two street lights across town will be turned off July 1 as the result of the cut, part of Town Manager Mark Haddad's program to balance next year's budget in light of the $380,000 override voters agreed to last month.

Karen Mack, a resident of Cedar Acres Lane, appeared before selectmen on Monday night to protest the decision made by Haddad, in conjunction with the police chief, safety officer, and head of the Department of Public Works, to shut off both street lights on her cul-de-sac.

"We live on a heavily wooded, dark private way," she said. There are 14 kids between the ages of four and nine in the neighborhood. It's a safety issue, especially in the fall and winter when it's dark earlier and the kids are rollerblading or riding their bikes on the road."

The board accepted Mack's petition, signed by 17 Cohasset residents, but chairman Merle Brown said her request would not necessarily be granted.

"If we turn on both of the lights on your street, we'd have to find two others to shut off," he said. "The number of lights turned off is not going to change."

"If we turn on both of the lights on your street, we'd have to find two others to shut off. The number of lights turned off is not going to change."

— Town Manager Mark Haddad

Mack's request to reconsider the decision to turn off certain lights was not the only made at the board meeting, as Selectman Roseanne McMorris advocated turning back on at least one of the three lights turned out on Brewster Road, a through street off of 3A that leads to the Ledgewood housing development.

"Brewster Road is a main road leading to that development, and it comes off of 3A" she said. "Some cul-de-sacs haven't had any lights turned off."

Haddad replied that there were difficult choices involved in choosing which lights to turn off, but he would consider requests to turn back on individual requests if the Selectmen wished for him to do so.

"This wasn't an easy decision, but I'm not going to fight light for light. This [reconsidering individual requests] opens up a huge can of worms," Haddad told the Selectmen. "I'll do whatever you want me to do. It's up to you."

Selectman Diane Sullivan said that she preferred to leave the decision to Haddad.

"Mark is the town manager and the project should remain with Mark. That's why we pay him the big bucks."

Brown also cautioned that while some find the decision unpalatable, it was a necessary one.

"We have to cut things out," he said. "Hanover, which is a much larger town only has a street light budget of $34,000, while ours is $54,000. The problem is, once there are street lights on, no one wants them turned off."

In a telephone interview on Tuesday, Haddad said that he would listen to individual requests, but those requests would be handled on a case-by-case basis.

"I had a resident call me who lives on Rust Way, where we turned out street lights 4 and 6," he said. "They wanted #7 turned out instead of #6. Something like that is much easier to do than Cedar Acres Lane, where they want both lights turned back on."

Haddad also mentioned that residents have an option if they are unsatisfied with his decision about which street lights are turned off.

"One hundred-twenty of the 640 street lights in the town are paid for by private residents already," he said. "It only costs $6 or $7 a month."

Streetlights to be turned off

Due to budgetary constraints, the Cohasset Board of Selectmen has voted to reduce the number of street lights paid for by the town. Specifically, effective July 1, the Board has voted to turn off fifty lights. Lights to be turned off are listed below by pole number and street number. The criteria used to turn off a specific light was lights in areas that would least effect pedestrian and motor vehicular traffic. The board also attempted not to turn off lights on main streets unless there was another light in the vicinity, or lights at intersections. Residents interested in maintaining a specific light by paying for it themselves are asked to contact Lynne Larson at Eastern Utilities.

Larson can be reached at 508-559-2000 extension 3194.

Any resident with a specific question concerning this matter is asked to contact Mark Haddad, Town manager, at 383-4105.

School lunch prices to increase next year

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Parents of Cohasset's school-age children will have to remember to give them an extra quarter for their lunch money next year as they rush off to school.

The school board unanimously improved the 25-cent increase for the price of a school lunch in order to offset this year's projected $8,700 food service deficit.

The price of an 'A' lunch, which refers to a full meal, as opposed to the a la carte selections at the middle high school, will increase from $1.50 to $1.75 at the Osgood School and from $1.75 to $2.00 at Deer Hill and Cohasset Middle High School. Prices on certain a la carte items at the middle high school will also be increased by 10 percent.

Stephen Berzansky, regional manager for Chartwells, the company which has handled the food service contract for the Cohasset public schools for the last ten years, indicated that the price increase would once again make the food service program financially viable.

"We project that the increase would put the program in the black by $2,400 for the 1999-2000 school year," he said. "Our last price increase was three years ago, and in this day and age, we're not seeing as much resistance to a price increase as we would have in the past. You can't even eat at McDonalds anymore for $1.50."

Berzansky said one of the reasons behind the current deficit had to do with the low percentage of students who purchase the 'A' lunch at the middle high school.

"The town gets reimbursed 25 cents for every complete, or 'A' meal sold," he said. "Only 7 percent of the students at the middle high school buy the 'A' lunch, and those percentages are way off compared to 28 percent at Deer Hill and 48 percent at Osgood."

Part of that disparity can be explained by the fact that 60 percent of students at the middle high school purchase a la carte items on a daily basis, rather than purchasing an "A" lunch. Berzansky indicated that the school's open campus policy for seniors also had an effect, though CMHS principal Curtis Collins disagreed.

"Next year, we will only have 60 seniors," Collins said. "Open campus is not much of a factor."

Berzansky added that Chartwells is aggressively exploring methods in addition to the price hike that will increase student participation in the school lunch program.

"We've added double portions, pizza parties, ice cream social, smoothies, items that we hope the students will enjoy. We're also doing raffles, giveaways, and promotions from purveyors like Papa Gino's," he said.

Collins also had ideas on how to increase revenues in the food service program. "One way [to increase revenues] would be to keep the school store open after school. It used to be a big business," he said.

"We could open up after school for 30-45 minutes and start one cafeteria employee and hour later to work the extra time. There are a lot of athletes waiting for practice to start and kids waiting for buses and rides home. We'd be providing a service for our kids and there's definitely a market there."

Osgood third grade teacher Maureen Alcott also had opinions on how to increase food service revenues at her school.

"We could let kids get more than one meal," she said. "A lot of kids would get two meals, particularly for the really popular items like pizza and chicken nuggets. I have a lot of hungry third grade boys."

"Why only have double portions pizza at the elementary school?" echoed school board member Pat Martin. "There could be double portions of hot dogs and cheeseburgers as well."

Osgood principal Marilee Cantelmo praised the people at Chartwells for catering to the needs of elementary school children.

"There was no cafeteria at the old Osgood school," she said, "and what a difference a year makes. The presentation is very child-centered. Chris (Geyer, manager for Chartwells in Cohasset) and her staff are doing a great job."

Collins also had kind words for Chartwells' work at the middle high school.

"I spend a lot of time in the cafeteria and am a supervisor in the smoothie line," he said. "I'm an expert on raspberry and mango and I commend these people on their smoothies. I also eat a school lunch every day."

In addition to talking about price increases and other ways to increase revenue, the possibility of Chartwells hiring the school's cafeteria workers was discussed. The cafeteria workers in the Cohasset public schools are town employees and are paid based on the town pay scale.

"In most cases, Chartwell employees are paid less than town employees for food service," Berzansky said. "Labor costs and benefits for the employees would be paid to Chartwell under the contract with the town."

The town may save money by a transfer of town cafeteria employees because the town pays benefits at 20 hours per week, while Chartwells requires a 30-hour work week to receive full benefits. As it now stands, Cohasset has two full-time employees who work in school cafeterias and seven part-time cafeteria employees, who are eligible for benefits as well.

School board member Kathy Ofsthun expressed concern about the benefits of the town's cafeteria workers should they be hired by Chartwells. "Would we be taking away employee benefits?" she said. "This might be their only insurance coverage."

Berzansky reassured board members that a 90-day bridge period and severance benefits would come into effect should the cafeteria employees be transferred to Chartwells.

School board chairman Mark DeGiacomo asked Berzansky to prepare financial projections involving a transfer of cafeteria employees.

"We want to know if there is a savings there," he said.

Legion squad looks to step up

By Lou Molinari
CORRESPONDENT

How about a little quiz? Do you know what Legion baseball coach is the father of nine-month old triplets?

Do you know the name of the player on the Cohasset-Scituate Legion team who is truly the franchise player?

The answer to the franchise player is Alex Schwerin of Cohasset, the third baseman who has been with the team for four years or since coach Scott Arnold brought the team back to playing Legion ball.

Prior to Arnold taking over, the George H. Mealy Post 118 had no team.

Going into the weekend, Arnold's team was 2-3, with both wins coming against Quincy Legion.

This week, the Cohasset-Scituate team was scheduled to be tested by the other Quincy team, Morrisette Post, one of the strongest Legion teams around.

Wait a minute, the phone is ringing off the hook with people wanting to know the name of the coach who is the father of nine-month old triplets.

The coach is Scott Arnold. The three boys are Scott, Sean and Christian.

Now there's a man with a real work load. He handles his regular job, coaches Legion ball and helps out with the three infants.

And, how does he feel about that plateful? "I love it," says the coach. "The kids are such fun."

Skippers tackle summer workouts

By Joe Reardon
CORRESPONDENT

It's rarely fun, but completely necessary.

For a football program to be successful, off-season conditioning is a necessity, at every level.

Colleges have spring workouts and the New England Patriots hold their mini-camps well before they head down to Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I. for the preseason work. That's not all. Take a look at the local youth league fields the last couple of weeks in August. The youngest kids are out in full force, learning plays, stretching and preparing for their season as well.

The degree of success any high school football team has during the regular season goes directly back to those stifling days of summer.

The Cohasset High football team had its best season since returning to the South Shore League and finished with a solid 5-5 record. The highlight of the season was the Thanksgiving Day victory over the rival Hull High team. That taste of success has the team looking forward to an even better season come fall.

The Skipper players know the workouts heading into double sessions during the last two weeks of August are critical.

"If everyone starts during double sessions it's tough," said Dan Mulligan, a backup cornerback on the '98 team.

Mulligan is taking his summer conditioning very seriously. The 5'10", 155-pounder has been working out in the high school weight room since the end of the spring sports season and intends to keep it up through the summer months. Mulligan is eyeing the starting cornerback slot and would also like to see some playing time at wide receiver.

The Skipper squad, under second-year coach Tony Rolfe, will also participate in a football camp in East Bridgewater. There, they'll be working on conditioning, drills and weight work. The camp is just another means of making the team that much better in what is already shap-

Moving forward, looking back

By Jim O'Sullivan
CORRESPONDENT

Warming up for a baseball game is a rather mundane exercise. In football, you get to run through lines of teammates, colliding shoulder pad-to-shoulder pad with each one of them, or you get to perform nifty little football drills like "karaoke." In basketball, coaches design intricate lay-up drills and the team looks synchronized and the music is blasting and everybody's excited.

This year, the Cohasset High wrestling team had a tightly choreographed warm-up routine which helped them stretch for their matches. Often, the warm-up for a baseball game includes a few short sprints, some stretching, and much time spent simultaneously spitting sunflower seeds, tossing the ball to a teammate, and debating the merits of various "Sportscenter" anchors.

So nothing should have seemed strange the other night while I was playing catch with Al Schwerin, a teammate of mine, before our American Legion team's second game of the season. As seniors at Cohasset High, Al and I had missed the first game due to a school function, but were at Libby Field in Weymouth to play the Weymouth Legion team last Thursday night.

During our game of catch, it occurred to me that something was out of the ordinary; something was missing. An element of the game, of my entire high school sports experience, was absent.

Since the spring of eighth grade, when we played JV baseball together, Ben Ketchum has played on every team of which I've been a part. That list includes, during our freshman year: JV football, freshman basketball, JV/varsity baseball (we both split time between the JV and the parent club.)

When we were sophomores, we played JV basketball and varsity baseball together. Then, as juniors, we played football and baseball, and spent our winter together preparing for baseball. Last summer, we played Legion ball together; during the fall, we played in a fall baseball league together. This year, "Yoda" and I spent our fall and winter seasons getting ready together for our senior season of baseball.

That's ten seasons of organized sports together, in addition to countless hours spent lifting, running, and hitting in preparation for baseball. No one else has been such a large part of my high school sports experience.

(As an interesting little aside, Yoda and Al face off against Jamie DeMichele and I in an annual Wiffle Ball Championship. Although it should not detract from the appreciative tone of this piece, the score in that series is 3-0 in favor of the latter squad. Yoda is a fine Wiffle Ball player; he just can't seem to win the big one. A shame, really.)

Yoda and I have ridden hundreds, maybe even thousands of miles together on buses. We've been to Nauset, Norwell, Norton, Nantucket. We've played against an Eddie Gaedel-esque second baseman and a draftee of the Cincinnati Reds. We've shared locker rooms, ferries, dugouts, benches, fields, wins, losses. I was on the field in Hull on the day he threw a no-hitter. Come to think of it, Yoda, that no-hitter would've been broken up if I hadn't flashed some leather around second base.

We played under the lights on Friday nights on Quincy's Adams Field ing up to be a strong South Shore League.

Mulligan admits the Cohasset squad will have a different look to it, but is returning some key players from last season. Starting quarterback Dan Trowers has a year of experience behind him and should be even better at leading the offense this fall.

It's going to be different without the seniors there," Mulligan said.

Mulligan has already seen the difference in his own conditioning as compared to last year. He started earlier and is in the high school weight room with the rest of the team on Mondays and Wednesdays.

He knew the expectations of the players were going to be higher this year. Rolfe was feeling his way through at this time a year ago. Now, he knows what he has for players, their strengths and weaknesses.

As for Mulligan, "In lifting terms" he's already well ahead of a year ago. And with the program he's following to the letter, by the time double sessions start he'll be itching for the season to start.

Along with the rest of the Cohasset team.

However, we digress. The triplets have about 15 years to go before they can be playing ball for the old man, so it's back to the current team.

Besides Schwerin, senior players on the team from Cohasset include Jim O'Sullivan, catcher, outfielder and pitcher; Greg Taylor, shortstop.

Senior players from Scituate include Tad Beagley, catcher; Craig Moynahan, outfielder, who attends Boston College High; Ben Smooth, catcher; Bill Fitzgerald, pitcher and Milton Academy's Ben McGuiness, outfield.

Arnold has three 15-year-olds on the team, Jesse Cole of Scituate; Nick Bolster of Cohasset, a pitcher, and Greg Smith of Cohasset and B.C. High, a pitcher.

Returning players include Dan Mulligan of Cohasset; Scituate's Jordan Lonborg of BCH, a pitcher; Chris Ferris, of BCH, second base and Mike Conroy of Scituate, a pitcher, who will be attending BCH in the fall.

Among the newcomers to the team are Tom Fitzgerald of BCH, brother of Billy; and Joe Pergola of Cohasset, a pitcher.

Another newcomer is Josh Creighton, a third baseman and designated hitter. He was also an all-star at Scituate High.

And then of course, in the non-playing category is assistant coach Ralph Berry, who Arnold classifies as "one of the most knowledgeable baseball people around, who has been around the game for a long time."

How does coach Arnold feel about the program he brought back to life four years ago? "Once I got it going, I just loved it more and more. Actually, I think I created a monster. I just can't get out of it. I enjoy the game, and I enjoy working with the kids in the program."

What about the three little Arnolds at home? "I enjoy playing and loving them most of all," said the coach.

Is he anxious to get them out in the yard and toss the ball around with them? "Yeah, I am," said the coach, "But for now, I want to enjoy them as babies."

As for the team itself, coach Arnold is looking for the pitching to come around. One of the losses suffered by the Cohasset-Scituate team last week was a 11-7 pounding by Randolph.

"We're getting better," said the coach. "The pitching will be there. I have seen this team improve every year, and this year is no exception."

and at nine o'clock on Sunday mornings in Brockton. We played in Provincetown at the time when the entire area was on the watch for a serial killer who had supposedly come to that end of the Cape. Coming back from the South Shore Baseball Club in Hingham one night, we picked up a hitchhiker who also happened to be a stuntman; for the rest of the ride, he regaled us with exaggerated stories of dangerous stunts.

We each botched inbounding plays during JV basketball, costing our teams the respective games. In Hanover, Yoda inadvertantly dropped the ball over the sideline, then reached and picked it up while still standing out of bounds. In the closing seconds of a home game against Harwich, I threw the ball off the bottom of the backboard. We've had finer moments.

But then there was the time last year that, between us, we threw three straight complete game victories for the Legion squad. I hit second this year; he hit clean-up. I can't count how many times he moved me around or drove me home. In ninth grade, we were both role players on the state tournament team. Last year, the two of us gobbled up over 100 innings on the mound for the high school team.

We've been coached by each other's fathers; Mr. Ketchum had the luckless job of taking me out during my pitching stint in the Little League All-Star game. I couldn't find the strike zone, and when I did, the ball was tattooed. Mr. Ketchum assured me that I was a better pitcher than that (he was right, I hope,) then called to the bullpen.

Ten seasons, in addition to rec basketball, Pony League teams, various and sundry other squads. Truth be told, we've probably lost a lot more games together than we've won. But we played them together, and that's why it twinged a little bit when Yoda showed up to the game in street clothes and shades.

It's been a while since I've been on a team without Yoda. But, it was a good ride while it lasted. You're a good ballplayer, Yoda, and you've been a great teammate. Thanks.

RECREATION NEWS

REGISTRATION FOR LACROSSE CLINIC '99

The Cohasset Recreation Department is now taking registrations for a full-contact boy's rules lacrosse clinic the week of July 19 through July 23. The clinic will be for grades 4 to 6 from 7:30 until 9 a.m. and grades 7 to 8 from 9 until 10:30 a.m. at Miliken Field. The fee per participant is $58 and checks can be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. The fee includes the tournament entry fee for Carver, Mass. Tournament on Saturday, July 24 and a Cohasset lacrosse T-shirt.

Mr. Chuck Jaffee will direct this unique lacrosse opportunity. Details regarding the lacrosse tournament in Carver on Saturday, July 24, will be forth coming. We will carpool to this tournament and signed forms permit participants to engage in both the week-long clinic and tournament/travel.

Registration forms can be obtained at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

BASEBALL CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 through 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Camp has been contracted again this year to provide the baseball camp, which will be held for one week, beginning Monday, June 28 through Friday, July 22, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over, and half-day, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5 and 6 year olds (age 7 optional for either half or full-day camp).

The week long camp costs $140 per child for the full day, and $75 per child for the half-day program.

Participants should bring lunch, snacks, and any drinks other than water they might want. Please bring your own glove, which should be marked with your name.

ADULT EVENING TENNIS LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis classes for all levels of instruction by calling 383-4109.

Classes will be scheduled as follows: beginners, 6 to 7 p.m., Tuesday; intermediates, 7 to 8 p.m., Tuesday; advanced, 6 to 7 p.m., Thursday; beginners, 7 to 8 p.m., Thursday.

Other classes will be scheduled as demand indicates.

All sessions are four weeks in duration and will cost $40 per person, per session. Teaching, will be Amanda Gontarz of Cohasset Recreation Department's tennis staff. Participants who do not own or have access to a racquet, should indicate this at the time of registration. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis. Another evening will be made available should demand indicate.

SUMMER BASKETBALL CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the South Shore Basketball School will sponsor a summer basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two camp sessions will be available this July. Boys and girls, ages 8 through 11, will have camp from Tuesday, July 6 through July 9, at Cohasset High School's Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the four- day camp is $120. The full-week camp, for boys and girls ages 12 through 15, will be held Monday, July 12 through Friday, July 16 at the Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the five day camp is $150.

Brochures and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Town Hall, Recreation Department office.

VIP SOCCER CAMP REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4 and 5 year olds and meets from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 19 to July 23. The cost is $50 per week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 19 to July 23 for 6 and 7 year olds. The cost is $80 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the Front Field of Cohasset High School. For brochures and registration forms, please come to the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

Cohasset summer baseball camp

The South Shore Baseball Club's ninth annual Cohasset baseball camp for players 5 to 12 years of age will be held June 28-July 2 at Milliken Field.

"We look forward to the Cohasset camp every summer," SSBC president/director Frank Niles said. "Cohasset has been a baseball hot bed for a long time."

The week-long camp will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and a special half-day session, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., will be available for players 5 to 8. Each camper will be placed on a team and play in a minimum of one game per day.

Veteran instructors Niles, Rick DelVecchio, Steve Almonte and Chris Duffy head SSBC's professional coaching staff. Campers will attend their lectures and receive instruction in all phases of baseball. The SSBC staff will also include some of the area's finest high school and college coaches, as well as former professional and current semi-pro players.

Call (800) GO4-HITS for more information or a complimentary brochure. Visit SSBC's Web site at www.ssbc.com.

OBITUARIES

Gaylord Hilliard Chambers Weston

Gaylord Hilliard Chambers Weston, 65, a resident of Cohasset for many years died Thursday, June 10 at her home in Stuart, Fla. following a three and one-half year battle with cancer. Her family was at her bedside.

Born and raised in Louisville, Ky. she graduated cum laude from Vassar College. She later moved to Cohasset, where she lived with her four daughters and her former husband, Durno Chambers now of Woodstock, Vt. She was an avid photographer and traveled extensively in South America visually recording its natural beauty and cultural history.

In addition to her husband, William, she leaves four daughters, Wendy White of Toronto, Canada; Hope Stragnell of Atascadero, Calif.; Eleanor Coughlin of Cohasset; and Gaylord Chambers of Leicester, N.C.; and six grandchildren, Laura, Leigh, Amanda, Kelsey, Prescot and Gregory.

A memorial service was held in Stuart on June 12. Interment was at Abmic Lake near Magnetawan, Canada.

Community Garden Club receives awards

Each year, the Visiting Gardens Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visits several gardens in a selected area and award a number of prestigious medals and certificates. This year the Community Garden Club of Cohasset is among the proud recipients of an award for the beautiful gardens at the Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island.

Six years ago the barren hillside in front of the building was transformed into a garden, with the planting of hundreds of bulbs, flowering plants, grasses, rose bushes and shrubs that were donated and planted by the Community Garden Club.

Today the garden is alive and well, with pearl and pink roses, Russian sage, blue flowering catnip, Siberian iris, coreopsis, black-eye susans, day lilies, a variety of ground covers and ornamental grasses for everyone to enjoy.

Accepting the award certificate from Dr. John C. Peterson, president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, for the Community Garden Club of Cohasset are, L-R, co-chairwomen Barbara Dillon and Phyllis Peck and president Pamela Pelletier.

The Community Garden Club was also awarded the certificate of merit for the 1999 Boston Flower Show.

Taverna '99 is coming

For almost 20 years the Greek Taverna of Cohasset has become synonymous with the Fourth of July weekend on the South Shore. This year the Taverna '99 Committee has decided to move the largest Greek festival in Southeastern Massachusetts ahead one weekend.

This year's annual festival will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 24, 25 and 26, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day. Admission is free! Rain or shine!

By moving the Taverna '99 away from the busy July 4 weekend, it is expected to draw record crowds this year. But the committee has been able to add more than 25 percent more space to accommodate the additional fairgoers, and there will be many new features and surprises promising to make Taverna '99 the largest and most exciting ever.

Taverna, a word which means a cafe where you go to sit and philosophize while you listen to foot tapping Greek music. Taverna, the place where you can go to enjoy the very best in Greek cuisine. Taverna, the place where you can experience all the sights and sounds of the Mediterranean Greek Islands. And we have it all right here on the South Shore, courtesy of the Greek Orthodox Community of Cohasset.

Friday, June 25, is Taverna's Senior Citizen Day. From noon to 3 p.m., seniors will receive a 15 percent discount on their meals and the soft drink is free. Come and join for a "Taste of Greece." Join them for Taverna!

Sailing Club party

The Cohasset Sailing Club will be hold its annual opening party Saturday, July 10, from 8 p.m. to midnight — rain or shine. Members and guests are welcome. Dance music provided by the local band, "Bottom of the Fifth." Tickets are $5. You may bring your own refreshments. A shared appetizer or dessert is welcome.

Osgood school focuses on the future

Ambitious goals set for 1999-2000

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

The adjustments that come with moving into a new school building have been made, and the faculty, staff, and parents of the Osgood school are diverting their attention from their new facility toward goals for the upcoming school year.

The school board unanimously approved the proposal of the Osgood Improvement Council, which principal Marilee Cantelmo outlined at the board's meeting last Thursday night.

"We have set three primary goals: academic excellence, character education, and strengthening communication about what is going on in our school," Cantelmo said.

"We intend to achieve academic excellence at both the student and staff level. We also want to have ceremonies to recognize outstanding students. We hope that when students see their peers recognized for doing well in school, it will motivate them to be good."

Cantelmo said that it would be beneficial to the school system at large for Osgood to institute a character education program.

"Deer Hill has been developing a character education program and we can help that process by promoting character education at an early age," she said. "One way we've thought of is to expand cleanup day from Sandy Beach to other parts of town, to give the kids the sense that they're part of a larger community."

School board member Betsy Connolly pointed out that the town's senior citizens could be a valuable resource in helping the elementary students to develop positive values.

"I've talked to a number of senior citizens who have said they'd love to visit the Osgood school and talk to the kids," Connolly said.

"It might also be a good idea to pair up seniors and students on a one-on-one basis, where they could have some really meaningful interactions," school board member Stephanie Noble said.

Noble added that bringing in some of Cohasset's most respected citizens to talk to the children would be a good idea as part of a character education program.

"Every year the Mariner picks a Person of the Year, someone whose done a lot of work in the community," Noble said. "Perhaps we could bring some of those people in."

Cantelmo said her last major goal for the 1999-2000 school year was to let the community know of the goings on inside the school's attractive new facility.

"We want to get the good news out," she said. "We have a committee of four parents who are working on a weekly newsletter, which would expand on the news notes that we send home now."

School board members wholeheartedly agreed that letting the town know about the positive events at Osgood and the town's other schools was of paramount importance.

"So many good things are happening with our schools, and we need to let everyone know about them," said chairman Mark DeGiacomo.

School board member Kathy Ofsthun agreed, saying, "People should know how great our kids are."

Getaway for two to Bermuda raffle is June 26

The Cohasset Little League is selling raffle tickets for its annual fundraiser.

This year, the grand prize will be a getaway for two to Bermuda! Four Days, three nights at the lovely Grotto Bay Beach Resort. The prize includes roundtrip airfare on Delta Airlines, hotel taxes and transfers. The raffle tickets are available for a donation of $10 each or, if you'd prefer to increase your chances of winning, 6 for $50.

The drawing will take place June 26 at the Little League dance. Tickets are sold by the various Little League players, their coaches and their families.

If you would like additional tickets, call Mimi Maich at 383-6553 or Michele Sacks at 383-0417.

Where: South Shore Community Center, Saturday, June 26, 8 p.m. to midnight, $25 per person.

The little League needs your support to maintain the field, refurbish equipment and make the program affordable to the boys and girls of Cohasset.

To purchase tickets, call Michele Sacks at 383-0417, Mimi Maich at 383-6553 or stop by Capt. Hugh's Snack Shack.

"I'm on my way to making Cape Cod and the Islands the first SafeScience Community, and I'm getting a lot of support."

Explore the South Shore with children

By KATHLEEN ZIGMONT
CORRESPONDENT

Don't go crazy with the kids this summer. Just get in the car and go.

The South Shore has a multitude of parks, beaches, museums and just plain old nice places to go with the kids when the dog days of summer hit and September seems ages away.

Exploring islands

Feel like a little island-hopping? The National Park Service oversees 30 islands in Boston Harbor, six of which are open and accessible to the public by ferry and water taxi.

Parents and kids can picnic, explore long-abandoned buildings and forts, fish, hike and take a dip.

During the summer, adventure tours for children, guided hikes and Civil War encampments are planned. Views of the Boston skyline and of tankers, tugs and ships coming in and out of Boston Harbor are an additional treat.

George's Island is where the ferry docks and all water taxi rides start from there. With a snack bar and some handicapped-accessible areas, George's Island is probably the most user friendly for families with very young children. Kids on George's Island love to clamber around the ramparts and roam the corridors of the partially restored Fort Warren on the island.

Admission to the islands and water taxi trips are free. Ferry rides are $8 for adults and $6 for children under 12 years old and leave from Long Wharf in Boston and Hewitt's Cove off of Route 3A in Hingham. For more information call 671-223-8666. For information on ferry rides and schedules call Boston Harbor Cruises at 617-227-4321.

Take the ferry from Long Wharf in Boston to explore Fort Warren on George's Island.

Horseneck Beach

Life's a beach. Or it can be for a day at Horseneck Beach State Reservation, Route 88, Westport Point.

Spread across nearly 600 acres of barrier beach and salt marsh, Horseneck Beach is one of the most popular facilities in the Massachusetts State Forests and Parks system.

Located at the western end of Buzzards Bay, the sandy, southwest-facing, two-mile-long beach is breezy all year round, providing excellent wind surfing (or wind surfing watching) and a dependable respite from sweltering inland temperatures every summer. Nearby towns of Westport, provide picturesque places to eat and stroll.

For more information, call 508-636-8816.

Oldest operating barn theater

For a little culture, try a little theater.

The Priscilla Beach Theatre, the country's oldest operating barn theater, is located in Plymouth. This year, the Priscilla Beach Theatre celebrated its 62nd year of professional summer shows. The theatre offers opportunities for children to act as well as watch performances.

Offerings this summer are Charlotte's Web, Mary Poppins, The lion King II, Madeline, Pocahontas II and The musical Oliver. Most performances are on Friday and Saturday mornings at 10:30 a.m. and cost $5 for children and $10 for adults. For more information on performances or acting camps, call 508-224-4888.

Plymouth

Also in Plymouth is the Mayflower II, a replica of the ship that took the pilgrims to Plymouth Rock. The Plymouth Rock area is a nice place to take the kids and spend the day. Admission onto the Mayflower II is $6.50 for adults, $4 for children six to 12 and free for children under six. The ship is open seven days a week from 9 a.m. To 5 p.m. Parking is on street meters or in a lot on nearby Water Street.

Downtown Plymouth also has plenty of restaurants and shops all within walking distance and the Town Brook runs adjacent to Plymouth Rock and is a nice place to picnic and walk.

Plan to spend a whole day at Plimoth Plantation. Children of all ages will enjoy imagining the lifestyles of early English settlers and of the Wampanoags. Costumed interpreters care for homes, gardens and animals, pausing often to chat with visitors. There is a cafe and six shops. Open daily through November. Take exit 4 off Route 3 just south of Plymouth center. For information on Plimoth Plantation or Mayflower II, call 508-746-1622.

Scenic Hull is the setting for the Lifesaving Museum.

Paragon Carousel & Lifesaving Museum

If you haven't taken the kids to Nantasket Beach yet, why not this summer? The Paragon Carousel, at 205 Nantasket Avenue in Hull, is a 1928 antique carousel with 66 wooden horses and a Wurlitzer organ. Kids love it, and the nearby sandwich, fish and chip and ice cream shops. Stroll along Nantasket Beach after the carousel rides and walk through the nearby Hull Lifesaving Museum at 117 Nantasket Avenue. For adventure-loving youngsters, a mock ship, dress-up costumes, watch tower and other hands-on exhibits teach children about Boston Harbor's history of lifesaving and shipwrecks. Admission to the Hull Lifesaving Museum is $2 for adults and free for children and the museum is open Wednesday through Sunday starting Memorial Day. For more information, call 781-925-LIFE.

Ornaments from discarded items

Elderly crayons shape up on rocks

By Alice Elwell
CORRESPONDENT

Millions of elderly crayons are concealed in boxes and bags, left in closets and the back of drawers. Round tins and shoe boxes are brimming. Old crayons are sad. Their colors are murky from rubbing against other old souls. We hate to throw them out, we know what beautiful pictures are waiting to be colored, but they sit, unused and unwanted.

New crayons are so nice, with fresh wrappers and pointed tips just waiting to draw. New crayons wait lined up in new boxes, magnificent and bright, their colors organized by shade. Energy flows from new crayons. Old crayons are tired.

Growing up we found a forbidden pleasure in the old crayons. During the cold winter days we'd press a crayon against the big iron radiators. Oh, what joy to see the colors drip down. The waxy smell betrayed us as mother came swooping in and confiscated our hoard.

Replicating this fun, the daughters and I heated rocks on the wood stove one winter. Using pot holders we placed the hot rocks on a wad of newspaper. Taking a container of old bits of crayons we decorated wonderful stone shapes with exquisite colors. Silver was saved for last, a finishing touch. Some colors blended with others to create a new unique shade. Others took over, like midnight blue, and purple. If the rocks were too hot we saw volcanoes of color streaming down the sides. We made rainbows and sunsets.

Once cooled, we polished our glittering rocks and had gifts for the entire family. They became baubles, paper holders, and garden ornaments. We put them in with potted house plants and on window sills. A drab winter garden is colored with rocks.

Now we color rocks all year. We heat rocks on camp fires, grills, and in the oven. It's fun, and our retired crayons feel useful once again. Company overlooks this project and suddenly, no longer able to resist, they pick out a color, maybe teal or vermilion, and start to blend.

Caution: The rocks are hot. The crayons will stain, so be careful. Only an adult should handle the hot rocks. Let them cool before polishing. But, take this opportunity to give new life to the seniors of the crayon world.

Learning simple pleasures from children

Rocks in my pocket

Children look for rocks in Marshfield's Bluefish Cove.

By Alice Elwell

One of the most beloved treasures a child can give is a rock. As adults we might casually toss it back to the rubble pile, unaware of the time involved in selecting that rock. Next time, slow down and see the amazement in an everyday rock. To a child's delight you can point out the qualities that make this particular rock special. Is it a "wish" rock, or can you use it for skimming?

Skimming lessons are memories that last for years and will be passed on to many a child. While skimming rocks, you'll step away from daily life and become part of the pond or ocean where your skimmers are gliding over and under. Worries fall to the wayside during the all important task of making the rock skip. What a gift to give a child! A lifetime calling whenever the child walks along the shore. What satisfaction in searching for the perfect skimmer, then watching it leap over the water. A pleasure that will last a lifetime and so easy to give.

A joy of childhood lies in the ability to find beauty in the ordinary. Stop and watch children playing and you'll notice how everything becomes magical. Children are excited by the sheer number of "things" on a beach like shells, feathers, seaweed, sea glass, and best of all rocks. As the tide uncovers the rocks strewn along the beach, glistening in the sun, many riches make themselves available to young hands. A walk along the shore with a child will surely fill your pockets with treasures. Who hasn't witnessed a child filling the bucket to overflowing with rocks of all colors, shapes and size, only to find the bucket too heavy to lift?

Bane of the gardeners, rocks are a delight to a child. Embracing the lowly rocks beneath our feet and finding the charm each holds is an innocent pleasure. Interest in a child's world, will rekindle the love once within for rocks. The youthful pursuit is soothing and prods us to remember childhood and its sincerity.

Walking becomes a search for beauty. A white rock is like gold. Smooth rocks feel so good, and some rocks glitter in the sun. Wetting the rock increases the splendor and reveals the glowing colors once hidden.

The huge boulders excavated when homes are built can become permanent play equipment The very best place to stand and sing at the top of your lungs when you're five years old. At eleven it's awesome to cloud gaze from this perch. If you're approaching forty, a garden nicely surrounds this massive fixture. Planting spring bulbs around it will encourage early blooming as the rock transfers the sun's warmth to the soil.

Rocks are displayed on book shelves and window sills with pebbles on small perches. Reaching into your pocket, you might find a rock of exceptional beauty. Smile, someone has stuck that rock in there, just for you. Someone took the time to think of you and give a grand present.

Even Man-made rocks hold great interest. Have you ever seen how the ocean can smooth the roughness of a brick, or what the pounding waves will do to concrete?

Leaving basket on the door step provides a home for rocks of many different sizes and shapes, (making it all the easier for the children to leave their collection outside). If they must come indoors because of the great beauty, a mason jar can accommodate the most beautiful of stones. Beware, one of the conditions of rock collecting is handling the rocks time and again. Wetting the stones in the bathroom sink and drying with a dish towel, (clean of course) is mandated on a daily basis.

Any child will enjoy labeling their own rock collection. Start with an empty egg carton, and have the collector paint it inside and out. When dry, heavily glue a rock into each cup. Then find a book to identify the rock. (The library will have one if you do not.) Next, find each rock in the book and write the names on paper labels. Each label should be glued to its corresponding egg cup. Voila! It's a wonderful collection for lugging about, and rolling the names on your tongue. (Quartz, shale, granite or maybe a meteorite!) The passion for arrowhead hunting begins here.

Do not underestimate rocks, stones or pebbles. They're enchanting and if you haven't forgotten the early years of your life, you'll feel the magic too.

To quote Jean Webster, "It isn't the big pleasures that count the most; it's making a great deal out of the little ones."

New mom describes the experience

South Shore women welcome return of midwives

By Debbie Jacobsen
OFFICE MANAGER,
SOUTH SHORE MIDWIFERY & OB/GYN

Debbie Jacobsen's eleven week old daughter was born with the assistance of South Shore Midwifery & OB/GYN where Jacobsen is the office manager.

An ancient profession, midwifery is a new concept for many today so South Shore Midwifery & Ob/Gyn has been educating the public on the role of a midwife in contemporary society. The true meaning of the word midwife is "with woman."

A nurse midwife is a nurse who has furthered her education in the obstetrical field and pursued certification, thus the name Certified Nurse Midwife.

In some cultures midwives deliver babies in a home environment. However, our Certified Nurse Midwives stay with their patients during labor and delivery in the Birthing Unit at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Midwives help the patient deliver their baby according to the patient's desires. If the patient wants to have an epidural (medication for pain), the midwives order it. In Massachusetts, midwives have prescription privileges. The midwives stay with the patient throughout labor. It is a real workout not only for the patient but for the midwife.

Midwives do much more than prenatal visits, labor, delivery and post partum visits. They work as a team with obstetrician/gynecologists to provide total health care to women up through the menopausal years. The midwives do annual exams, pap smears and other testing. They are a wonderful resource for educating women about their bodies. I learned more about my body during one annual exam with a midwife than I have during my entire lifetime. She brought out books and pamphlets and explained things that I had not previously understood.

Midwives are a wonderful transition from a pediatrician because they do so much educating. Young adults have an opportunity in private to ask questions concerning their bodies and get factual answers explained using a modality that the patient understands.

In April, I had the opportunity to see a midwife in action. Our baby girl was delivered with the assistance of Agnes Densmore, CNM. Part of the labor was monitored by Susan Riess, CNM. The experience was wonderful. A midwife was with me for almost the entire labor. I was kept well informed as to the stages of labor, pain medication options were discussed with me, I was reminded about relaxing and generally made to feel comfortable. A physician was nearby should complications arise. However, we were fortunate enough to have an uncomplicated birth.

Offices are located in Weymouth, Hanover and Carver. Appointments are scheduled to meet the needs of the patients from early morning through evening and some Saturdays depending on the location.

To schedule an appointment or a free 15-minute consultation with one of the Certified Nurse Midwives, call the toll free number, (888) 840-0496.

Cervical cancer screening

Early detection increases survival

Christo J. Shakr, M.D.

As life expectancies for Americans continue to lengthen, it is now estimated that three out of every ten people will get cancer at some time in their lives. According to the American Cancer Society, an average of 100,000 more people would survive, annually, if their cancer was detected and treated in an early stage. The role of Health Care Professionals is not only to identify a woman at risk for specific cancer but also to educate them about cancer risk reduction.

Screening for cervical, ovarian, breast, colon, and endometrial cancer should be done routinely; more so, in women over the age of forty years.

With regard to cervical cancer, the Papanicolaou (Pap) smear has been the golden standard for now over one-half a century. The decline in incidence and mortality from cervical cancer illustrates the importance of this test.

Screening for cervical, ovarian, breast, colon, and endometrial cancer should be done routinely; more so, in women over the age of forty years.

It is recommended that all women who are, or have been, sexually active or have reached eighteen years of age, should have an annual Pap smear and pelvic examination. The frequency of performing a Pap smear has varied from yearly Pap smears to Pap smears done every two to three years if three consecutive annual Pap smears were normal in women who are at low risk. The clinical challenge is to define what is low risk.

Some of the known risk factors include: 1) Early onset of sexual intercourse. 2) Multiple sexual partners. 3) Cigarette smoking. 4) Infections with human papilloma virus (HPV) or more commonly known as warts, herpes infections, or Chlamydia. 5) Infection with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV). 6) Exposure to diethylstilbestrol (DES); namely, daughters whose moms took DES during their pregnancy.

Since it is difficult to know the history of the male partners, the recommendation is to have Pap smears done annually.

The frequency of Pap smears for postmenopausal women is the same as for premenopausal women, even after hysterectomy (removal of the uterus) since the Pap smear can also diagnose precancerous and cancerous lesions of the vagina.

Abandoning Pap smears after menstruation ceases is a dangerous practice.

Pap smears have a false-negative rate of 10-25% which means that the Pap smear will be normal even though some precancerous or cancerous lesions might be present.

In the past several years, three new techniques to improve the accuracy of Pap tests have been approved. These are the thin prep test, the Pap net system, and the auto Pap system. The last two are computer-assisted screening methods. All of these have advantages and disadvantages. However, no studies have shown, so far, that the use of these new techniques have lowered the occurrence of advanced cervical cancer. Thus, the old Pap smear stood the test of time and is still considered the standard of care.

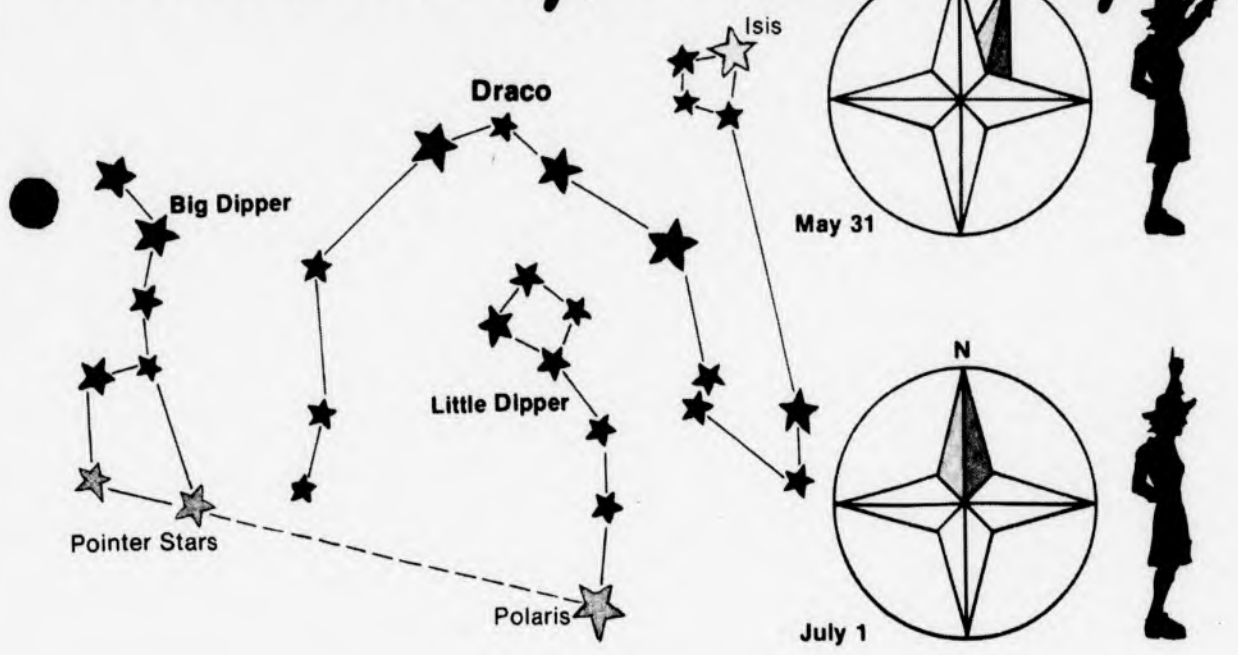
I wish I may, I wish I might



A peaceful journey into the night sky

By Alice Elwell

The night sky furnishes more than twinkling and glittering. It's a connection to the universe. As the warm evenings of summer begin to rock us to sleep, we can take advantage of the magnificence of the stars. Lawn chairs that soak up the sun's warming rays by day can also embrace us as we gaze at the heavens.

Not only will the kids nestle in your arms as the stars course through their nocturnal wanderings, but the cat and dog will curl up on your feet. A candle and a cup of cocoa complete the ambiance.

In the silence of the celestial bodies a new murmuring can be heard. We listen as tree frogs converse, night herons and owls squawk, June bugs twang on the screens, and children speak.

It's a gentle time of communing with the universe, the earth and the children. Some want "scary stories," others beg for reminisces. The tales become part of our oral souvenirs. Part of mankind's long tradition of storing memories and sharing through the generations. The flow of conversation climaxes as falling stars capture the imagination. Wishes can take time. Desires of the young and old are collected and considered. "I wish for a horse, I wish to catch a swallow tail butterfly, I wish for peace."

Joining the ancients in the stars' game of "connect the dots" we visualize the giant pictures in the sky. Oriens belt straddles a man, the three sisters remind us of our siblings, the crab edges across the constellations. Venus, the morning and evening star reminds us of man's need for love.

A peace settles in as we link to the thousands of years humans have gazed up and wondered. The big dipper points to the little dipper. The handle contains the north star important to navigators from Magellan to today's sailors who keep their bearings on clear summer's nights as they navigate towards P-Town or George's Bank.

Far from making us feel small, nightfall shows us our place in the universe. We watch stars light years away journey through the galaxy. We hear a soft voice whisper in our ear. We feel a small hand softly fall as our cherished child drifts into the realm of dreams.

Music moves you.

One hundred percent of children are naturally musical. In fact, the first instrument they learn is their own voice. Kindermusik moves a child by encouraging active individual expression, both physically and vocally. Through musical activities, a child develops control of motor skills, enhances listening skills and refines language development. A Kindermusik child and family develop a unique musical bond and learn fun ways to incorporate music into their lives at home.

Books and Babies — It's never too soon

By Joan Gatturna

It's never too soon to introduce your baby to the world of books, stories and reading. Pediatricians, librarians, educators and social service workers all agree that reading to very young children, even newborns, facilitates their language development and prepares them to become future good readers.

It's also a special and intimate time for parent and child, when they can share the pictures and colors and the sounds of words in a children's book.

In recognition of the importance of connecting babies and books, the American Library Association has developed a program called "Born to Read," designed to encourage parents of very young children to bring their babies to the library.

Locally, the Rockland Memorial Library is a participant in the program. In the office of library director Denise Mederoise sits a miniature white armoire with the heart-shaped "Born to Read" logo emblazoned on its little doors.

"On Baby Day, this is brought into the children's room. It's filled with board books which are given to the babies and children under 4," Mederoise explains.

Children gather to pet a rabbit at the Rockland Memorial Library's Baby Day.

These tiniest patrons are also given a bib and a library card. This year's Baby Day was held in May, complete with balloon and live animals, a storyteller, complementary baby photos from Wal-Mart and refreshments.

While there won't be another official Baby Day until next spring in Rockland, the program is ongoing and any parent, who brings their baby to the library, receives a book, a bib, and a library card.

"We actually have a volunteer who sends invitations to parents in town who have newborn announcements in the newspaper. We want to establish the reading connection at the youngest possible age," says Director Mederoise.

Many other area libraries also have programs for the very young. The sessions generally last from 20-30 minutes and include simple stories, songs and fingerplays. All require that a parent be present with the baby. Most are drop-in. Registration is noted if required. Here's a look at what's available:

In Duxbury, there are special story times for children under 3. Beginning in October, groups will meet Tuesdays at 11 and Wednesdays at 10:15 a.m. in the library. During the summer, the sessions move outdoors under the tree on the grounds of the old library, the Wright Building. The group meets Tuesdays at 10:15 a.m. Bring a blanket, and even an older sibling, as the age limits are relaxed for the summer sessions. No registration is required. Call (781) 934-2721.

In Hanover, there's a Teddy Bear Story Time for 2-1/2 year-olds up to age 4. It's a family affair held Tuesday evenings at 7 and children can bring their teddy bears and come dressed in pajamas. Though the stories are for toddlers, babies are welcome, too. Sessions run now through the end of August. Phone (781) 826-2972.

Hingham has summer story times especially for those under 3. Librarian Trudy Scott says that parents enjoy the camaraderie with each other as much as the little ones enjoy the stories and fingerplays! Sessions are July 12 and 19 and Aug. 9, 16 and 23. Session One meets at 10:15 a.m. and Session Two at 10:45 a.m. Pre-registration is required. Call (781) 741-1405.

Kingston's Mother Goose Time focuses on the very young from birth to 18 months. The sessions will start in September and be held once monthly. Call (781) 585-0517 for the exact schedule.

Books For Babies will begin at the Norwell Library in September. It will meet monthly on a Wednesday which will vary. Call (781) 659-2015 for exact dates. The program is for birth to three and includes dancing and singing, along with the usual stories and fingerplays. Take-home programs of the rhymes and fingerplays used will be given to parents.

Pembroke also plans to have Baby Lap Sit story times beginning in the fall. Children 4 months to 2 years are welcome. Each child will be given a copy of a book to hold (not keep!) during the telling of the story. Call (781) 293-6771.

In Scituate there is a Story Time for Toddlers, ages 12-18 months, meeting Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m. July 6 through Aug. 10. The library also has a Books for Babies program where all newborns in town are officially invited to become part of the library family. Call (781) 545-8727.

If libraries are reaching out to make it easy for parents to get books for babies, so are publishers. Many wonderful books are now available in cloth editions, or as a "board book," which can withstand chewing and sticky fingers.

There's no excuse not to put a book in your baby's hands, and to introduce your little one to the wonderful world of language and stories.

Remember, your baby is "Born to Read!"

Two more arrested on heroin charges

Result of intensive investigation

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Cohasset police are making a dent in the drug trade in town. This week, thanks to a continuing intensive investigation into heroin distribution in Cohasset, police made two more arrests on drug charges.

Arrested were Ronald Ray, 47, 1595 Main St., Weymouth and Holly Hunter, 47, 15 Logan Ave., Hull.

Fifty bags of heroin, a hypodermic syringe and a small quantity of marijuana were recovered from the suspects during the arrests, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

Working with the Norfolk County District Attorney's Drug Task Force, Cohasset police arrested Ray and Hunter at about 9 p.m. last Wednesday (June 23). The subjects had been under surveillance and were apprehended in Weymouth, police said.

Police also arrested two men last month on heroin charges and say that three recent deaths in town - two males in their 40s and one 31-year-old female — may be linked to heroin abuse.

Ray was charged with possession of a class A substance -heroin — with intent to distribute (second or subsequent offense); possession of a class A substance (second or subsequent of-

Greenbelt expands with farm acquisition

Hingham site to be opened to public in Spring 2000

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

For all of those who ignored the 'No Trespassing' signs at Weir River Firm as children, the news that it will soon be opened to the public ensures that they can relive their childhood memories of traipsing through the property without fear of consequence.

The Trustees of Reservations, a member-based, non-profit organization focusing upon land conservation, announced at a press conference on Tuesday its acquisition of the 75-acre Weir River Farm in Hingham, which they will open to the public in the Spring of 2000.

The property, which lies between Turkey Hill Road and East Street, has been of extreme importance to the Trustees since they began managing it for its former owner, 94-year old artist Polly Thayer Starr, as part of a 20-year arrangement with her.

Water supply in good shape despite drought

Residents draw record amount from reservoir

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

It's good to be a blade of grass in Cohasset these days. The grass in most South Shore communities has turned a wilted yellow under the withering sun, water bans and dry weather of the past three months. But the grass is greener here in town except for North Cohasset, which receives water from the Hingham Mass. American Water Company. North Cohasset residents have been asked by their water supplier to abide by a voluntary every-other day water restriction plan.

Water commission Chairman John K. McNabb Jr. said Cohasset is fortunate to have plentiful water reserves during the recent drought. Less than a quarter-inch of water has fallen in the past 30 days, yet the town reservoir remains at full capacity. Residents are drawing record amounts of water from the reservoir. Last Saturday, the plant pumped a record 1.85 million gallons of water in 24 hours.

"We're in great shape," McNabb said. "There have been no complaints of shortages that we're aware of because of the drought. Except for isolated shortages that have nothing to do with the weather, we're in great shape. We do have to keep in mind that if record consumption continues without rain, there could be problems."

"Except for isolated shortages that have nothing to do with the weather, we're in great shape. We do have to keep in mind that if record consumption continues without rain, there could be problems."

— John K. McNabb, Jr., water commissioner

McNabb said Cohasset's plentiful water supply comes from the 323 million gallon Aaron River Reservoir that feeds Lily Pond. Even after several weeks of drought conditions, the water level at the reservoir remains only eight inches below the top of the retaining wall.

McNabb said the town's water system maintenance program may be one of the reasons Cohasset is unaffected by the drought. The water department's ongoing efforts to re-line existing pipes and replace old water mains is providing residents with good water pressure as long as there is water to pump. The water department also began repairing leaky pipes in 1994 to keep the water in the system. Just two years ago, the South Shore experienced a serious drought that left the town's water supply within a few feet of the bottom of the pond. But that hardly seems likely now.

The only problem comes from having one water tank. McNabb said the plant has to remain in operation longer to make sure the single tank remains full. The tank provides the pressure needed to push water through pipes into people's homes. Having two tanks would allow the water department to keep the plant off-line longer and rest the equipment.

"We have to gauge when to re-fill the tank," McNabb said. "We're getting a lot of draw on the system from sprinklers. A lot of people have automatic sprinklers that come on at 2 a.m. we have to make sure there is enough pressure at 6:30 a.m. when people begin taking their morning showers."

In the past, sprinklers created problems for parts of town already experiencing low water pressure. The sprinklers would draw pressure away from other parts of the water system. Mc-

School architect picked for renovations

A joint meeting of the school committee and the school building committee will be held at 6:30 p.m. on July 8 at the middle-high school. The meeting will take place in the conference room next to the superintendent's office and will focus upon the architectural firm that has been chosen by the school building committee to do renovations at Deer Hill and the middle-high school. School committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo said that he expects the school committee's vote on the architect to be the only business that evening.

Greenbush right-of-way visit

A bus tour of the Greenbush right of way took place Wednesday after the Cohasset Mariner went to press. State transportation officials including Secretary of Transportation and MBTA Board Chairman Kevin Sullivan and MBTA General Manager Robert Prince, joined community activists and local officials on the tour, which made stops in Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate. A community meeting at Hingham Town Hall followed the tour. Next week's Mariner will feature complete coverage of the site visit and community meeting.

Ten minutes for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays.

The next selectmen's meeting is Monday, July 12.

Construction to begin on Lightkeepers Memorial

Government Island project gets go-ahead

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

For 86-year old Herb Jason, a lifetime Cohasset resident and lobsterman, the ground-breaking ceremony which will officially begin construction of the new Lightkeepers Memorial on Government Island means that he is closing in upon the realization of a lifetime dream.

Town manager Mark Haddad said that construction may begin now that the Cohasset Sailing Club has moved a number of boats that were sitting adjacent to the site of the proposed memorial.

"They have the go-ahead to begin construction once the boats are out," he said.

Jason's dream is to ensure that the town will forever remember Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson, the two young lightkeepers who lost their lives when the original Minot's Ledge Light crashed into the sea, unable to withstand the vicious storm which struck the coast on the night of April 16, 1851.

"People forgot about them, but I've always thought about what it must have been like for them on that night. They were only 21 and 23 years old."

— Herb Jason

"The lighthouse bell was ringing furiously around 11:00," Jason said in describing the scene of that night. "The lighthouse was swaying two feet from center on either side. Antoine and Wilson put a message in a bottle which said that the lighthouse would not last the night and put their initials, J.A. and J.W., on it."

Jason said that he had pictured that scene in his mind many times since his mother first told him about the original Minot's Light and its demise when he was a child.

"My mother told me about what had happened to these two men," Jason said. "All of my life, I thought that someday I would like to do something to remember them. People forgot about them, but I've always thought about what it must have been like for them on that night. They were only 21 and 23 years old."

The design for the memorial that is Jason's passion was the result of a collaboration with others close to him who shared the belief that a memorial be built in Antoine's and Wilson's honor.

"Ten or 12 years ago, I began seriously thinking about what an appropriate memorial would be," Jason said. "I got together with my grandson, John Small (a Cohasset police officer), my brother, Kenneth Jason, and my friend Wigmore Pierson, and we worked as a committee to figure out what the memorial should be."

The design which they agreed upon is a circular compass rose, which will be twelve feet in diameter and will feature a three-foot stone made of polished black granite in its center. Inscribed on the stone will be the story of what happened to Antoine and Wilson on that stormy April night in 1851, as well as a picture of the original Minot's Light which toppled into the sea.

"New people moving in to Cohasset and visitors to Government Island don't know about the first lighthouse," Jason said. "Now they'll be able to read about the story of Antoine and Wilson and see what the first lighthouse looked like."

Jason said that the impetus behind choosing the compass rose had to do with its link to Cohasset's nautical history.

"Back when the first Minot's Light existed, almost everyone in town was connected with the harbor in some way," he said. "Cohasset Harbor was one of the busiest harbors in Massachusetts. School would even be let out early so the kids could help out at the harbor.

"It seemed natural to make the design something nautical. Four centuries ago, every map and chart had a compass rose, so it seemed like a good idea."

The compass rose will sit atop a four foot foundation of crushed stone which will be banded by stainless steel to reinforce it. On top of that will lay one foot of reinforced concrete. An additional six inches above that will be concrete, granite, and cobblestone which will comprise the ground-level compass rose and provide the base for the 1/2 ton granite stone.

The letters N, S, E, and W on the compass rose will be made of polished black granite, while the letters NE, SW, SE, and NW will be fashioned from Canadian granite, which Small described as "gray with a pink hue to it." Diamonds of polished gray will sit in between the directional symbols.

Jason said that the compass itself will be fashioned out of expensive, tapestry brick and that the masonary work will be done by Anthony Barbuto of Hingham.

"He is the best around," Jason said of Barbuto. "He's a real artist.

Jason said that the granite will come from the Rock of Ages quarry in Berry, Vermont, and that the stones will then be shipped to C.W. Canniff and Sons in Quincy, who will do the inscribing.

"We've spent hundreds of hours visiting quarries and making drawings," Jason said. "We wanted to make sure this would be as nice as possible and an appropriate memorial to these two boys."

Not everyone in town thinks the scope of the Lightkeepers Memorial is appropriate, however.

"Personally, I think it's too big a memorial for these two people," said Cohasset Historical Commission member Hamilton Tewksbury. "It's unnecessary. The Historical Commission proposed a bronze plaque on the replica [the lighthouse replica on Government Island] which I think would have been more appropriate."

Jason argued that the Historical Commission's proposal was inadequate. "The plaque was going to just give their names," he said.

"It's expensive," Jason said of his vision, which will cost about $50,000, "but what are these two boys worth?"

"When we decided to do this, we wanted to make sure we did it right," Small said. "We want this memorial to last a couple of hundred years."

"A couple of thousand years," Jason said, correcting his grandson. "We want this to last forever."

Small said that those constructing the memorial, which was approved by Selectmen in December 1997, have enough money to buy all of the granite but are still in need of funding to complete the project.

"We probably need about $30,000 to finish it," he said. We'd like to get it done this year, hopefully by Labor Day, though I don't know how realistic that is."

Small added that fundraising options are being considered, but that a specific event or campaign has not been finalized.

"We're looking at a couple of ideas and trying to come up with something that is feasible," he said.

Donations toward the project are tax deductible and checks may be made payable to : Town of Cohasset, c/o Antoine and Wilson Memorial Fund, Cohasset Town Hall, 40 Highland Ave, Cohasset, MA 02025.

The Cohasset Historical Commission added another piece of the town's rich nautical legacy to Government Island recently when it installed parts of the Fresnel lens which used to be in Minot's Light into the lighthouse replica.

The Fresnel lens is named for Augustus Fresnel, the Frenchman who invented the lens, which is made up of a series of four-sided prisms.

"It magnifies a 100-watt bulb so you can see it 30 to 40 miles away," said historical commission member Hamilton Tewksbury, the driving force behind retrieving the lens.

The partial lens which has been installed in the replica is part of a lens which was actually once in Minot's Light.

"The lens was in Minot's Light from 1964-1971, when vandals got into the lighthouse and threw the pieces overboard," Tewksbury said.

Not all of the lens was recovered, but Tewksbury said the Coast Guard took what remained, beginning an odyssey during which the lens was moved up and down the East Coast.

"The Coast Guard put what was left of the lens in New Bedford, where it just sat in boxes," he said. "I heard about it, but was directed to Mystic Seaport, in Connecticut, and I thought the lens from Minot's was there.

"Finally, I was put in touch with someone in Maryland, which is where the lens ended up when it was moved once again. Through a number of phone calls and conversations, we were finally able to secure permission to bring the lens home to Cohasset."

Though the lens now sits in the replica, Tewksbury said the town does not have ownership of it.

"The Coast Guard doesn't give you anything," he said. "The lens is on loan to Cohasset. We had to insure it for $125,000 and we have to send them a report every two to four years about the status of the lens. It took four to five years to get them to agree to let us have it."

Tewksbury, who also sits on the Government Island Study Committee, said that visitors to Government Island will be seeing a genuine piece of history when they look at the Fresnel lens in the Replica.

"According to those who knew, a ship coming from Cape Cod Canal could take a bearing off of Minot's Light and go from there to Boston Harbor," he said. "Minot's Light itself is historic and this lens was in Minot's Light."

The Fresnel lens in the replica is a third-order lens, which is five feet high and three feet wide.

"The order of a lens is an indication of its size," Tewksbury said. "There are six orders. A first-order lens is seven feet high and five feet wide, while a sixth-order lens is only 14 inches high and ten inches wide."

The district attorney will be moving to indict the subjects, Jackson said.

The men arrested last month were also charged with possession of heroin with intent to distribute and conspiracy to violate the drug laws, among other charges. Fourteen bags of heroin were confiscated at the scene of those arrests.

Police said 50 bags of heroin, a hypodermic syringe and a small quantity of marijuana were recovered from the suspects during the arrests.

Det. Gregory Lennon, who is leading the investigation, said heroin sells for $10-$15 a bag and is usually snorted or injected.

One of the three recent deaths is a confirmed heroin overdose. In the other two deaths, heroin is the suspected cause because of drug paraphernalia found at the scene. As a result of the woman's death on Feb. 24, in a joint effort, Cohasset police, the Norfolk County DA Drug Task Force and Randolph police arrested a subject in Randolph who allegedly sold to her. The alleged dealer is now under indictment on heroin-related charges.

Boat traffic and harbor swimmers don't mix

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

The Cohasset Sailing Club is increasingly concerned about swimmers in the harbor crossing over from Government Island to Bassing Beach, a distance of about 80 feet.

Those fears are heightened with the Fourth of July weekend ahead and the likelihood of great weather and a lot of boats.

"We're concerned about safety," said Tom Lemaire, a member of the sailing club board of directors.

Although it can be comical to watch people towing coolers on inner tubes heading over to Bassing Beach, Lemaire said swimmers mixed in with boats going in and out of Bailey's Creek is a dangerous situation.

Police Chief Brian Noonan said police will have some marine units out over the holiday weekend but manpower could pose a problem.

"We just started our marine patrols last weekend and we will continue this weekend as personnel allows," said Noonan who explained the patrols are paid for through a grant.

"We just started our marine patrols last weekend and we will continue this weekend as personnel allows."
— Police Chief Brian Noonan

Assistant Harbormaster Bob Baggs said the town has been fortunate that there hasn't been an accident there involving a swimmer and a boat. But Baggs, who has worked in the harbor for 30-odd years, said swimmers have been making the crossing for as long as he can remember.

"It's like the bridge," he said about kids jumping off the bridge over the Gulf River on Border Street. "Police come and the kids walk away and then by the time the officer is in the cruiser, they're back."

Baggs guessed an officer would have to be on patrol at the scene full-time to prevent swimmers from heading to Bassing Beach.

"I bet they don't have the budget for that."

He said the harbormaster's office has installed no swimming signs in the past and anchored them to the dock, but they were quickly stolen.

This time of year boat traffic is on the increase, especially on the weekends. Cohasset Harbor Marina in Bailey's Creek has expanded and there is a large volume of boaters using the public boat ramp at Parker Avenue.

Water supply in good shape despite drought

Nabb said the pipe re-lining and replacement should help alleviate some of that problem.

"One of the problems we experienced during water crises in 1994 and 1995 was inadequate flow at the Linden Drive and Rustic Lane area," McNabb said. "That was caused by sprinklers, but we are addressing the situation now."

McNabb said the water commissioners do not anticipate any major problems with water during the remaining summer months. So residents can enjoy the summer with little fear of water restrictions. Residents can run their sprinklers and take pride in a green lawn. But if the water supply does drop below adequate levels, the first thing the water department may ban could very well be outdoor sprinklers.

Bear Hill antenna delayed indefinitely

AT&T's plans to place a telecommunications antenna on top of the water tank on Bear Hill have been placed on hold, at least until September.

Representatives from AT&T were scheduled to appear before the water commissioners at their last meeting to discuss the antenna proposal. But the AT&T representatives canceled at the last minute without an explanation.

Water commission Chairman John K. McNabb Jr. said the water commission will not be able to re-schedule a meeting with AT&T until September or later. The water commission will be focused on acquiring the permits needed to build a second water tank on Scituate Hill. The water commissioners are scheduled to appear before the zoning board of appeals on July 6 to request a variance from the town's 45-foot high limit to build the 75-foot high tank.

School Committee to discuss private donations

Questions abound concerning their potential impact

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

At its July 15 meeting, the Cohasset school committee will discuss the explosive question about whether or not they should accept private donations to fund programs which have been eliminated due to restrictions in the school budget. Such a decision would have important implications, a fact which school committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo is well aware of.

"We really need to sit down and think about this," he said. "There are definitely pros and cons on each side. "On one hand, it would be nice to offer programs we can't offer through our budget. On the other hand, there are clearly issues about accepting one donation versus another."

"Until the budget cuts came, there wasn't really a lot of discussion about fundraising for the schools, especially as far as private donations go," said school committee member Pat Martin. "Now there's an urgency there and we need to look at the upsides and downsides."

Martin said that fellow school committee member Betsy Connolly floated an idea about holding a forum to size up fundraising interest among residents.

"Betsy suggested we have an open forum and see how many programs people want to donate toward restoring. That way we can see the big picture first and we'll know where the holes are as far as the programs which people don't want to donate toward."

Martin said that people are going to have to deal with the realization that, if the school committee accepts private donations for specific purposes, some programs will inevitably be funded over others.

"Some programs are sexier than others, such as athletics," she said. "Athletics may be the area where people want to give. We have to look at that as reality."

One potential solution to that dilemma would be what Martin calls "unrestricted giving," which would mean that those who wanted to donate toward restoration of a program or programs would simply donate to the school at large.

"Donations wouldn't be program-specific," she said. "But if a soccer parent donated to the restoration of a soccer team, we couldn't guarantee that the money would definitely be used for that purpose."

An additional solution for funding athletic programs could be endowments, which Martin said have been used with great success at colleges, but may not be feasible at the high school level.

Another potential hurdle that relates to restoring athletic programs is compliance with Title IX regulations, which Martin said the committee would have to examine before agreeing to accept money toward reinstating a particular team.

Title IX is a federal law which states that males and females must have an equal opportunity to compete in interscholastic athletics. Thus, reinstating a girls soccer team and a girls basketball team without restoring a boys team as well might be impossible.

"But if a soccer parent donated to the restoration of a soccer team, we couldn't guarantee that the money would definitely be used for that purpose."
— Pat Martin, school board member

"We have to ensure that we are legally abiding by the Title IX requirements as far as funding athletic programs goes," she said.

DeGiacomo said that though the issues involved are indeed murky, the school committee has been assured by Supt. Dr. Edward 'Ted' Malvey that accepting private donations is legal.

"Ted obtained the legal opinion that we could accept donated funds which are designated for a particular purpose," he said. "Whether we should [accept donated funds] is something we will continue to discuss."

Martin proposed using the school board's alternative funding subcommittee, of which she is a member, as an intermediary between those looking to donate toward certain programs and the school committee.

"We want to be a clearinghouse," she said of the alternative funding subcommittee. "We could ask questions of potential donors and do the research to see whether or not accepting the money would be a good decision. We could then present our findings to the school committee."

Martin added that she knows that some of the school committee members may not agree with her proposal.

"I'm sure that some of the school committee members may not be too comfortable with that idea," she said. "They might want to hear all of the information themselves. But I've seen nightmares in the committee process when it comes to fundraising."

Regardless of the process the school committee decides to use to accept or reject private donations, Martin feels the school committee cannot be so discriminating that they turn away potential donors.

"We don't want to discourage funding," she said.

For those wishing to hear the discussion on the dilemma surrounding private donations, the school committee meeting will take place at 6:30 in the A/V room at the middle high school.

Greenbelt expands with farm acquisition

space in this area," said Thomas Foster, Southeast Regional Director for the Trustees of Reservations. "The acquisition of Weir River Farm ensures an incredible greenbelt which runs almost the entire length of Hingham and will remain so in perpetuity."

The greenbelt which Foster alludes to now includes the 50 acres of Turkey Hill, which the towns of Hingham and Cohasset purchased in 1996 and is managed by the Trustees, the 800-acre Whitney and Thayer Woods, and 2900-acre Wompatuck State Park.

"Weir River Farm will serve as a fine example of what the Trustees of Reservations does best, which is to protect and preserve other Trustees properties," Foster said.

"The acquisition of Weir River Farm allows us to connect the property with Turkey Hill to the east and Whitney and Thayer Woods to the south," he said.

Foster was quick to credit the farm's former owner for her commitment to land preservation, saying, "Mrs. Starr understands the importance of conservation and showed that in turning the property over to us. She's 94 years old, but as charming and engaging as ever. We applaud her generosity and commitment."

Mrs. Starr, whose artwork has been featured at the Copley Society of Boston's gallery on Newbury Street, was born and raised in Boston but maintained a seasonal residence at Weir River Farm for many years.

Foster said that the farm will remain largely unchanged from its current state, but said the trustees do have a few modifications in mind.

"We want to restore some of the vistas on the property," he said. "We will clear some forests gradually which will allow people to see into Cohasset from the top of the hill. We also want to maintain and enhance the garden path on the property."

In addition to announcing the acquisition of Weir River Farm, the Trustees also announced the completion of an ambitious study which they hope will act as a guide for land conservation throughout Massachusetts.

"We are proud to announce the completion of Conserving Our Common Wealth, which we hope will guide land conservation efforts in Massachusetts," said Trustees conservation planner Chris Rodstrom.

Rodstrom said that the study is different than other land conservation studies done by the Massachusetts Audubon Society and the Nature Conservancy.

"We've created a tailored approach to protecting land of exceptional historic, ecological, or scenic significance," he said. "It is ambitious, and has a unique, regional focus."

Steve Sloan, Land Protection Specialist for Southeast Massachusetts, explained the goals of Conserving our Common Wealth as they pertain to this part of the state.

"Southeast Massachusetts is one of the fastest-growing areas in the northeastern United States," he said, "which could threaten the unique character of our landscapes. The areas which we're focusing on with great urgency include the woodlands in and around Taunton, cranberry bogs in Plymouth County, coastal farmlands, groundwater supplies to the Charles and Neponset rivers, and the Bay Circuit Greenway, stretching from Sharon to Duxbury."

Foster acknowledged that there are limited funds to work with in purchasing properties for conservation, and that partnerships are essential.

"We hope to work closely with regional land tracts, municipalities, and residents of these communities," he said, noting Turkey Hill as a case in which such cooperation was successful.

"We received $350,000 from the private sector and the residents of Cohasset and Hingham both appropriated over $100,000 at the respective town meetings," he said. "Partnerships come into play and one agency or group cannot be successful alone."

The Trustees oversee 21,000 acres of land on 82 properties from Cape Cod to the Berkshires, and hope to add 10,000 more acres of protected land, a goal which Rodstrom termed as ambitious, but said that the Trustees have a system in place allowing them to prioritize between prospective properties and to determine whether or not to attempt to purchase them.

"We've developed a set of criteria for properties we are trying to obtain," he said. "Is the property for sale, is the owner willing to work, and what can we feasibly do in the short-term?"

While stopping short of introducing a list of those properties which the Trustees are interested in, Foster did mention that the organization is currently working on attaining a property in the South Shore.

"We are looking at the Norris reservation in Norwell," he said. "It's a 10-acre site, which includes a beaver pond and wetlands. We'd eventually like to build a boardwalk around the beaver pond."

Cohasset/Scituate swimming team is floated

By Frank DiCesare
STAFF WRITER

Between 24 and 30 students in the two towns are expected to participate on the swimming team. If the proposal passes muster with Cohasset school officials, it will be brought to the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) in Milford for final approval.

Scituate High School swimmers may soon be combining their competitive spirit with their neighbors to the north.

The Scituate School Committee voted unanimously, Wednesday night, to authorize SHS athletic director Jeffrey Granatino to negotiate with Cohasset school officials to coordinate a two-town swimming team. The board's authorization comes with the stipulation that the new team will not come as a cost to the town.

"I do have some concerns about taking this on in the future as a self-sustaining proposal," said school committee chairman E. Decker Adams. "I see a tight budget out there for the next two years,"

School committee member Mary Mason had similar concerns.

"I think it's wonderful," she said. "I'm just concerned about next year. What if you come back next year with no money?"

Scituate resident Jack Foley, who turned out to support the proposal, said parents would take care of the team's financing.

Superintendent of schools John P. Kulevich said he too was in favor of the proposal.

"I think because you're going to do it with two school systems you won't have a problem getting swimmers and divers," he said. "It keeps kids active and out of trouble."

But despite the lack of funds available for the proposal in the high school's athletic budget, Granatino said parents are prepared to come up with the financial resources to keep the two-town swimming team above water. Each town will have to come up with about $4,000 for one season, Granatino said.

"We did the exact same thing with lacrosse this year," he said. "We had fundraisers and we got money from SHORE."

A two-town swimming would be based out of the YMCA building in Quincy. School buses would transport the swimming team to and from the Quincy Y since Scituate does not allow its team members to drive themselves to practice outside of town. Funding for the buses would come out of the private organization subsidizing the swimming team. Scituate and Cohasset would split the costs, Granatino said.

Between 24 and 30 students in the two towns are expected to participate on the swimming team. If the proposal passes muster with Cohasset school officials, it will be brought to the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) in Milford for final approval.

"They're the NCAA of school athletics in Massachusetts," Granatino said. "They will determine the need for a two-town swimming team in the area."

The MIAA allows two towns to organize a single swimming team when they fear they will lose a school district, Granatino said. However, the team must be formed with two neighboring communities.

Granatino said he is certain Cohasset wants to join their student swimmers with Scituate's.

And CHS athletic director Clark Chatterton confirmed this fact. Chatterton said combining school athletics from two towns into one is nothing new. He said the MIAA has been allowing towns to combine their teenage athletic talents for close to a decade.

"Last year we knew we had dwindling numbers in our gymnastics program so we combined with Norwell," he said. "It was a win-win situation for both towns. Without each other, neither town could field a team. It also came at half the cost."

CHS's co-ed swimming team is a decade old. For the past five years the school has also offered a varsity swimming program, Chatterton said.

"If you are on a co-ed team you swim in the winter," Chatterton said. "Both boys and girls will be able to come out for the team. That's a real positive to get both sexes swimming."

Under the MIAA rules, Chatterton said, girls swimming teams must swim in the winter; the boys swim in the spring.

Chatterton said he will pitch the proposal to the Cohasset School Committee at its next meeting.

WHAT A GREAT YEAR!

Abi Kornet, a '98 graduate of Northfield Mt. Hermon, has not been away at college this past year, but rather taking a year off. She has traveled to Ireland, rowed competitively for Community Rowing, Inc. on the Charles and spent two months in Oxford, England. From October to December, she studied body language, acting and Irish history through intensive one-on-one seminars at Oxford Tutorial College. Then from January through May she interned at the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind. She worked as a teacher's assistant with deaf upper elementary kids and taught algebra to a hard-of-hearing high school student with cerebral palsy. It was such a rewarding experience, she'd like to return on an independent study in a few years.

Abi worked with the Center for Interim Programs, just as Alli Ritts did several years ago. She said, "Not only did I have fun, I learned a lot more about myself, how I work, and my relationship with the rest of the world. This was something I needed to do before stressing out for another four years, and I think everyone could benefit from this kind of break."

In the fall, Abi will begin her freshman year at her long-time choice of Connecticut College — if you are interested in this program, check out <<www.interimprograms.com>> to see for yourself.

WEDDINGS & ENGAGEMENTS

Hill-James

Carla Susan James, the daughter of Philip and Cynthia James of North Haven, Conn. was married to Michael Allan Hill, son of Paul and Barbara Hill of Bedford on May 1, 1999, at the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset. The Rev. Gary A. Ritts officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip James. Her matron of honor was Kristina Caravella of Fitchburg. The bridesmaids were Elizabeth Trasavage of Sudbury, and Tracy Bardsley of Amherst, N.H.

Kenneth Reily of Millis served as best man. The ushers were Brian A. James of Minneapolis, Minn., brother of the bride, and Michael Rabbia of Nutley, N.J.

The bride is a 1988 graduate of Wheaton College in Norton with a B.A. in psychobiology and a 1990 graduate of Simmons College School of Social Work in Boston. She is employed at New England Baptist Hospital in the Case Management Department.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hill

Her husband is a 1989 graduate of Drew University in Madison, N.J. with a B.A. in political science, and a 1990 graduate of Bently College in Waltham, with a paralegal certificate. He is employed at the Law Firm of Sherin and Lodgen, LLP in Boston.

A reception was held at Barker Tavern Restaurant, Scituate. After a wedding trip to Ireland, the couple will reside in Needham.

POLLY SAYS THANKS

Polly Logan dropped a note to say, "Friends are a priceless commodity, especially when they are as considerate and thoughtful as you. My progress is slow, but your flowers and cards are hastening my recovery. Thanks."

That being the case, be sure to keep those cards going to Polly!

CONSIGNMENT SHOP

Here's a reminder for you wise shoppers — don't miss the array of antiques, silver, Wedgewood platters, designer clothes for both men and women, jewelry and children's attire at the Cohasset Consignment Shop. Located at Tedeschi Plaza (in the old Woolworth's building), you will surely find a treasure or two, and it is fun to "poke around" just to see all of the treasures! They are open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sunday from noon 'til 4 p.m.

BC HIGH GRADS

Hats off to Jeffrey E. Flanagan, Robert C. Morgan and Benjamin T. Smoot, all Boston College High School grads!

Connecting with you

We know your frustration. Your group or organization has an event coming up you want everyone to know about or you've just done something special and you'd like to get the word out. You send a press release to the newspaper with a picture, hoping to capture some of that precious newspaper space. The paper comes out on Wednesday and your release has been chopped down to two paragraphs with no photo. Aaaaah!

The Hanover Mariner, and the newspapers that make up Community Newspaper Company, has an answer for all of the non-profit groups out there that would like to get their message out without space constraints – Community Connections.

Perhaps Community Newspaper Company's best-kept secret, Community Connections will provide your group or organization with a free web site. We give you the training, get you set up, then you take care of the rest.

Think about the possibilities.

Your Boy Scout troop just got back from a weekend of camping and one of the dads took enough pictures to fill a photo album and the boys all wrote journals. Are we going to have space in the newspaper to do that justice? No way. But the photos and the journals could go up on your web site.

The 1st grade class at the elementary school has drawings detailing what the students' plans are for their summer vacation. It would make a nice page in the newspaper, but unlikely this time of year. The drawings can go up on the web.

The drama club, the math club, AFS. Every classroom and every extra curricular activity at all the schools could have their own web page.

Sounds too good to be true. It isn't.

We already have several youth sport groups set up and linked to the newspaper's website at www.townonline.com/south. Your group or organization could be next.

All it takes is a couple of hours of training and we'll provide you with the tools to take your group or organization worldwide.

If you're interested in taking advantage of this free service, call Deirdre at (781) 433-7858 or e-mail Tim Gassert at tgassert@cnc.com.

Car wash support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

As a class, we would like to send a warm thank you to everyone who participated in the car wash on June 19. Because of your generous support, we raised $892 in less than six hours! In particular, we would like to thank George Roukounakis for allowing us to use the Texaco Station for our car wash site. Overall, he was really a great person to contact for this fundraiser because he was constantly willing to help us in any way. Whether it was making posters or directing cars where to go, he was always lending us a helping hand.

Also, we would like to thank Gary and Judy Ritts for letting us borrow their supplies from the Appalachia Service Project (buckets, sponges, brushes, etc.).

Most importantly, we'd like to give a big thanks to the community for their support and donations. Without their help, our fundraiser would have never been such a success.

The CHS Class of 2000

Respecting our new school

The following was printed in The Osgood Times Vol 5 #4 from Ms. Owens's class at Osgood.

By Devon Bell

On the first day of school it was pretty cool being at the new school because it was new and we were the first people to be in it. In the past few months it's been getting damaged by people writing on the walls and making skidmarks on the floor. I don't know why kids are doing this.

It's not good to ruin our property. Getting to go to a new school is an opportunity. We got to go from an old school to a new school. We didn't have to stay in the old school with the roof falling down.

Our new school is an opportunity. What could be better than a new school? Someday this school is going to be as old as the Old Joseph Osgood School and we'll be proud that we were the first ones in it.

If people keep drawing on the walls and making skidmarks, new kids that come to our school will think that it's okay to do this. Then the school will get ruined. When this school is as old as the old Joseph Osgood, we'll look back and say "I had an opportunity. Why did I let it pass?"

I'm going to Deer Hill next year. In my last months I want to have a good time. I donít want a school thatís all messed up. I think everybody should stop making skidmarks and drawing on the walls. Everyone should respect our new school.

COHASSET CARES

Composting [continued]

[A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by the Cohasset Recycling Committee]

Let's see where we left off ... It's been good to see people utilizing the Black Gold up at the RTF. One couple I spoke with while we were loading up our cars the other day remarked, "Cohasset is a lovely town. We've kept our garden going for years with this compost." Interesting juxtaposition here.

It takes about a year for our compost to cure. The grass clippings and leaves are "fluffed" with the front-end loader to keep the mixture from massing into mere mold. Some water is necessary along with the aeration. As we mentioned last week, this curing process is a hot one; temperatures in the piles can reach 160 degrees as the organic matter breaks down into humus, the rich soil-like mulch we cherish for our gardens and for our landscaping.

A word or two about home composting: Perhaps the biggest challenge to taking advantage of organic matter breakdown at home is the container, and this writer has experimented with various kinds of compost containers over the years. Why throw out eggshells [calcium], coffee grounds [a natural deodorizing agent as well as important fiber], or vegetable scraps [which would take up space in the trash], any more than we would just throw out man-made recyclables, when with just a little care we could create our own high-grade, automatically ph-balanced humus enrichment for our soil? Separation of recyclables, including compostable matter, occurs for most of us in the kitchen, at the time they are made available, therefore incumbent upon whoever is doing the cooking.

Time's up! To be continued, including methods of separating and organizing recyclables. But you guessed it — all this starts in our minds, in our attitudes. See you next time.

HEALTH NOTES

CDM completes shoreline survey

A newsletter created by a volunteer staff issued periodically by the Board of Health.

Over the past several weeks, Camp Dresser McKee (CDM), the town's contractor for the Little Harbor Study has completed a shoreline study in Little Harbor and Upper Little Harbor. Analysis of data from this work will take several weeks, but indications are that numerous sites of effluent breakout onto the ground surface have been identified. The next step is to make a water quality study of these sites and determine the level and type of pollution, for example: did it come from humans or wildlife? CDM uses a high tech means for differentiating between effluent from wildlife and human waste products.

In addition to identifying point sources of pollution, CDM is making a thorough assessment of the overall health of Little Harbor. In this effort, twelve selected sites will be sampled once a month during the summer and water quality parameters will be measured.

In addition to CDM's sampling, students from the High School, under a grant from the State's Executive Office of Environmental Affairs administered by the Cohasset Lobster Lab will also be taking samples on a weekly basis. In this manner, the entire waterfront will be meticulously evaluated during the whole summer.

Much is already known about Little Harbor's problems. Data already gathered tells us that parts of the harbor are severely polluted, with readings of fecal coliform in excess of safe swimming limits over 20% of the estuary.

The findings are not surprising in light of the increased building now going on around Little Harbor. Previous articles have discussed the over use of fertilizers. CDM have noted excessive algae blooms leading to fish kills and shellfish destruction.

Pollution a problem in all the town's waterways

Pollution in both Cohasset Main Harbor, and Little Harbor has been growing. Although fecal coliform counts at the Sailing Club are low, counts at the Yacht Club have reached over 300 colonies per hundred milliliters (swimming is banned at levels over 200). Little Harbor has readings over 3000 at some locations, and algae is spreading over most bodies of water.

According to Gary Mercer of Camp dresser McKee, the High Counts and presence of abundant algae accompanies a quiet spring with few storm events and little rainfall. Joe Godzik, Cohasset's Health Officer says there may be some connection between the high counts and the work on the tide gates in the harbor. Also, construction all over town may be contributing to heavier concentrations of solids with their accompanying microorganisms in the runoff of any rain event.

All town Beaches are free from pollution. Counts are below 5 at Bassings, Sandy Beach, Sandy Cove, and Rocky Beach, so the cry is swim from the beach not the boat; at least not if she's in the harbor.

QUESTIONS

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on two roll calls from the week of June 21-25. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.
PROHIBIT MINORS' SMOKING(S 494) House 111-26, upheld Speaker Finneran's ruling that an amendment prohibiting minors under 18 from smoking and imposing fines and/or community service on violators, is beyond the scope of a bill banning smoking in flea markets. Supporters of Finneran's ruling said this broad amendment is clearly beyond the narrow scope of a bill which deals only with smoking in flea markets. They said any proposal dealing with minors' smoking should be considered as a separate piece of legislation. Opponents of Finneran's ruling said it is an outrageous one and noted both the bill and the amendment deal with smoking. They argued it is foolish for the state to spend millions to combat youth smoking but continue to make it perfectly legal for minors to smoke. (A "Yea" vote is for Finneran's ruling prohibiting consideration of the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against the ruling).		N
PROHIBIT MINORS' SMOKING IN FLEA MARKETS(S 494) House 116-25, upheld Speaker Finneran's ruling that an amendment prohibiting minors under 18 from smoking in flea markets and imposing fines and/or community service on violators, is beyond the scope of a bill banning smoking in flea markets. Supporters of Finneran's ruling again argued the amendment should be considered as a separate bill. They called the amendment unworkable and argued the people who sell the tobacco to minors should be punished as they are under current law. They noted studies have shown that punishing youths for smoking does not discourage them from the habit but in fact romanticizes it. Opponents of Finneran's ruling said the ruling is outrageous and noted a narrow amendment prohibiting minors under 18 from smoking in flea markets is clearly germane to a bill banning smoking in flea markets. They argued the ruling is a backdoor way of defeating the amendment without members having to go on record as voting against the actual amendment. They noted that minors cannot purchase or possess alcohol or fireworks but under current state law can possess and smoke cigarettes. (A "Yea" vote is for Finneran's ruling prohibiting consideration of the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against the ruling).		Y

With today's edition, we begin coverage of the 1999 Massachusetts legislature with the weekly feature "Beacon Hill Roll Call." This feature is a clear and concise compilation of the voting records of area state representatives and senators at the state house.

Beacon Hill Roll Call provides an unbiased summary of each bill or amendment, as well as arguments from the floor on each side of the issue. Combined with each legislator's vote or lack of vote on the matter, it gives readers an opportunity to monitor their elected officials' actions on Beacon Hill.

Beacon Hill Roll Call is provided by Bob Katzen who has covered the Massachusetts legislature for over 25 years. He also is a radio talk show host whose program can be heard Saturday nights from 10 p.m. to midnight on WRKO-AM (680).

Beacon Hill Roll Call has been providing voting records to newspapers since 1975.

Getting ready for Y2K

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I don't know about you, but I'm kinda looking forward to Jan. 1, 2000 — or Y2K as it's known and feared by those whose lives, particularly their financial lives, are tied up in cybernetics.

That's the day when all the computers in the world are scheduled to go bonkers and take us back to Jan. 1, 1900 when corned beef was selling for eight cents a pound and a quality suit with two pairs of pants and a weskit cost $10.65.

For the past few months computer experts have been hard at work trying to rectify a 30-year-old error that six months down the road will cause computers to recognize '00 as 1900 instead of 2000 and wipe out a century's worth of deals.

No one is certain what is going to happen in cyberspace on Jan. 1, 2000.

"The most up-to-date, factual information that we have tells us that things are under control," said Paul Connolly, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston after a three-hour conference with other Y2K freaks in Boston.

Nevertheless, Connolly's bank is preparing a special lending program for banks that will need loans to carry them through the problems that may be raised by Y2K and Logan Airport is asking all employees to work Jan. 1, just in case airplanes start falling from the sky.

"There is no way we're going to make it," says Tony Ray, a computer expert who has been working on Y2K for three years. "We're looking at over 30 years worth of code that needs adjusting. It's insane to think we can correct it all in just a few years."

What's wrong with that?

I can hardly wait for the day the computers that keep the South Shore Savings Bank accounts up-to-date come crashing down at 12:01 a.m. on New Year's Day, wiping out all recollection of my mortgage and sending the bankers to me for my cooperation.

"About that mortgage . . " the bank will say apologetically."

"What mortgage," I'll say.

Of course, by then the South Shore Savings Bank may have merged with the Fleet Bank of Boston, the First National Bank of Roswell, N.M. and Lloyds of London and I'll probably be dealing with Alan Greenspan himself.

But I digress . . .

I'm also looking forward to the day when the computer that rides herd on prices at the Stop and Shop tells the cash register that the London broil steak I just bought is really 12 cents a pound, like Jan. 1, 1900, instead of $1.68, like our coming '00.

Of course, when '99 turns to '00, nothing good (like peace on earth) and nothing bad (like the end of the world), just nothing at all, is likely to happen. In fact, it may not be the start of a new millennium at all.

Why does the Christian West pay so much attention to the year 2000 A.D? A.D. stands for Anno Domini (the Year of Our Lord). Best evidence from ancient historians is that Our Lord was born in 4 B.C., so the millennium passed unnoticed four years ago.

And is Jan. 1, 2000 really the end of one millennium and the start of another? There are those who maintain stoutly that the second millennium will end Jan. 1, 2001, the actual tenth year of the decade since there was no Year 0 A.D.

And what of the Jews to whom Jan. 1, 2000, is just another shopping day in the year 5759? Or 1421 on the Muslim calendar?

What will happen when their millennia arrive 241 and 579 years hence?

Will their computers go bonkers on Y6K and Y2K, too?

Prospects improving for Norfolk County Landbank

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset wants open space. But funding open space is not one of the town's highest priorities because of recent budget shortfalls that culminated in a $380,000 override last month. The Norfolk County Commissioners may be coming to the rescue. The Norfolk County Advisory Board issued a memo on June 15, writing that state officials believe 1999 is the year to pass a number of landbank initiatives.

Open space supporters should wait before cracking open the champagne bottles and celebrating. The Norfolk County Advisory Board is wary of a plan being pushed by State lawmakers that would allow local cities and towns to create new taxes for land preservation. The Norfolk County Advisory Board favors a plan that would divert existing county deed excise taxes from the state general fund to local landbank accounts. The county excise diversion plan would divert $62 million to the 28 cities and towns of Norfolk County.

Cohasset is one of many towns in the state struggling to preserve open space. Communities throughout the state are alarmed at the rate of development and the loss of forests, meadows and virgin land. But land acquisition is expensive.

"The town of Cohasset supports the county plan only because it gives us the ability in tight times to use an available fund to purchase ever disappearing land," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "We really don't have any money for open space right now, and the taxpayers are getting tired of new taxes, as we saw during the last override election."

The state's plan would allow cities and towns to create either a one percent tax on all real estate purchases, a three percent property tax surcharge on property transfers, or some combination of the two ideas. The first $100,000 of the property's value would be exempt from any landbank tax under the state plan. Towns would have to approve any of the state's new tax proposals with a local referendum. The Norfolk County Advisory Board said the state plan is flawed.

"If the Legislature's only option for open space funding is to mean a referendum two pick one of these two new taxes, most cities and towns will be politically locked out from such funding," the advisory board wrote in its memo.

The advisory board points out that state officials are talking about ways to cut state taxes, yet they want cities and towns to create new taxes for land banks.

"In the context of a budget debate touting much larger permanent cuts in state taxes, should the only option for cities and towns be new taxes?" the memo asks.

The state bill is not without its detractors on Beacon Hill. Real estate lobbyists oppose the one percent land transfer tax provision. Governor Paul Cellucci has vowed to veto the landbank legislation if it contains the land transfer tax provision.

Previously, the board of selectmen unanimously supported the Norfolk County plan in a letter to the advisory board.

"The proposal to use existing county receipts generated from the transfer of land is innovative and appropriate, and the proposed distribution of 90 percent of the state's share of these funds to the cities and towns that generate the land tax revenue is in the board's review, extremely appropriate and fair."

If the Norfolk County plan had been enacted in the current fiscal year, Cohasset would have received as much as $200,000, the amount the state projects it will collect in deeds excise fees from real estate transactions in town.

Cohasset is fortunate because it already has so many wide-open areas like Wompatuck State Park and Whitney Thayer woods. Approximately one-third of Cohasset is open space. But local officials are alarmed at the rate of real estate development and the potential loss of large tracts of untouched land.

Currently, the state offers a program of matching funds for open space purchases, but towns must come up with the money first and wait for a state reimbursement. There also is a limit on how much each town can receive in matching funds.

The state tax the Norfolk County plan seeks to divert is a 2.28 percent per $1,000 deeds excise tax on all real estate transactions. The excise is paid to the Registry of Deeds and transferred to the state general fund. The state has collected more than $62 million in deeds excise fees in the current fiscal year. Norfolk County also imposes an additional 2.28 percent per $1,000 deeds excise on real estate transfers. The county excise pays for the county prison system and a few other programs.

Under the Norfolk County plan, each community would receive back 90 percent of the money collected annually as deeds excise taxes on real estate sales within its borders. The remaining 10 percent would support first-time home buyers programs.

If the Norfolk County plan had been enacted in the current fiscal year, Cohasset would have received as much as $200,000, the amount the state projects it will collect in deeds excise fees from real estate transactions in town. The Norfolk County plan would give towns back an amount at least equal to their annual county taxes. Cohasset paid $67,500 in county taxes in fiscal year 1998.

Patriotic music on the Fourth

The second program in the 75th Anniversary Series of Summer Carillon Recitals at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, will be given Sunday evening, July 4, by Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur of St. Stephen's. Miss Warner will play American patriotic music of three centuries, as well as "Parade on Fifth Avenue," an original carillon composition by the church's first carillonneur, Kamiel Lefevere.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. Listeners are encouraged to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnics. In case of rain, the carillon may be heard from parked cars. Printed programs, concert schedules and descriptive brochures will be available, both in a stand near the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, and will also be handed out on the Common and at other listening locations listed on the back of the program. Following the recital, a tour of the tower and demonstration of the carillon will be offered for those interested in climbing the 45 steps to the instrument.

Ilene Colwill headed to Texas after 15 years

Osgood honors beloved secretary

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Gifts and hugs from well-wishers abounded at the Osgood school on Monday as students, staff, and parents threw a surprise going-away party for longtime secretary Ilene Colwill, who is moving to Texas at the end of the year.

"She is going to be missed so much," said Lucia Flibotte, an Osgood PSO representative and mother of three students at the school.

"I'll tell you a story about Ilene. When my first child, Mark went to Osgood for his first day, she knew his name and my name by the very next day. She remembers every child's name, every parent's name, and she knows if the kids are sick or if something is going on with them. Parents just adore her."

"She even knows the parents' cars," said fellow PSO representative Diane Shipp. "I don't know how the school is going to run without her."

Colwill's husband, Bill, said his wife's ability to remember all of the students and parents she has known over the years has made her a popular figure around town.

"I can't even go grocery shopping with her," he laughed. "I'll take my half of the list and be done and she'll still be where she started because so many of the students and parents she's known over the years will come up to talk to her. She always knows them all by name, too. Her ability to remember all of those names and faces is amazing."

"I don't know how the school is going to run without her."
— Diane Shipp of the PSO

Colwill's years at Osgood spanned changes in technology as well as this year's move to the new Osgood school, and she reminisced about the changes that have taken place.

"I started 15 years ago on December 2, which I remember because it was my twin daughters' birthday, and they were both in the first grade and I had to bring in 48 cupcakes that day," she said.

"We only had a typewriter and we had rotary dial phones. To ring the bells at the end of the day, we had to hold two wires together. Computers hadn't come in yet."

She said that being a part of building the new Osgood school was gratifying.

"I'm very glad I got to see the new school. I'm pleased and proud that I was a part of it."

Colwill had a prior career working as an executive secretary for Del Monte Foods, but resigned from that job because she wanted to be there for her children.

"I took a year off, but I didn't want to be a stay at home mom. The secretary job at Osgood had perfect hours and so I took it.

"My principal at the time, Jack Creamer, said I'd never last. I took a pay cut from $29,000 to $15,000. He said I was overqualified."

Colwill said she stayed at Osgood for such a long time because of the wonderful relationships she has established.

"I love the interactions with the children and the parents. I'd say I feel almost territorial about this school and am very protective of it."

She said the outpouring of gratitude for her years of caring service to Osgood was well appreciated.

"I'm overwhelmed," she said. "It's been a great 15 years. Walking out of that school was one of the toughest single things I've ever had to do. I've just loved it."

Legion shoots for playoffs

By Lou Molinari
CORRESPONDENT

With eight games to go heading into this week, the Cohasset-Scituate Legion baseball team needed just three wins to make the playoffs.

Should the team make the playoffs, it would be the first time in the four-year existence of the team coached by Scott Arnold, who brought the team back from non-existence.

As a result of winning two out of five games last week, Coach Arnold's team entered the week with a 7-5 record.

Eight games remain on the regular season schedule.

The team will wrap up early this week with games on Monday, Quincy Post 95; Tuesday, West Roxbury; and Wednesday, Braintree. Then it's time out for the long Fourth of July celebration.

Following the Monday holiday, Cohasset-Scituate will then play four games in a row, starting with Randolph, then Canton, Weymouth and Milton. The final game of the season will be against Milton on July 13.

Arnold would like to go into the big weekend with the playoff spot secured.

"I think we have a good chance at winning all three this week," said the coach at the start of the week. "If not, we still have five games remaining, and it looks very good for the team."

"It was a so-so week last week, winning two out of the five. However, the kids did look good, they just came up against some tough pitching."

Cohasset-Scituate started the week off on fire, beating Canton and then Morrisette.

The team suddenly went stone cold, bowing to Morrisette, Milton and Braintree.

Even with the 2-3 week record, coach Arnold was very optimistic about making the playoffs.

"There's nine teams in our zone, and five will make the playoffs. I'm pretty sure we will be one of the five."

One of the victories was pitched by Scituate's Tom Fitzgerald, at 15, the youngest player on the club.

"He just did an outstanding job for us," said the coach. "He went the whole route against a strong Morrisette team and got us the win."

For the Boston College High student, it was his second win of the season.

"We knew from the start Tom was going to be something special to the team, and he certainly is showing that," said the coach.

Arnold was very high in his praise of veteran Mike Conroy. "He's been coming through with a lot of of-

The Crusaders Soccer Club captured the Boys Under 16 1999 State Cup at Springfield. The team is coached by Silver Lake athletic director-boys soccer coach Bill Johnson and his assistant coaches, Joe Corcoran and Tom Fleming, both of Marshfield. The players on the team include Marshfield's Eben Gunnarson, Brian Johnson, Aaron Kleinerman, Chris Corcoran, T.J. Fleming, Jarod Warsofsky, Nick Call and Justin Evans, Norwell's Jarrod Anderson, Chris Camerotta, Kyle Isola, Cohasset's Mickey Palone and Erik Shea, Duxbury's Joe Crowley, Pembroke's Nick Ryan and Joe Zugale, Milton's Michael Kennedy and Middleboro's Josh Smith. Kleinerman received the goaltenders' award, while Chris Corcoran won the MVP award. The team will be competing in the Region I USYSA Tournament in Rhode Island over the July 4 weekend.

Soccer squad sets sights on regionals

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

Bill Johnson knows what it takes to build a winning soccer team.

He built the Silver Lake boys soccer program to where they have become not only one of the Old Colony league's top programs, but in the state's as well.

Johnson along with assistant coaches was Joe Cochrane and Tom Fleming of Marshfield has built a boys under-16 soccer team, the Crusaders Soccer Club, into a Division One Premier State Championship team. The Crusaders who won the MAPLE League with a 6-1 record defeated Club Crew, or better known as the Charles River United, 4-0 to win the state title with Marshfield's Chris Corcoran leading the way with two goals and two assists in the victory. They now advanced to the 16-team Eastern Regionals that will be held at the University of Rhode Island on the July 4th weekend, and if they can win that they will have a chance to play for a national title.

"We started this team as a Marshfield team with most of these players when they were 11 years old," said Johnson. "We moved into the Division I Premier team league when they were 13."

The team which is made up of eight Marshfield players, three from Norwell, two from Silver Lake and one each from Duxbury, Middleboro, Milton Academy and Noble & Greenough has grown step by step over the past four years into a state titlist. At 13 they made it to the quarterfinals then to the semi-finals at 14, losing in the state finals at 15 and winning everything at 16.

"This was a plan," said Johnson. "We have developed this team, and these are players that have trained hard and play soccer year round because they want the chance to play for a college scholarship."

> "We have developed this team, and these are players that have trained hard and play soccer year round because they want the chance to play for a college scholarship."
> COACH BILL JOHNSON

"We have traveled in March to a tournament in Richmond, Va. and played in a tournament in Columbia, Md. A few of our players played in a tournament and over the Christmas holiday in Florida."

The players come from strong high school programs. Corcoran, Brian Johnson and Nick Call were all starters on the Marshfield Division I 23-0 state championship team last fall. Goalkeeper Aaron Klinerman was the backup netminder on the Marshfield team while Justin Evans, T.J. Fleming and Evan Gunnerson were reserve players on the team.

Three players come from a very strong Norwell High team midfielder Kyle Isola, forward Jared Anderson and Chris Camarota. Cohasset's Mickey Palone and Erik Shea are on the team. Nick Ryan and Joe Zugale played for Johnson at Silver Lake, Joe Crowley played at Duxbury, Josh Smith at Middleboro, Mike Kennedy at Milton Academy, Mickey Palone whose grandfather was the coach at West Point played at Noble & Greenough and Jared Warsofsky who is from Marshfield played at Xaverian.

What is amazing is that this team comes from a 10-mile radius. In the Eastern Regional where they have drawn a very tough bracket they will play clubs that come from an 80-120 mile radius.

Their draw for the regional bracket where they will play three games will consist of Virginia, a strong Western Pennsylvania team and New Jersey. They will need to win at least two to have a chance to advance on to the semi-finals, and their coach believes his team is quite capable of accomplishing the feat.

"We are going to practice hard during the week, and we think that we can win two of those games," said Johnson. "Team defense is the key. It will be our ability to stop the other team. At this level you will be involved in better games where the scores will be 1-1 or 2-1."

Johnson feels with a strong goalkeeper like Klinerman along with a defender like Call and the offensive abilities of Corcoran and Johnson he has the strength down the middle to compete with anybody.

The coach also knows a little bit about the competition he will be facing in the regionals having seen some of the teams compete in tournaments that his team has played in.

Hingham 4th Road Race very runner friendly

So just what's so great about the Hingham 4th of July Road Race?

How about the fact the people who actually organize and pull off the huge undertaking, year after year, get it.

TRACKSIDE

JOE REARDON

You have to know something about runners who race regularly on the roads through the year. It's tough to pull one over on them.

No mile markers? Sorry, won't be back next year. Where can a runner find a cup of water on this course? I think I'll pass next year.

The Hingham race is about as old as a certain marathon in Western Mass. A marathon, 26 miles. There are plenty of avenues you have to cover to put on a successful marathon, more so than a local 4.7-miler, albeit, a big 4.7-miler. This marathon has been run for 35 years.

Guess what? Jill Drohan and her volunteers win hands down in putting a race together and making it an event runners plan their Independence Day holiday around.

There are no shortages of water along the course and the computerized finish enables runners to have their results within minutes of finishing.

I went with a friend of mine to the marathon two years ago to root him on along the course. Things started well enough for him, but a lack of water along the course did him in. He gamely hung on to set a personal best, despite not having a sip of water between miles 17 and 22.

It's not that my buddy wasn't thirsty. He was. The problem was, during a crucial section of the race when your body is truly feeling the effects of the distance, there were no water stations. None. And he wasn't the only runner to be slowed by the absence of any liquids.

The finish was another joke. The runners head up a gradual incline the final half-mile of the race. The only sign that the finish was anywhere near was that there were more people on the side of the road than out on the course.

He was directed to the left-hand side of the road and crossed over a 6-foot long piece of electrical tape on the street. A volunteer with a stopwatch yelled his time as he crossed the line in 4:34:32.

There was no finish chute and, completely exhausted, he spent the next two minutes helping a volunteer peel the sweat-soaked label with his name and division from the bottom of his race number. She then attempted to stick the label on a results chart hanging from a car on the side of the road.

The Hingham finish line screams at you over the final 200 yards that it's time to put the speed from those track workouts into action. The American flag draped across Main Street becomes the runners' focal point as they switch to sprint mode. They're led through chutes by volunteers, many of whom are summer workers for the recreation department, who do a great job, by any standard.

But you don't have to tell the runners who've competed in the Hingham 4th of July Road Race this. They already know. You don't get an expected field of over 1,500 runners to race a poorly organized event. Not at 7 a.m. Not on a holiday. Not any time.

Here's to Jill Drohan and the volunteers for a premature job well done.

Here's a "pet" peeve that drives me nuts every time I cover or run a road race. I can't understand for the life of me why runners insist on having their dogs bouncing alongside them in a race. Bring the mutts to a dog show if you want to impress people with their shiny coats.

Do these people actually have a clue on what's going on around them? It's a nuisance trying to pass someone when his dog is attached to a leash long enough for it to maneuver comfortably in any direction.

I'd have to guess these are the same people who treat their pets like children, or yikes, spouses. Keep the dogs at home for the good of the other runners.

And as for the rollerbladers—how about trading in the wheels for a day and actually run the race. These bothersome creeps get a kick weaving in and out of runners as they join the race. What is even more troublesome is that these roller dopes are, for the most part, tolerated at races by the officials. Expect a few questions from yours truly on Sunday for a sidebar story on people who belong somewhere else than in a race for runners. That goes for you too, dog lovers.

THE ONE THAT DIDN'T GET AWAY

It was a big fishing day for the Kucinski family and friends on May 23. Ryan Kucinski, right, 10, and his friend, Joshua Stuart Shor, 14, of Rosindale, bagged some keepers of 34 and 33 inches, while fishing in Cape Cod Bay. Ryan's dad, Hank, also caught a 32-inch fish, while celebrating his birthday.

fense for us. He's been hitting the ball strong. We have also been getting some good offense from Greg Taylor, who has been hitting the ball very well," said the coach.

And then of course, there's Alex Schwerin of Cohasset, the third baseman, who has been with the team since it started four years ago.

"Alex just gives us a very steady player on defense. He was just outstanding all week long," said the coach.

If there's one team coach Arnold would like to see his team win against, it's West Roxbury. The coach declared, "The last time we played them it was at West Roxbury, and we had trouble seeing the ball," he said.

"We hope we can even the score when the game is played on our home field this week."

Several of the teams Cohasset-Scituate is scheduled to play over the remainder of the season have yet to win a ball game.

As for the playoffs, they will get underway as soon as the final games of the regular season are completed. According to coach Arnold, the playoffs will start on the very next day.

Supporting local talent

Musicians are invited to participate in summer services at St. Nicholas United Methodist Church in Hull Village. Every week throughout July and August, students will be the featured soloists in an ongoing effort by the church to support local talent. All ages are welcome to participate. The music director, Joan Jensen, would like to see instrumentalists and/or vocalists perform, and is willing to rehearse with the students if necessary. Groups are also welcome. Previous participants have been a 7-year-old pianist, high school vocalists and a string quartet.

To arrange an interview and make a date to perform, parents or students may call Joan Jensen at (781) 383-2240.

OBITUARIES

Josephine M. Willwerth

Josephine M. Willwerth

Josephine "Jo" (Mikolitch) Willwerth was born and spent her youth in Barre, Va. Born of Austrian immigrants, they homesteaded in Barre, and father Joseph worked at the Rock of Ages Granite Quarry. She was one of the most popular and voted most likely to succeed at Spaulding High's graduation in 1939.

Mrs. Willwerth met Lawrence Willwerth in Conway, N.H. while working in the summer resort. Love at first sight, the two married and have celebrated 75 years together. They successfully juggled a busy corporate life and the raising of three children, Lawrence III, Joan Lee, and Jean Marie.

The enterprising couple operated numerous successful businesses, and Mrs. Willwerth was co-owner and chief financial officer of the Somerville-Willwerth Funeral Home, A&A Limousine Renting/Carey of Boston, a property management firm, and an auto repair garage. "Mrs. W," as she was affectionately referred to by employees, was an executive long before the corporate world opened itself to women.

Since 1924, A&A Limousine was successful as a family business spanning three generations. The Willwerth family were system members of Carey Limousine since its creation in the 1970's. They were instrumental in the effective building of the Carey Boston service company as part of the 420 city network of chauffeur-driven services. A&A was sold to Carey International in 1998. Don Dailey, president of Carey International, commented, "Mrs. Willwerth was one of the most active, creative and supportive members of the Carey System. She will be missed by all of us.

Mrs. Willwerth was also active in civic service, past treasurer of St. Theresa's (Catherine's) PTO, past president of Somerville Hospital Ladies Aid Association, and an active participant in her children's interests and talents. She along with Mr. Willwerth moved to Cohasset in 1971 and in the winters enjoyed a home in St. Croix, Virgin Islands.

All who knew her remarked of Mrs. Willwerth's unparalleled energy, goodness, and strength. Her family invites all friends to a memorial service to be celebrated at St. Catherine's Church, 179 Summer St., Somerville at 10 a.m. on Sunday, July 18.

Dennis E. Mulligan Sr.

Dennis E. Mulligan Sr.

Dennis E. Mulligan Sr., 59, of Cohasset died on June 24 in St. Elizabeth Medical Center of Boston, Brighton, following an extended illness.

He was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., the son of Edward and Ruth (Martin). He was a graduate of Villanova University, class of 1961. Upon completion of college, Mr. Mulligan was a public accountant, affiliated with the New York firm of Haskins & Sells, practicing there for five years.

Later, Mr. Mulligan joined the Hearst Corporation, joining the Albany Times in 1966 and remaining there until 1975. He became associated with The Boston Herald in 1975 and held the position of controller and general manager until 1983.

Prior to his illness-related retirement in 1985, Mr. Mulligan was the vice-president of El Mundo Newspapers in Puerto Rico.

He leaves his wife, Deanna L. (Thelen) Mulligan; two sons, Donald, Dennis Jr. and Daniel all of Cohasset; a brother, Don Mulligan of Long Island, N.Y. He was pre-deceased by a son, Douglas.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial contributions may be made to St. Anthony Parish Building Fund, 129 South Main St., Cohasset 02025.

Putting Cohasset scenes on canvas

Art center program uses the great outdoors

By Lauryn Mittleman
CORRESPONDENT

What could be more representative of the season than an artist at work by the seashore? Poised on a hilltop, hand executing meticulous strokes, pausing to judiciously capture the moment . . .

A soothing vision, isn't it? Arguably summer in a snapshot.

Now multiple the image times 12.

Erecting easels before pools of Koi and water lilies, salt marshes and coastline, for two sun-drenched days one dozen artists from Boston and beyond converged on Cohasset to interpret what art nature has already given its residents.

A total of ten students, accompanied by two teachers, embarked upon this two-day mission, drawing from Boston and beyond. In the elements they painted the elements, setting out in early morning light and not calling it quits until late afternoon.

Student painter Elasah Schaff ventured all the way from Pelham, New York to accept the assignment, saying she would never forgo and opportunity to paint "en plein air."

"I've always loved painting outdoors," explained Schaff. "And this provided both a new challenge as well as help for my painting. I also wanted to see Massachusetts on the water, and to visit the South Shore Art Center."

Co-sponsored by the SSAC, in conjunction with the Massachusetts College of Art, the pilot workshop involved individual instruction and demonstration held "on location" at the picturesque properties of several SSAC members and supporters. Participating students selected from two seminars—one dedicated to nature drawing and monotypes, and the other to landscape painting.

"I've always loved painting outdoors. And this provided both a new challenge as well as help for my painting. I also wanted to see Massachusetts on the water, and to visit the South Shore Art Center."
— student painter Elasah Schaff

At the direction of instructor Ed Stitt, recipient of an M.F.A. from Mass. College of Art, student painters spent both Saturday and Sunday mornings absorbing the technique of their teacher. Schooled in composition, focal point and texture—their "classroom" overlooking Little Harbor, in the latter part of the day it was off to see what the pupils could do, working their own magic on canvas.

Meanwhile, in the drawing group, students of Mass. Art instructor Irene Valincius sketched in the field for the first portion of each day, before returning to the art center to utilize the SSAC's print presses.

"I've never been here before," offered the nationally exhibiting Valincius back at the center. "The thing about Cohasset is it's just so beautiful. I didn't realize how much it had to offer, from the rocky landscape to the ponds and so on . . ."

Currently residing in Somerville, Valincius commented she wasn't exactly anxious to return home again when the weekend concluded. Valincius said she relished the opportunity of being surrounded by nature and, before dashing off to avoid Sunday night traffic, expressed she wondered if someone in town could "adopt her" instead.

"The only thing wildlife we have in Somerville are pigeons," laughed Valincius. "We don't even have any squirrels!"

While the seminar's description in the art center's catalog warned visiting artists of the possibility of inclement weather, the weekend couldn't have offered more light. If anything, perhaps, the sun shone too strong.

But then again, on the dog days of summer, where else would one rather be than by the sea?

"It wasn't so bad at all," said Schaff of the heat-wave. "Everywhere we went there was shade and a breeze. Being by the water was very refreshing."

"We were incredibly lucky it was sunny," added SSAC Coordinator of Community Programs Heather Collins. "For the coast we couldn't have asked for better weather. This weekend really showed off what we had to offer."

And while technically the two days were set aside for work/study, students were also afforded the opportunity to taste some local flavor. Upon arrival, SSAC organizers presented the group with listings of area restaurants, museums, nature trails and other points of interest. Several students said they enjoyed the area and wealth of "extra-curricular" activities so much, they opted at the last minute to spend the night Saturday. At the direction of workshop organizers, their artists' retreat was made complete by a visit to a local B&B.

With a slide presentation conducted by Valincius Saturday evening, the sweet summer weekend concluded with a Sunday critique and reception. There, all involved shared and discussed finished projects.

"It was intriguing to see how the scenes all came out so differently," said coordinator Collins. "And they were all composed from the same spot! It was also nice to see the artists coming together, and asking each other how they did this or that."

"I thought [the paintings] all came out really good," added Collins' 11-year-old daughter Hilary. "It wasn't exactly how the [scene] looked — they kind of put their imagination into it."

In the end the weekend was dubbed so successful, coordinator Collins says now she would only like to see such programming repeated.

"I think it all came together fabulously," said Collins at weekend's close. "The hosts were so hospitable and kind to open their homes, and I think it's a wonderful way of showing the wealth of our town to those who have never been before."

Collins reported being surprised, in fact, at how many of the weekend's pupils had never visited the area before — all the while living so close in proximity. Collins says she hopes by this time next year a greater number of workshops will be scheduled, for already the commitment from Mass. College of Art is in place. Ideally, Collins would also like to see the addition of longer, week-spanning seminars, whereby both campus' students can take advantage of both city and suburban environments.

"In the future we would like to build an ongoing summer institute on the seacoast," explains Collins, "using our beautiful town to attract from all over. I think it would be great for the art center, and would bring new opportunities to our students and members. We're so close to Boston, and we could use Cohasset at some of its most beautiful time of year. We want to bring artists to our haven."

"It's been so great to be with other artists," agreed Schaff. "We need to encourage and inspire one another."

Already scheduled —a similar three-day, "al fresco" weekend to be held in October—in prime time for autumn color. What's additionally special about this workshop, offers Collins, is that Mass. Art students will be able to accrue credit for the course.

But as for this past weekend,

"It's been just gorgeous," summed up Schaff on Sunday, as new friends packed up their things. "It's been a real treat to pair the outdoors with instructors that are so masterful. Now I just have to take it all home and apply it in my own studio."

Mass. Art teacher Ed Stitt paints a Cohasset scene.

Student, Elasah Schaff, paints on location in a seaside home in Cohasset.

Paint The Town Plein-air

The Christopher Gallery presents "Paint The Town Plein-air" at World's End in Hingham. Plein-air is a term used to describe paintings that are done outdoors. The public is invited to watch several New England artists paint the beautiful landscape Saturday, July 17, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is an admission fee of $4 per person to enter the park. The event will continue into Saturday evening at The Christopher Gallery, located on Route 3A in Cohasset, just a few short miles from World's End.

The public is invited to attend a casual dress, wine and cheese reception from 7 to 10 p.m. to view the artists' finished work and enjoy the gallery collection. All the paintings will be for sale and admission is free. A portion of the painting sales will be donated to The Trustees of Reservations. The show will be held from July 17 through Aug. 28.

The Christopher Gallery presents "Paint The Town Plein-Air" at World's End in Hingham July 17. Shown here is "East View from World's End" by Michael Graves.

LIBRARY CORNER

Friends hold annual meeting

The annual meeting of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and appreciation reception for the volunteers and staff was held Wednesday, June 16, at the home of Linda Wakeman, newly appointed Friends of the Library president. Betsey Detwiler, retiring president of the Friends' group for the past three years, expressed her appreciation working with the Cohasset organization, and hopes to continue a close relationship with the library.

At this time, the Friends and Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library would like to acknowledge and thank the volunteers and staff for their continued efforts and dedication to the library.

Thank you to the staff: Laurie Anthony, Susan Anthony, Amy Devlin, Shelly Donze, Janet Husband; library director, Mary Londergan (and volunteer), Bob Pattison, Michelle Poor, (who made this whole list possible), Susan Pope, Elizabeth Rankin, Suzanne Terry, Sue Watrous and Caren Wheelwright

And a big thank you goes out to all the volunteers; Cornelia Barnard, Gloria Boyce, Ann Costello, Carol Dean, Elizabeth Durant, Doris Flint, Genevieve Good, Katherine Gray, Elizabeth Hagan, Alice Hall, Mary Hartwell, Jean Higgins, June Hubbard (and trustee), Ozzie Ingram, Iku Isihara, Elizabeth Jordan, Elizabeth Karam, William Kelley, Susan Kent, Mary Leonard, Shirley Marten, Mary Mastromarino, Lucille McLoughlin, Sharon Moody, John Mullett, Deborah Niessink, Carol Riley (and trustee), Margaret Smart, Gertrude Waldfogel and Deidre Wilson.

Calling more volunteers!

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is seeking volunteers for all kinds of work: shelving, covering books, typing labels, "shelf-reading" and searching for books. A few volunteers working for an hour or two a week makes a big difference to the library.

Shelf-reading is a librarian term used for regular maintenance of orderly bookstacks. At the Paul Pratt Library, the book selection is heavily used and sometimes books are misshelved. Regular "shelf reading" is important to keep the library in good working order.

Other jobs that might appeal to a volunteer are typing labels and covering new books. It is always low key work that can be done sitting down with the added bonus of previewing new books that have been purchased by the library. Anyone who enjoys doing crafts, could learn the skill with some training.

If you are interested in joining the volunteer staff, please call the library at 383-1348 or come in and tell a librarian about the days you are available. We need you!

Corrections to the children's room programs

Mrs. Terry, children's librarian, announces a few additions and changes to the children's summer programs.

The "Puzzle Club," headed by Deer Hill school librarian, begins Monday, July 12, from 7 to 8:45 p.m. for children entering grades 3-5 at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The previously scheduled story hour and crafts programs for Tuesdays have been changed to Thursdays, beginning July 15 and continuing to July 22, 29 and Aug. 5.

The story hour for ages 3-5 with a simple craft after will meet Thursday at 10 a.m. The craft program for children entering grades 3-5 will meet Thursday afternoons at 1 p.m. Materials will be supplied and there is no charge for the program.

For more information or to register, call the library at 383-1348.

A TASTE OF GREECE IN COHASSET

ANNUAL TAVERNA DOESN'T DISAPPOINT

By Lauryn Mittleman
CORRESPONDENT

With its festive and far-reaching signs and fliers, for months the Nativity of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church's "Taverna '99 — A Taste of Greece" has been promising to offer as much fun and fresh air as a real trip to the old country. Now the question is, did attendees get what they came for?

Held this past weekend on the church's well-groomed, Jerusalem Road grounds, the three-day cultural fair kicked off Friday, and, judging from crowd comments, did indeed keep on giving guests what they wanted through Sunday.

"It's definitely as big as we said it would be!," exclaimed event chairman Greg Bukuras Saturday evening, as he worked hard feeding the masses. "We are definitely pleased with the turnout, and everyone seems to be having fun eating and dancing."

"This is definitely the biggest turnout ever," added follow organizer Mark Casper. "I guess the new weekend is a hit!"

While on-street parking for the event at times required a little creativity, on the whole, "It's been very busy but very orderly," said Cohasset Police Officer Rick Grassie outside the festival's entrance. Even as the sun sank and the dinner hour passed Saturday evening cars were still pulling up by the dozens.

Those who have known and loved "Taverna" for years didn't seem phased by one fairly significant change this year. While the anticipated event used to take place Fourth of July weekend, this year the festival was whisked to the weekend before. Event organizers explained the former weekend was simply too hectic a time for volunteering congregation members who for years relinquished their holiday to lend a hand.

Celebrating it's 19th anniversary this year, "Taverna" has always prided itself as an event gathering together both Greeks and non from all over the area.

In the Greek language the word "Taverna" means outdoor cafe, the weekend's visitors learned. They are places where native countrymen pass many a carefree hour relaxing, philosophizing or just tapping their feet to the music in the air. Visiting Greece one finds countless such "tavernas," and those who have been say they are to be relished for the serenity they offer.

But while not exactly serene, this weekend's Taverna — with its free admission and 9 p.m., post-beach curfew, served as an attractive and affordable pleasure cruise for those not planning a trip to the isles anytime soon.

"Cohasset's a lot closer," explained Dorchester resident Michael Flanagan. "And this is a trip I can take every year."

"We've never been before and we heard the music so we thought we'd try it," said Hull resident Suzette Allen. "It's the perfect night for it."

While congregation members recall their "Taverna" as originally modest (and put together "on a wing and a prayer" says Father John Maheras.), this year an uncountable number trekked to Cohasset for a helping of what Panagia served. And if it was homesickness for the old country which prompted their visit, "Taverna" was what the doctor ordered.

No average church fair, while "Taverna '99"'s lineup did include summer-fest staples such as raffles, burgers and much-needed children's kiddy-pools,

"It's not simply a carnival," reminded Maheras.

"Everything we do here is cultural," added Bukuras. "From the booths selling trinkets and knick-knacks, to the food, it's all authentic and from Greece."

A true ethnic festival, both Panagia's children and adult dance troupes entertained in traditional dress, and occasionally with sword in hand, while congregation choreographer Marion Pappas provided lessons in "zembekiko," and other panhellenic dances.

"Zembekiko involves two people and is very slow and soulful," explained Pappas. "It expresses Greek spirit and passion. You see it everywhere, at every celebration."

Arms raised above heads, many fair-goers seeking refuge from the sun's rays followed suite, taking to the dance floor themselves. There, linked together, dancers moved to the music, as throughout the weekend a variety of Greek musical acts catered to the hand-clapping audience.

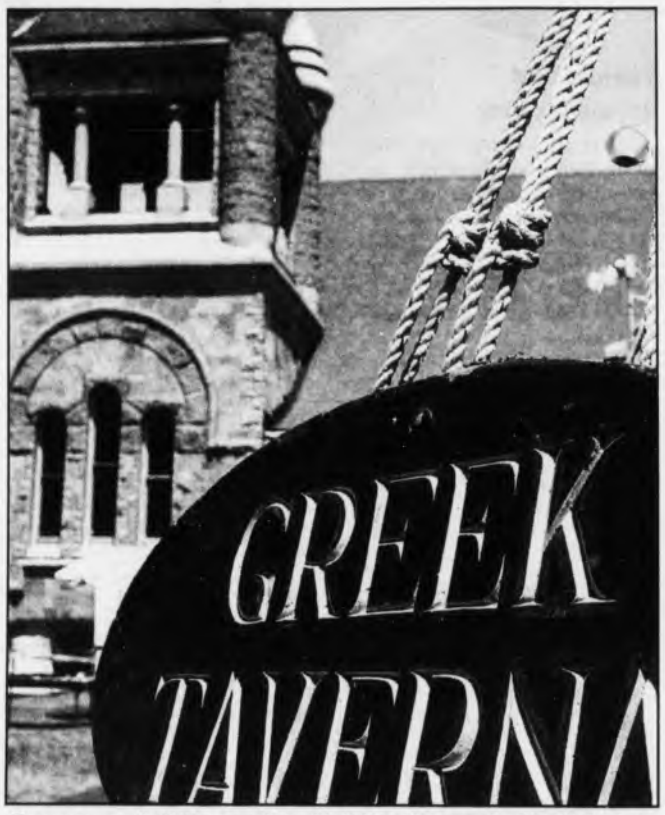
Later, after a quick cooling leap through the sprinklers, youngsters set out to the children's' tent. Then it was time for some shopping.

"I like all the fancy stuff here," offered seven-year-old Mia CaraDonna of Pembroke. "Like the jewelry and the clothes."

Also available at the marketplace were imported charms of glittering gold, Grecian cookbooks, and caps embroidered with Olympic rings and "Athens 2004." And if it were religious "icons" one sought, one needed only pick from either magnet, T shirt, or even "icon" night-light.

But while admiring the many wares, CaraDonna and other children also walked away with a few lessons in tradition. Young Mia learned about "worry beads" from grandmother (Yaya) Joan CaraDonna, who explained in Greece men and women bring the beads to the tavernas to calm nerves and ease away troubles.

Overhearing the explanation, "I love this event," commented merchant Margo Outchcunis of Foxburo.



The name says it all. The annual event is held on the grounds of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary Church.

"There are very special people here."

One of those special people—Taverna's "Star" Helen Panisis, returned for this her 17th year to run the fair's raffle. The spunky eighty-something congregation member is a favorite of the fair's regulars, and always a pleasure.

One new face to meet this year was Los Angelos author and Greek resident Willard Manus. Manus signed copies of his recent work titled "This Way To Paradise—Dancing on the Tables,"— a memoir of his days in the country. Attending festivals up and down the east coast, the author said "Taverna" certainly competes with the best of them, having nothing but praise for the church, and Cohasset.

"There's a nice communal atmosphere," said Manus. "And this place is very beautiful. I've never spent time here before. It's been very pleasant."

But moving on to what most admitted was the main event . . .

"I came to eat!," admitted 10-year-old visitor Laura Camedelli, also of Jerusalem Road.

Acknowledging no cultural fest is complete without food, "Taverna '99" offered much more than your basic gyro. Pound after pound of pilaf, piles of pita, and numerous other Grecian delicacies were prepared ahead of time and with love by congregation members. Taverna volunteers dashed back and forth to the Parish House's kitchen, returning with an arsenal of nourishment including "tray-fulls" of souvlaki, tubs full of salad, and bottle after bottle of dressing.

"During the height of the heat it was a little slow," said volunteer Anissa Zotos. "But it picked up. The lines might be a little long, but everyone's in a really great mood."

Served with a smile despite the rising temperatures, Mrs. Deinibas' grape leaves were among the biggest hits reported Zotos, with lamb kabobs coming in a close second. If anything, the at-times lengthy lines allowed hungry visitors a chance to better study the many menu offerings, and the general consensus was that in the end the goods were worth waiting for.

Buying in bulk was another popular activity this weekend. Festival-goers said the ready-made meals served as saviors during a weekend no one wanted to be in the kitchen. Credit card machines active, Taverna's cashiers reported $100 orders not uncommon.

Making the all-around good deal still sweeter, a 15 percent meal discount was offered to elder diners Friday. Panagia had sent out invitations ahead of time to local senior centers, inviting the older generation to come celebrate. From the looks of it, many elder South Shore residents took them up on the offer. Several old friends were sighted catching up and making merry over a bottle (or two) of Greek wine, along with plenty of hydrating water.

To top it all off, seemingly no one left the food tent without their baklava, judging from the many "to go" boxes, fair-goers couldn't seem to get enough of the sweet treat—the perfect ending to a sumptuous feast.

"People are eating the other food just to get to the baklava," offered volunteer Tom Zotos of Marshfield. "There eyes are definitely on dessert, and believe me it's the best in this country. It's made by some of the best people on Earth."

Finally, this year for the first time ever Taverna held true to its name with authentic Greek coffee poured pond-side in the beverage tent. But was any one drinking the steaming cups?

"Yes, sales are good," reported Hingham second-grader Nicholas Belezos. "There's a lot of money in here."

Those who skipped that post dinner coffee and grew tired from the excitement took shelter inside the glowing, hundred-year-old church building. Candles lit, it was the perfect place for rest and catch of breath.

"One comment I hear every year," offered Fr. Maheras, "is how much people enjoy sitting for a half hour or so in the church. It's very beautiful, very calming and soothing they say."

In the Greek language the word "Taverna" means outdoor cafe, the weekend's visitors learned. They are places where native countrymen pass many a carefree hour relaxing, philosophizing or just tapping their feet to the music in the air.

Open for tours again this year, debuting at "Taverna '99" were bright, hand-painted "icons" adorning the church's walls. The artwork, which Greek churches are known for, will ultimately come to fill the entirety of the church's interior.

Last but not least, this weekend of fun and education helped benefit a worthwhile cause. Proceeds raised from "Taverna '99" will help in part to fund both the addition of future "icons," as well as the congregation's vision for the future—a new Parish and Community Center.

"The community center will serve parishioners as well as the community at large," explains Maheras. "It will bring together the religious, cultural, educational, social and athletic instruction and activities so vital to our world today."

"The children of this congregation are very active and involved," added Joan CarraDonna of Hingham. "They're good kids—we need it for them and their future. The current building needs updating"

"I know I'm looking forward to it," chimed in teacher Pappas, who said she also speaks for on behalf of her 23 pupils. "There just isn't room in the current Parish center."

Construction on the new center is expected to begin by next year's "Taverna 2,000".

So in the end, after the leisurely weekend drive down scenic "Jerusalem," visitors did follow the fliers to Taverna, and recharged with some cuisine and culture. Polling the crowd, all seemed to walk away satisfied, and with the flavor of something new.

"We'd like to thank all the people who came and supported us," said Maheras late Saturday. "We thank them very much and it's been our joy and happiness to be able to host them."

"The volunteers have done a wonderful job," complimented CarraDonna finally. "There's been a lot of preparation, and we've put out a tremendous effort. But we've all in it together for the children."

Taverna patrons line up for some delicious Greek specialties.

76 donors at blood drive

The Cohasset Community Red Cross thanks the 76 donors who gave the gift of life at the recent bloodmobile held at the First Parish House, especially the following donors from Cohasset Middle/High schools: Jami Butman, Susana Candia, Megan Connolly, Alexandra D'Urso, Justin Maitland, Matthew Morde, Sergei Skorupa and Morgan Bigley, who donated blood in memory of their deceased schoolmate, Bourke Corcoran.

Also, many thanks to the volunteers who staffed the blooddrive, for their time and effort. The next Cohasset community blooddrive will take place in September.

CHS student Sergei Skorupa gives blood at the Red Cross Bloodmobile held at the First Parish House last week. Taking blood is technician Valerie Keogh.

Helping to fight the Hull fire

Cohasset responds along with other towns

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Dozens of firefighters from area towns helped douse a fast-moving fire in Hull that destroyed two homes and heavily damaged two more Tuesday afternoon as the mercury climbed to the mid-90s.

A triage station was set up not far from the scene to treat firefighters suffering from heat exhaustion incurred as they tried to save the Sunset Point neighborhood. Firefighters were rotated in and out of action due to the extremely hot conditions.

"Most every firefighter was treated in some manner of another due to the heat of the day," Cohasset Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

"It was a very difficult fire because of the weather conditions," he said. "But all worked together and did an excellent job to bring the fire under control."

Two Hull firefighters were seriously injured and were taken by MedFlight to Boston hospitals.

Scituate Fire Chief James Breen said his department responded with two captains and four firefighters. The Scituate crew — with the assistance of firefighters from Norwell and Cohasset — battled the flames burning on the building's left side. Two Scituate Firefighters remained on the scene until 7 a.m. Wednesday.

"We also had two firefighters on duty all night to secure the scene so the fire marshal's office could investigate the building," Breen said. "The Hull Firefighters were beat. They didn't have the resources to put guys there."

Deputy Fire Chief Mark Duff said the Hingham Fire Department was "very much involved" in battling the blaze.

The call came in for the four-alarm fire just after 2 p.m.

Duff said he and Chief William Johnson responded along with two Hingham engine companies, the ladder truck and ambulance.

"Two houses completely burned to the ground," he said. "And the two houses on either side suffered extensive damage."

Hingham firefighter John Ketchum was transported to South Shore Hospital where he was treated for heat exhaustion and released.

One of the injured Hull firefighters, John Clasby, may have come in contact with a downed electrical wire, the deputy chief in Hull said. One of the landing zones for MedFlight – where Clasby was taken — was the front lawn of the South Shore Country Club. The helicopter temporarily caused confusion among golfers and parents picking up their children at the swimming pool, according to an eyewitness. Clasby was listed in critical condition yesterday at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Lincoln said he responded along with a Cohasset pump engine and ambulance. Seven Cohasset call firefighters – two of whom were injured in the line of duty – also went to the scene.

Suffering from heat exhaustion, Cohasset call firefighter Tom McKay was treated and released from South Shore Hospital. Rich Bonanno, who lives in Scituate, suffered a split lip and several broken teeth when a hose coupling struck him in the face, Lincoln said.

Duff, the Hingham deputy chief, said Hull did an excellent job at the scene where the narrow roadway and congested area made it difficult to operate the engines. Wind gusts of 20-to-40 mph fanned the flames and the dry weather conditions contributed to the rapid spread of the fire. Smoke from the fire could be seen for quite a distance.

In addition to Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate, fire departments from several other towns including Norwell, Rockland, Hanover and Weymouth provided mutual aid at the scene.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

Plymouth County Control coordinated the mutual aid, which included sending ambulances from Pembroke and Hanover to cover the area.

"It was an unusual situation to have the whole area Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate drained of ambulances," Duff said. American Medical Response out of Weymouth and the two paramedic units at South Shore Hospital.

To complicate matters Hingham fire also had to fight a three-acre brush fire behind the Plymouth River School to deal with.

"It was quite a day," Duff said.

Greenbush project not derailed yet

Costs seen as a potential threat to creation of commuter line

By Carol Britton Meyer and Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITERS

Opponents of the Greenbush rail line had better not start celebrating just yet.

The restoration project is still "very much on the table" according to a state official, despite recent concerns aired by the governor about the commuter line's escalating costs. A third party is now being brought in to help the state determine exact project costs, believed to be topping the $350 million to $400 million mark, well over original expectations.

"We're going to have a third party do a cost analysis to see what the real cost of the project will be," said Jon Carlisle, spokesman for Secretary of Transportation Kevin Sullivan. "We have to look at ridership and how many cars will actually be taken off the road. It may come to the point where we're approaching diminishing returns."

Carlisle insisted the 17-mile project is still "very much on the table and we're still in that mindset."

Sullivan, like Governor Paul Cellucci, has expressed concerns in recent days about the growing costs of restoring the third line of the Old Colony Railroad which would provide commuter access to Boston from Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham. The other two lines of the railroad were up and running in September 1997.

During a press conference Tuesday, Cellucci, who has supported the project to date, said there are a number of factors which now have to be taken into consideration —

Storm wreaks havoc on water plant

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The thunder storms that swept through the area on Tuesday night caused widespread power outages in Cohasset and many other South Shore communities. Many local residents found themselves without power for extended periods in the sweltering heat. Although many people probably noticed the lack of electricity and air conditioning, no one could complain of a lack of water. Which is a miracle considering the near-catastrophe the storm caused at the water plant. The power outage wreaked havoc at the plant, causing 1 million gallons of water to flood into the building and submerge everything under a foot of dirty water. Water plant workers arrived at work at 6:30 a.m. unaware of the emergency and had to open all the plant doors to let the water rush out.

Water Commission Chairman John K. McNabb Jr. said a small miracle prevented residents from losing water for at least one day. For reasons unknown, residents used little water during the evening — possibly because of the storm —

Independence Building may become a residence

By Brian Brennan

Dilapidated and ramshackle, the current state of the Independence Building is a far cry from its proud, 150-year old history in Cohasset. Built in 1849, the building's new owners have decided to give the property a new lease on life and convert it into a single family residence for the first time in its history.

Located at 24 South Main St. and on part of the original Cohasset Common, the Independence Building had never been privately owned

Recycle oil filters, antifreeze and batteries

Used oil filters, antifreeze and batteries can be recycled by bringing them to the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility on Cedar Street..

"We have been successful in providing for the recycling of used oil filters, antifreeze and batteries by Cohasset residents," said Recycling Committee chairman Arthur Lehr. "We urge everyone to separate and recycle these items rather than throw them away."

In addition to these materials, Cohasset residents may also bring the following to the RTF for recycling: newspapers, white paper, junk mail, plastic bottles, aluminum, steel, cardboard, glass (separate by color), and cans (which should be cleaned out). Paint is accepted, but only on designated days. A fee is required for dropping off: tires, household appliances, household furniture and other miscellaneous bulky materials.

Greenbush project not derailed yet

specifically costs and environmental issues.

"We think it is the right transportation decision but as you know, there are significant environmental challenges to the Greenbush line," Cellucci said. "Already because of those challenges the cost has increased significantly and there are people who are pushing for a tunnel (under Hingham's historic district) and that would probably make the project cost prohibitive so we have to wait and see what the outcome of the environmental challenges are."

Cellucci was non-committal as to whether he thought those challenges would derail the project. "It depends on if in fact they add substantial costs," he said, deferring comment on what is too much.

"I don't have a number in mind, but it's something we're watching very closely. I've always been committed to it. I think it is the right transportation decision given the cost that was projected. But if, in fact, those costs increase significantly because of environmental challenges I think we have to take that into consideration. It could become prohibitive."

Transportation chief Sullivan expressed his concerns and observations about the project during a bus tour of the proposed line last Wednesday. (A community meeting was also held last week. See separate story.) Sullivan said he still backed the project but was seeking more input. Carlisle said Sullivan's aim is to clarify costs because he believes "it doesn't serve anyone to go forward with a project at whatever cost," Carlisle said.

Greenbush opponents have questioned the high price tag for years, particularly when the estimate climbed to $285 million.

Now, after more than a decade of review, Hingham's Greenbush Coordinator Alexander Macmillan is certain the ultimate cost will exceed $400 million. Macmillan said he believes this latest scrutiny may spell the end of the project.

"I've heard the MBTA is going to conduct its own independent financial review regarding the true cost of Greenbush today, including mitigation, increased cost of the proposed Scituate layover facility and installing four-quadrant gates at grade crossings as well as the possibility of taking Hingham Lumber Company by eminent domain," he said.

Macmillan calls the independent review long overdue.

"I suspect the study will say what (opponents) have been saying all along — that the cost of Greenbush is extraordinarily high and will cost substantially more than $285,000,000," he said. "There are real problems with the proposal, and that's why there has been so much opposition to Greenbush expressed by Hingham and other towns."

MBTA spokesman Brian Pedro said the governor's comments did not come as a surprise, but echo earlier statements made by Sullivan. Pedro said the MBTA budgeted $285 million to restore Greenbush, but concedes it could be more than that due to inflation and project delays. Another T source estimates the cost could be as high as $375 million. "No project ever gets cheaper over time. Adding time, adds costs."

Pedro noted that the on-going Army Corps of Engineers review of the project has not been a factor in the cost increase as no new mitigation measures have been identified.

At this point, the MBTA is still awaiting the Army Corps assessment on whether the at-grade commuter line restoration is the preferred transportation alternative for the corridor. Last week opponents suffered a setback when the secretary of environmental affairs informed the Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate boards of selectmen that their request for a new environmental review of the project, MEPA director Jay Wickersham found no reason to conduct another study.

Transportation Alternatives

Project opponents say despite their concerns about Greenbush, they are still concerned about viable transportation alternatives needed on the South Shore.

"If Greenbush is a 'no go,' we certainly don't want our opposition to (rail restoration) to be interpreted as opposition to transportation improvements," Macmillan said, which could include a multi-modal transportation system and improved water transportation.

"Those would cost a fraction of what Greenbush would cost and would go a long way in improving transportation options on the South Shore," Macmillan said.

Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth), isn't surprised Greenbush may be in jeopardy.

"I've felt the end coming for some months now," he said.

"We have to look at ridership and how many cars will actually be taken off the road. It may come to the point where we're approaching diminishing returns."

— Jon Carlisle, spokesman for Secretary of Transportation Kevin Sullivan

A number of factors contributed to his viewpoint, including the fact that, on the Senate side at least, there's been a recognition of, and more attention paid by the leadership to the issue of Greenbush.

"(Some legislators) may be feeling Greenbush doesn't make sense because of the opposition, problems involved and the cost," Hedlund said. "The escalating (price tag) on Big Dig and the fact that the MBTA is under tremendous pressure to reform for the first time since 1964 the way its activities are funded and financed is also a consideration."

Furthermore, Hedlund said, certain members of the MBTA management feel the money which would be funneled into Greenbush restoration would be better spent on other projects.

"There are a number of factors lined up working against Greenbush," he said. "I think the administration is looking for a way out, and cost will be the excuse."

Nancy Buckley, co-founder of the Coastal Coalition, a grass-roots organization founded to find more viable transportation alternatives to Greenbush, feels the administration has been formulating an exit strategy for the past five years.

"This latest development brings us one step closer to the final announcement (that Greenbush will be shelved)," she said. "They've recognized that 43 grade crossings in 17 miles would be too dangerous and that the route is an environmental disaster. But the biggest mystery is why the administration has been posturing for the past five years instead of developing more viable transportation alternatives."

Scituate Selectman Joseph Norton is taking a "wait and see" approach.

"If the project is halted, I credit Transportation Secretary Sullivan for coming down (to the South Shore) and listening," he said. "The more we've gotten into Greenbush, the more issues have (surfaced). The environmental studies will drive the price through the roof."

If the project is stopped in its tracks, Norton's only regret would be that it took so long to put an end to Greenbush.

"A number of people have had to put their lives on hold. Some who live in close proximity to the tracks have or haven't moved because they're concerned about whether or not they could sell their homes or get what they're worth," he said. "Better to stop it now than drag it on longer," he said.

On a Field Trip

MBTA officials, led by Sullivan, made an attempt at improved communication with residents of the Greenbush corridor by agreeing to last week's tour. Sullivan led a large entourage on a bus tour through Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham.

Carlisle, Sullivan's spokesman, said that the secretary had heard "quite a few" suggestions and he and other MBTA officials would look over their plans, keeping the suggestions which they heard in mind.

The tour began with a site visit to the proposed layover facility in Scituate, where the trains are to be stored overnight. A group of approximately 20 protestors had gathered at the site, many holding signs saying "Save our River", a reference to the layover site's close proximity to marshland leading into the North River.

"This was all water five years ago," North River Commission chairman James McCollum told Sullivan as he described the former marsh land they were standing on, which had only been filled with dirt two to three years ago. "The place where the MBTA is planning to put the trains is within 20 feet of the edge of the marsh. When a big storm comes, it will float oil on the site and take it right into the marsh."

"There are a number of reasons we are worried," said fellow North River Committee member Damon Reed. "Everyone admits that these trains drop oil and so layover facilities have tanks which catch the oil. The tanks are going to be only a foot or so above where the water comes down.

A possible solution to the environmental problem caused by putting the layover facility so close to the North River is to move it north, across the Driftway, and away from the marshland areas. Reed said putting the facility there would involve taking a couple of houses, but that it is the environmentally prudent move to make.

Environmental issues concerning Greenbush also abound in Cohasset, where Tom Gruber, chairman of the town's Greenbush mitigation committee, explained to Sullivan some of the town's anxieties about the project.

"James Brook has flooded four or five times in the last 10 years, and we are worried that construction (of Greenbush) will affect our flood abatement project," he said.

"The train tracks follow James Brook from Sanctuary Pond to the center of town and any time you have a major construction project in wetlands, it affects runoff. We think the MBTA is drastically underestimating the amount of water that could go to the center of town."

Though the boards of selectmen in Scituate, Hingham, and Cohasset all wrote a letter to Massachusetts secretary of environmental affairs Robert Durand on Feb. 3 urging the preparation of a new environmental feasibility study called an environmental impact report (EIR), Sullivan questioned why yet another study on the project was necessary.

"How much of asking for a new EIR is tactics to delay and how much of it is really fact-finding?" he asked Gruber.

During the Hingham phase of the tour, Sullivan and other MBTA officials heard from Hingham town officials regarding their concerns about what effects the train might have upon its historic downtown area.

"The MBTA's plan to convert downtown crossings into one-way streets would destroy our downtown," Macmillan said.

"There are four very tight intersections downtown, and there's no way that one way streets are acceptable," added traffic engineer Dick Cook. "Merchants will lose parking and traffic will simply be transferred to another location."

To prevent damage to the downtown area, which is protected by virtue of its standing as a Lincoln National Register Historic District, Macmillan said that the MBTA's Citizens Advisory Committee recommended the so-called 'short tunnel' underneath Hingham Square, which would eliminate five grade crossings and where homes are closest to the existing right-of-way.

Independence Building may become a residence

until recently, when Thomas J. Koncius of Scituate, a longtime former resident of Cohasset, purchased the property from the town on June 28 for $100,000.

The building, which in its storied history in Cohasset has been used as a fire station and police station and recently was used as a teen center, is in need of serious upgrading, as those who drive or stroll by it on a daily basis can attest.

Koncius told the ZBA that he already had ideas about he would like to renovate the property.

"We're going to put on real wood shutters, a cedar roof, and completely re-landscape the property," he said. "There also used to be a bell sitting on the roof, and I've contacted a place in Hanover where I could get a restored bell to put back up there."

Koncius and his lawyer, Richard Henderson, met with the zoning board of appeals on Tuesday night to request a variance to transform the building into a single family residence, which is necessary because the property lies in an area which is zoned as a downtown business district.

Henderson said that the special permit variance and the unusual parking situation are all that need to be resolved for the property to become a residence, and opined that neither hurdle would be difficult to overcome.

"The property lies on the edge of the downtown business district, and there's not adequate parking for a business," he said. "The property is much more suitable as a town house or residence and it's not as if we're asking to put a residence in the middle of a commercial district."

Henderson added that the use of the property as a residence is the best and most logical use of the property.

"The building is on sewer and won't impact the water supply," he said. "Making the property a private residence will mean less traffic in and out than a business would and constitutes the least offensive use of the property."

The ZBA was interested in where a future resident might park, as parking would not be allowed on South Main St, which only has one hour parking available.

"St. Stephen's church granted an easement to a prior tenant and we are working out a permanent easement with St. Stephen's for two spaces," Henderson said. "We're hopeful we'll be granted parking there but there's other parking in the town parking lot, and we're within 500 feet of that lot."

Zoning board member Jane Goedecke told Henderson that the board would need to see something definite regarding the parking situation in order to write a decision on the special permit request.

PLUMBING MUSINGS

by Philip Von Iderstein M.P. #8829

WELL

Reverend Copithorne from the Congregational meetinghouse called to see if we would install a water line to the new coffee machine that had been donated to the church. Victor and I met the Reverend the following day, and he showed us where the machine was going to be located. He informed us that there was only a crawl space beneath this area, and to do the best we could to find a proper run for the piping. We went into the cellar and made our way back as far as we could in the direction of the kitchen. The space between the ground and the floor became less than two feet, so I began to crawl for a ways. I soon became confident that we could fish a copper line the rest of the way. I crawled back out to get the tools, and Victor went upstairs to drill a hole through the floor so we could see where to run the line from below. After I crawled back in I yelled to Victor, "Where is the hole?" He banged on the floor above me about another ten feet into the darkness. The drop light wasn't any longer so I began to inch my way along in the blackness to where Victor was tapping. After a few more feet, I felt the ground slope down away from me. I reached down and could feel nothing. I moved to my right and felt nothing there also. I then picked up a small pebble and tossed it out, I heard nothing. I found a rock and tossed it out. After a few seconds delay I heard a splash. I wiggled back out and yelled for Victor to bring in another cord for the light. The main part of the old church had been built in the 1820s, and they dug a well just outside the back door. When they built the new addition years later, they never bothered to fill in the well, they just built over the top of it assuming no one would ever have to go underneath there. I was just happy I didn't crawl any further in. We found another route for the water line.

Are You "Programming" Yourself For Good Health?

Like a computer, your body has to be programmed for best results. Rest, proper diet, sensible exercise and a good mental attitude are essential. Sometimes, even with all those, good health seems elusive. The difference could be a condition you haven't even noticed — a vertebra that has gotten out of position, perhaps from a fall long before. When that happens, the nerves that extend out from between the vertebrae aren't able to serve body organs as they should. Once the vertebra is restored to its rightful position, the body is given the opportunity to program natural health. A chiropractic checkup can be an important first step in programming health.

Commuter line focus of community forum

Airing their views

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Passionate speeches followed each other like car parts on an assembly line as South Shore residents made their feelings known last week about the proposed Greenbush commuter rail line to MBTA officials, including state Secretary of Transportation Kevin Sullivan.

At a community meeting Wednesday in Hingham, which followed a tour of the proposed commuter rail line earlier that afternoon, Sullivan told the assembled group of about 200 town officials and citizens that he recognized that important issues were at stake concerning the Greenbush line.

"I support the Greenbush line, which is the most complicated restoration we will undertake, involving important historic preservation and wetlands issues," he said. "The next six months will be very critical to those who are for this and those who are opposed to this as well."

Sullivan also seemed to understand the firestorm of unflattering commentary regarding the MBTA's Greenbush plans that was to follow his speech.

"It's one thing to be negative," he said prior to citizens' comments, "but it's another thing to be negative with an alternative."

Whether in favor of or in opposition to Greenbush, residents and town officials have concerns regarding the effects of the rail line, a fact which Cohasset selectman Thomas Callahan said the MBTA continues to ignore.

"As a group of selectmen, we've been split on whether or not we want Greenbush," Callahan told Sullivan.

"Sometimes it's been 3 to 2 one way and sometimes it's been 3 to 2 the other way. But we are unified in our frustration that we don't feel this process is working for Cohasset or protecting our citizens."

Scituate selectman Joseph Norton said that he, like many others, was once in favor of the Greenbush line but has become convinced over the years that it is not in the best interests of the citizens he represents.

"I've been involved with Greenbush for 10 years, and I was a strong proponent of it for the first five years," Norton said. "But I have to plead guilty to a NIMBY attitude-'not in my back yard.' If I don't protect Scituate, who will?"

"I have serious concerns and when we last voted on Greenbush at town meeting, I couldn't stand up and vote for it," he told Sullivan at the meeting. "I hope that you will also stand up and say 'I changed my mind.'"

Perhaps the most vociferous opposition to the project was voiced by those representing Hingham, and in particular by selectman Katharine Reardon.

"This project has failed to progress because of inherent, intractable problems," she said. "The right-of-way comes within a few feet of many homes and the impact of surface rail on downtown will be shattering and will reduce the ability of shoppers to get downtown."

"The [Hingham] board of selectmen believe that this project should not be allowed to decimate the community it purports to serve and we hope you take a fresh, impartial look at it," she told Sullivan.

Hingham Greenbush coordinator Alexander Macmillan had equally strong words for the assembled MBTA officials.

"Fifteen years of being involved in this project have made us very cynical," Macmillan said. "We've been through three governors, six secretaries of transportation, and four MBTA general managers. We're not giving up, and we're not going away."

Macmillan continued by saying that unless specific conditions were met, in his view the people of Hingham were intent on opposing Greenbush.

"Five years ago, the Hingham Citizens Advisory Council voted to approve Greenbush under two conditions," he said. "First, there must be a tunnel under Hingham Square and, secondly, there needs to be a layover site that is approved by the people of Scituate."

"Sometimes it's been 3 to 2 one way and sometimes it's been 3 to 2 the other way. But we are unified in our frustration that we don't feel this process is working for Cohasset or protecting our citizens."

— Selectman Tom Callahan

"There is little likelihood that surface diesel rail will see the light of day in Hingham anytime soon."

Sheila Evans, a supporter of Greenbush and member of the Cohasset Rail Committee, said that though both sides have valid arguments, she feels the need for the train outweighs its deficiencies.

"This is an issue many reasonable people disagree about," she said. "But these towns are inescapably suburbs of Boston and the commuter rail has proven to be an efficient system of transportation from other suburbs to Boston. The MBTA must provide public transportation to the South Shore."

"We need to solve the environmental issues, but Route 3 and 3A are parking lots," said Martha Gjesteby, a Cohasset representative to the MBTA's Citizens Advisory Committee, and a former selectman. "The commuter rail to South Station is a logical move."

Kevin Jones, chairman of the Marshfield planning board, reminded Sullivan and the other MBTA officials that other towns were depending on the commuter rail service beside those in which the proposed stations are located.

"We took a poll in Marshfield, and our citizens were strongly in favor of the Greenbush line, by an 85-15 percent majority. The three lines of the Old Colony project were planned in conjunction with each other and the project should proceed as quickly as possible."

While most everyone in the South Shore seems to agree that improved transportation is a necessity, many argue that the continued insistence of the MBTA in focusing on Greenbush has blinded it toward other alternatives.

"The current plans for Greenbush propose 43 grade crossings in 17 miles in addition to creating diesel pollution and threatening wetland areas," said Nancy Buckley, founder of the Coastal Coalition, a grassroots, citizens organization which advocates alternate forms of transportation to the Greenbush rail line.

Buckley said that the Coastal Coalition was instrumental in improving water transportation from the South Shore to Boston, and feels that innovation is necessary to solve the transportation dilemma for the thousands of commuters fighting Route 3 gridlock during the work week.

"There will be a twofold approach to improving boat transportation," she said. The Quincy to Logan Airport shuttle has been extremely successful and there will also be a boat that goes from Scituate to Boston, probably within a year. By using high speed catamarans, the water transportation has become a viable option for getting into Boston, and we are proud that it is happening."

While pleased with the improved water transportation, Buckley said she realizes that a more drastic measure must be taken to significantly ease the traffic burden upon the Southeast Expressway, and she feels that time is of the essence in making a decision.

"The whole effort needs to be focused on making a decision very soon," she said. "A lot of people's lives are on hold, especially those that live near the [proposed] Greenbush rail line. Do they sell their property, can they add on to their homes?"

Buckley believes the solution to the Greenbush issue is an extension of the MBTA Red Line to Derby Street in Hingham (exit 15 on Route 3 for all of you commuters out there), which she feels will solve a number of the problems concerning Greenbush which have yet to be worked out.

"The Red Line extension would bring electric, rapid transit trains every 10 to 12 minutes, as opposed to the diesel trains proposed by the MBTA, which will come less often and will put more pollutants into the air."

Buckley said that a Red Line extension could be constructed on the median strip of Route 3, though she admitted that the idea was rejected before by state transportation officials.

"Secretary [James] Kerasiotes, who was Governor Weld's transportation secretary, said it couldn't be done," Buckley said. "But until everyone gets behind extending the red line, we'll have more studies on Greenbush, which is so obviously flawed."

Carlisle said that a Red Line extension would be overly expensive and was not an option the MBTA was looking into at the current time.

"It would be cost prohibitive to construct as red line extension because the state does not own the land along the right of way. It is also significantly more expensive to do a subway-type train instead of a commuter rail," he said.

Storm wreaks havoc on town water plant and the tank remained nearly full overnight. Usually, heavy water usage nearly drains the tank during the night, and the plant refills the tank in the early morning. If the tank had drained completely, the water department would have needed at least one day to refill the tank and check the systems.

"I arrived at the plant at 8 a.m. and there was still a half-inch of water on the floor," McNabb said. "We had to have workers come in to remove the carpets and rugs. Fortunately, none of the plant's operating systems were ruined by the flooding. We got right on top of the situation and the plant was up and running fine later in the day."

McNabb said no one is sure exactly why the systems turned on the water pumps, although workers have been able to piece together the sequence of events. At 10:30 p.m., the Supervisory Control And Data Acquisition (SCADA) computer software that controls the plant reported a power outage and the loss of monitoring communications with the water tank. The emergency generator kicked in because of the power outage. The power outage triggered a fault in the plant systems that caused the computerized systems to turn on three raw water pumps and begin pumping at full blast. Water began pouring into the plant at the rate of three million gallons per day.

The power outage triggered a fault in the plant systems that caused the computerized systems to turn on three raw water pumps and begin pumping at full blast. Water began pouring into the plant at the rate of three million gallons per day.

"The water ran through the plant, over oiled equipment, along floors, down stairs, onto carpets, and into the administrative area," McNabb said.

The plant has a clear water holding area designed to hold clean water before sending it through the system to the tank. But the 130,000 gallon holding tank was already close to full when the pumps began operating. After a short time, the water began flowing back into the plant.

McNabb said he informed Town Manager Mark Haddad of the situation. Haddad and McNabb will try to sort out the amount of damage caused by the storm and what kind of insurance coverage the town has.

"We're focused on three things right now," McNabb said. "Making sure the plant is running properly, which it is, cleaning up the mess, and preserving a record of what happened so we can prevent this in the future. No one in the plant did anything wrong as far as we can tell. It may have been a computer problem, or a problem with one of the our programmable logic circuits, but whatever it was, it was definitely triggered by the storm."

McNabb said plant workers have devised a manual solution to prevent the pumps from turning on unexpectedly again. Each night, plant workers will shut off the circuit breakers that control the pumps so there is no chance of another million gallon accident. The water department has already scheduled a computer consultant to come in and determine why the systems misinterpreted the power outage as a signal to begin operating the pumps. Fortunately, the systems that send the water to the tank did not kick on and none of the contaminated water entered the water distribution system. McNabb said the town's drinking water was never jeopardized, and residents didn't notice any problems.

"For now, our standard operating procedure will be to shut down anything that can be shut down," McNabb said. "This is another reason we need to have two water tanks. If there had been a fire last night, the tank would have been emptied."

Zoning Board to deliberate on marina

The zoning board of appeals will deliberate on the expansion of the Cohasset Harbor Marina at its next meeting on August 11 at 7:30 in Town Hall. Citizens are invited to attend, but because the hearing has been closed, there will be no public participation in the deliberations. Members of the ZBA will be free to ask questions of the attorneys involved in the matter.

School Committee to discuss funding options

At their July 15 meeting, the school committee will delve into the potentially murky waters of discussing private donations to fund programs which were cut as the result of budget restrictions. After-school programs will also be on the agenda at the meeting, scheduled for 6:30 p.m. at the A/V studio in Cohasset Middle High School.

Zoning board studies proposed water tank

Water commission seeks Scituate Hill site

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Anyone who has spent some time outdoors during the recent heat wave, courtesy of the weather phenomenon known as La Nina, knows the importance of having an adequate water supply to fill their pools, keep their grass green, or allow the kids to spray each other with the garden hose to keep cool.

If a fire were to occur, however, the amount of water storage in the town's water tank on Bear Hill is currently inadequate to serve both the town and the fire department, which is one of the facts with which John K. McNabb, Jr., chairman of the water commission, armed himself as he went before the zoning board of appeals on Tuesday night to request a height variance in order to construct a second water tower on Scituate Hill.

"The water commission hired a contractor to do an emergency study in 1994 and 1995 on how we could improve water distribution in Cohasset," McNabb told the ZBA. We were told that the problem was that we had inadequate water storage, which is why we are building the second tank."

"The reasoning behind building a second tank is threefold," said Dominic Tutela, consulting engineer for the water commission. "First, it would ensure adequate fire storage. Second, it provides a cushion of water for a day of maximum water use, like the last few days, for instance. Third, it will allow us to maintain the present tank on Bear Hill by putting it offline."

McNabb also reminded the ZBA that town meeting approved funding for a second water tank in 1996 and that the new tank serves the best interests of public health and safety.

The variance which the water commission seeks would allow construction of a 75-foot high tank, which is 30 feet higher than the town's 45-foot height limit.

> "If we put the new tank at ground level, we would have to use pumps to get the water out, which is more expensive and less efficient than using gravity."
> — Water commissioner John McNabb

"The new tank has to be at that height because it needs to be at the same level as the Bear Hill tank for pressure balance," said Tutela.

"If we put the new tank at ground level," McNabb explained, "we would have to use pumps to get the water out, which is more expensive and less efficient than using gravity."

The water commission initially recommended the second tank to be placed next to the current tank on Bear Hill, but protests of residents in that area spurred a search for a new location. The choice of the Scituate Hill site was essentially a no-brainer, Tutela said.

"Scituate Hill is really the only area in town other than Bear Hill that can afford us the appropriate height we need," he said.

The water commission acquired a permanent easement under eminent domain laws for the half-acre site on Scituate Hill upon which it hopes to build the new water tank. McNabb assured the ZBA that the water commission is working diligently to secure all of the land they need for the project.

"We have the legal right to the land and have a temporary construction easement," he said. "We are currently trying to negotiate a permanent easement for the water pipe and an access road."

Unlike the Bear Hill tank, which sits in a residentially zoned area, the proposed Scituate Hill tank would be in an industrial district, which McNabb told the ZBA is not inconsistent with permitted uses in those areas.

The approval of the zoning board is just one of three that the water commission needs before they can begin construction on the new tank, which the water commission hope will be completed by December 2000.

"We came to you [the ZBA] first because, without the variance, there's no reason to seek the other approvals," McNabb said. "We are set to go before the planning board for a site plan approval on July 21 and then would go before the Department of Environmental Protection for approval of the entire engineering plan."

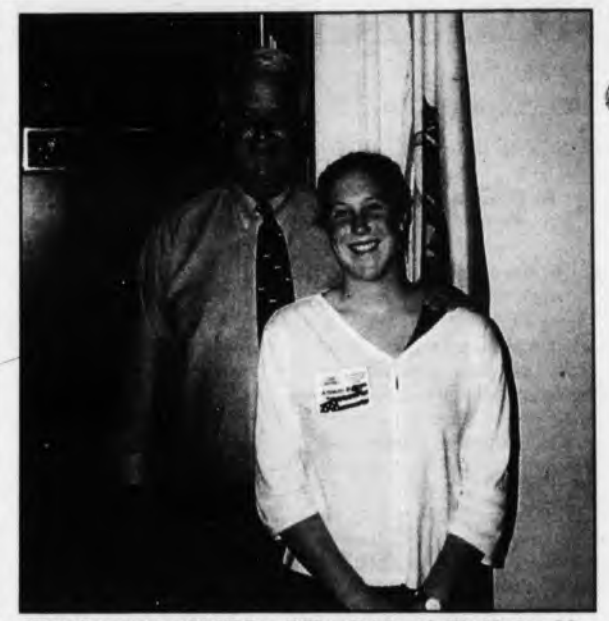
Allison Berg, a student at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham and Cohasset resident, recently took part in the Presidential Classroom Scholars Program in Washington, D C. Allison joined nearly 400 high school juniors and seniors from 43 states, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Japan and Korea. The students spent a week meeting with government leaders and learning about the democratic process first-hand.

Allison attended seminars, had a private tour of the White House and the National Security Agency and small group visits to CIA Headquarters, the Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant and NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center. Students rounded out the week with appointments in the offices of their Senators and Representatives on Capitol Hill.

Allison also wanted to add many thanks to all of the people who made generous donations to enable her to attend.



Allison Berg meets with US Rep. William Delahunt in Washington, DC through the Presidential Classroom Scholars Program.

MAY I PRESENT

SALLYANN CHATTERTON

Stuffed tuna shells can be cool!

It's hot!! Too hot to cook, too hot to eat a heavy meal that we usually do! And, even though Deli cold cuts are the answer to many things, we tend to get tired of that, also!

Last year I scoured every cookbook I could find, just attempting to find a meal that was refreshing, both to the taste and to the eye — one that I found was a dish called Tuna-Stuffed Jumbo Shells.

They are light and fresh tasting, a cool summer main dish — and, pretty to look at!

Tuna-stuffed jumbo shells

10 jumbo pasta shells
1/2 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons sugar
1 12-oz can tuna, drained and flaked
1 cup diced celery
1/2 cup diced green onions
1/2 cup diced green pepper
1/2 cup shredded carrot
2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley

CREAMY CELERY DRESSING:

1/4 cup sour cream
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup cider vinegar
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon onion powder
lettuce leaves and red onion rings, optional

Cook pasta according to package directions; rinse in cold water and drain. In a bowl, combine mayonnaise and sugar. Stir in the tuna, celery, onions, green pepper, carrot and parsley. Spoon into pasta shells; cover and refrigerate. For the dressing, combine sour cream, sugar, vinegar, mayonnaise, celery seed and onion powder. Arrange lettuce, onion rings and shells on a serving platter; drizzle with dressing. 5 servings.

DEAN'S LIST AT COLBY

Colby College has announced that Chloe J. Chittick was named to the dean's list for outstanding academic achievement during the spring semester of the 1998-99 school year. Chloe 's majors are anthropology and religious studies; she is the daughter of Stanley and JoAnne Chittick and will graduate in the year 2000.

COLLEGE HONORS

Hats off to Jonah Berger who achieved the dean's list for the spring semester at Westfield State College!

Kendra Deanne Gray, of 40-B Nichols Road, a 1995 grad of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School, earned a bachelor of arts in economics from Union College. Well done, Kendra!

THAYER HONOR ROLL

Thayer Academy Middle School has announced its honor roll. The following "Cohassetites" made the grade: Michael Ernst, Lindsay Feig, Gregory Smith (all seventh grade); Carley Kalus and Dylan Lanzillotti (eighth grade). A round of applause for all of you, you earned it!

MECHANICAL ENGINEER

Jessica Leland Jenkins, daughter of Leland and Leonora Jenkins, received a bachelor of science degree from the Northwestern University Robert R. McCormick School of Engineering and Applied Science at the University's commencement.

Jessica, a CHS grad, was a mechanical engineering major. While at Northwestern, she was a member of the Sunrayce Aerodynamic's team and the events coordinator of the Northwestern Club Ultimate Frisbee Team. She plans to study Aerospace Engineering at Stanford University.

BATES COLLEGE NEWS

Burke Z. Davis, a sophomore, was among 21 Bates College students who participated in the college's Steel Pan Ensemble spring performance in the Olin Arts Center Concert Hall. Burke is the son of Roy and Elaine Davis. A member of the men's varsity basketball team, he is a 1997 graduate of Cohasset High School.

STONEHILL GRADUATE

Bethany Quintin graduated from Stonehill College, and all are ever-so-proud of her and her efforts!

BC GRADUATES

News from Boston College is that three students graduated from that College in grand style.: Ryan S. Freeman with a BS, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Freeman; Caitlin K. Hurley with a AB, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley; and Matthew Larson with a BS, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Larson.

We know that all three of you will do an outstanding job in the business world!

NEWS FROM THE SWEENEYS

Lastly, guess who gave us a call last week? Walt and Nanci Sweeney! They are living in South Lake Tahoe and are great! Walt is doing the final re-write on his book, and working hard as a PR for a local casino — Nanci reports that she is fine! They both are trying hard to find a way to get "home" for a visit, we'll let you know the minute the plans are final!

DROP ME A LINE

That's the news for this week, hopefully yours will be in print next time! Just give me a call or drop me a line!

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Ahhh, summer!

'There is a sumptuous variety about the New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration - and regret. The weather is always doing something there; always attending strictly to business; always getting up new designs and trying them on people to see how they will go....Yes, one of the brightest gems in the New England Weather is the dazzling uncertainty of it."

—Mark Twain

Acting totally out of character, our weather has become all too predictable lately. It's hot and humid and it's been hot and humid for what seems like an eternity.

Right now it's hard to imagine ice, sleet, snow, mittens, scarves — all that winter stuff that New England is famous for.

But we've noticed one of the positive side effects to the current heat wave is that people seem friendlier and less hurried.

Is this the secret that our neighbors who reside south of the Mason-Dixon line possess? A slower way of life to go along with a smooth Southern drawl?

While we haven't heard any y'alls from locals, we've found in recent days that more and more people are pausing longer inside the Cohasset Mariner office. Those who scale the steps in the old Hingham Journal building in Hingham Square and open our office door are in no rush to leave.

It's the air conditioning, they say.

We'll admit that our window unit does make a difference but we've noticed increased friendliness on the hot streets of Cohasset as well. More drivers are allowing others to make left turns and shoppers and shopkeepers all seem chattier than usual. Detail officers are waving and construction crews are nodding hello.

We've all had enough — but the grumpies seem to have given way to the grin-and-bear-it mentality. Local citizens haven't lost their sense of humor.

One entry in the Hingham police log at the start of a midnight shift last week summed it up for all of us — "Clear and muggy!!!!!!" it said.

June bid adieu as one of the warmest June's on record. And July greeted us with its first week finishing in the mid-90s'. It's too soon to tell if the summer of 1999 will continue to be one for the record books. And surely before we figure that out — we'll be thinking about our fall schedules.

So enjoy summer while it lasts.

And when you feel your irritation level beginning to rise with the dew point — remember what else Mark Twain said.

"Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it."

National Park and Recreation Month

MY VIEW

JACK WORLEY

The month of July is set aside each year as National Park and Recreation Month. Recreators throughout the USA share common objectives and goals, the most universal, perhaps, being to encourage people to participate in leisure-time activities. More acutely stated, recreators would like to see everyone participate in new and unfamiliar, as well as the more familiar activities. Not everyone will be inclined to participate in new or different activities, but those who do, should be well rewarded for their efforts. Recreation can manifest in countless ways and as a discipline, recreation has no concrete boundaries or exclusions. The classical definition of recreation states a prerequisite condition, in that it must be the "constructive use of leisure time." Whether or not leisure-time pursuits must be "constructive," may at best be a philosophical question. "Constructive" in this sense may not refer to productivity, but rather, may mean to cognitively plan or structure time for leisure pursuits. That is, we do not need to perform constructively, but need only to provide some sort of format and time for our leisure pursuits.

Recreation can be a very relative and personal sort of endeavor and we must remember, that what may be recreation for one individual, could be a life's work for another individual. If there were any prerequisite conditions to recreation, it very well might be that the activity should provide us diversion from life's daily chores.

As a socially inclined species, man has an inherent need to socialize and recreational activity often satisfies this need, as well as other basic inclinations. We can recreate in group settings, or quietly alone and which-ever format seems most appealing to us at a given time remains dynamic and relative to other factors.

Often, we pursue recreational activity as an emotional, as well as physical diversion from our daily lives and in this respect, recreation can often be therapeutic.

It is important for us to understand that we must schedule recreation into the structure of our daily activities. Like many other good intentions that we all have, our time for recreation can often be displaced by other, seemingly more urgent and pressing aspects of our lives. Left to chance alone, many of us would be negligent, providing recreational time and opportunity.

We learn to recreate, largely through developed habit. That is, we develop the habit of seeking leisure activity, often at a very young age, from access and exposure to opportunity. In this sense, recreation is education. One of the most vital charges of public recreation is to provide all residents with equal access and exposure to leisure opportunity.

This particular charge is important as it relates to all age residents, but especially vital regarding children's services. Through access and exposure to recreational opportunity, children develop the habit of recreating. That is, they learn to seek leisure-time activities through reinforced opportunity. Once learned and developed, the habit of pursuing leisure-activity should serve us well for a life-time.

Recreation can be anything you desire it to be and may serve, or not serve, any purpose. It may be productive, or non-productive, provide, or not provide any source of exercise. However, recreation should provide us with gratification, enjoyment, and diversion from life's daily activities. Keep an open mind to new and different sorts of activities, set aside structured and appropriate time for leisure activity. As the slogan says: "LIFE, BE IN IT!"

COMMON GROUND

AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

Take a Quest and find out!

Quest (kwest), n. 1. a search or pursuit made in order to find or obtain something.

I spent childhood summers in a simple beachfront cottage named "A Home at Last," which looked out across Provincetown Harbor. Long Point wrapped around the harbor and at the tip of the Point stood — still stands — a trim white lighthouse with a green beacon. It lined up directly across from our cottage and, superimposed on the dark Truro and Wellfleet shore across the bay, its steady, solitary candle was a reassuring presence throughout those summer nights.

Not until a friend took me fishing one night across the bay at Wellfleet did I look back on the Provincetown shoreline after dark. As we steamed in around midnight, I could not find my familiar light, lost as it was among all the multi-colored lights of Provincetown. And until that night, I had not even considered what the view might be like from other than my regular perch. I realized then that the world can look very different depending on where one sits and how one chooses to see.

That experience came back to me last week as I walked along the bike path in Wompatuck State Park, map in hand, carefully scrutinizing my surroundings, looking for clues in the woodland that would lead me to a hidden treasure box. I've traveled that bike path on dozens of occasions and consider it familiar territory. But last week, the familiar was made new again. I was on a Quest (aren't we all?).

What is a Quest, you're no doubt wondering? Borrowed from the English who call the pastime, "letterboxing," Quests are outdoor adventures, explorations, that hone orienteering skills and one's awareness of natural and cultural history. Quests are opportunities for discovery, for reflection, for fun.

The hobby began during the 1850s in the Dartmoor region of England when, so goes the tale, a Victorian gentleman deposited his calling card in a bottle which he stashed out on the wild and remote moor with the invitation to anyone who might stumble upon it to leave behind their own calling card.

A young "letter boxer" signs the log book after finding the hidden treasure box.

Hingham resident, Dr. Richard Norton, first learned about Quests from his children who are avid Questers in the Vermont/New Hampshire Upper Valley. Eager to introduce the pastime locally, Dr. Norton shared his Questing experiences with friends, a small band of whom enthusiastically embraced the idea of a series of hunts on public lands across the South Shore. With support from the Appalachian Mountain Club, the non-profit South Shore Quests Committee has just published its first newsletter and a booklet which includes directions for Quests in Wompatuck State Park and Bare Cove Park and at Hingham Harbor, Triphammer Pond, Turkey Hill and Pond Meadow.

Following directions often written as rhymes, accompanied by a map, Questers collect clues, usually letters of the alphabet, which are entered into boxes in the Quest booklet. The letters spell the word or words that will help locate the treasure box, hidden from view. Inside the treasure box, Questers discover information about the site as well as a rubber stamp, ink pad, a log book and a pencil. Questers are encouraged to write their name in the log book and to record or sketch anything of interest seen during their walk. Many Questers carve their own rubber stamps (Dr. Norton, recently back from his own Dartmoor adventure, reports that the homemade stamps are particularly prized in England) and leave their personal, artistic imprint in the Quest's log book, and make their own log books, stamping them with each Quest's stamp.

With Quest booklet in hand, I did three of the Wompatuck State Park Quests, the Accord Brook, Holly Pond and Boundary and Fox Pond Quests, all easy hikes. Wompatuck is a 4,000-acre open space, most of which lies in Hingham. The property first belonged to the Indian Chieftain Josiah Wompatuck who, in the mid-1600s, deeded his land to white settlers with the understanding that they would "quietly possess" it. Though privately owned and exploited over the years — wood was harvested for ships' masts and for heating, farmers grazed cattle and spring water was bottled — Wompatuck managed to escape extensive development. In 1941, the Navy acquired the site for an ammunition storage facility which became the main supply point for the North Atlantic Naval forces during WWII. Reactivated in 1950 for the Korean War, the site was later declared surplus. In 1969 it opened for recreational use as Wompatuck State Park.

Bicycle, snowmobile, x-country and walking trails meander through dense stands of pine, hickory, elm, oak, ash and maple, home to more than 250 bird species. Remnants of the WWII era are still visible, though recent demolition has removed many of the bunkers. Vernal pools nourish wood frogs, faerie shrimp and spotted salamanders and wildflowers add dabs of color to the lush greens.

Searching for clues, which are not obvious to the casual walker, forced me to stop and really examine my surroundings. I became aware of trickling water, creaking aged tree limbs, the throaty splash of bullfrogs ducking from sight, chipmunks rustling the leaves. Wild grapes and car briar draped the staghorn sumacs. The lily of the valley was finished for the season, but azalea perfumed the air and fleabane, hop clover, red clover, Indian tobacco, St. John's Wort and ox-eye daisies were in full bloom.

Boundary and Fox Ponds were carpeted with lily pads and fragrant white water lilies. Dragonflies bounced on the air. This Quest takes you into a canopied hideaway with a tropical moistness, a wood loud with the calls of unseen birds, dense with wild sarsparilla, milkweed, wild raspberries, roses and pepper grass. Look for the foundation of an old summer cabin. What happened to it? As for what makes rocks crack or move, the answer lies in the treasure box. Happy hunting!

* * * * *

Quest booklets ($2) and a free newsletter are available at Bookport and the library. Clues and treasure boxes will be in place until Nov. 15. For internet browsers, type in letterboxing and explore the many sites.

Lobster Lab report on pollution in Little Harbor

The Cohasset Lobster Lab Inc. which coordinates student activity with the Little Harbor Water Quality Study mandated by the state and funded by the town has issued its first report. The report, required as a part of the state grant to the CLLI, must have been submitted before June 30, the end of the state's fiscal year. For that reason, it is labeled "Final Report", but is, in reality the first result of a summer of work by the students of Cohasset and Scituate in gathering pollution data from Cohasset's Little Harbor, the main Harbor, and the Gulf.

The purpose of the study is to find if Little Harbor meets Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) guidelines for clean water and if not what the problem is, and what to do about it. A large part of the study calls for water quality data to be taken by the town's contractor, Camp Dresser McKee. The student data is intended to supplement the contractor's work and expand it, since the students data is taken far more often, (weekly, all summer).

The Lobster Lab is coordinating the activities of more than 40 students who will engage in a number of scientific activities this summer under the supervision of the Cohasset High School Science Department.

Findings from the small amount of data gathered to date show:

that about 15% of the readings indicate severe pollution at several sites in Little Harbor.; 20% of the readings exceed DEP limits to allow swimming and 85% of the readings exceed limits necessary for open shellfish harvesting.

QUESTIONS

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on one roll call from the week of June 28-July 2. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

SEX OFFENDER REGISTRY(S 1917) Senate 39-0, gave near final approval to a bill making several changes in the state's sexual offender registry law. Provisions include requiring all sex offenders convicted since 1981 to register as sexual offenders; expanding the registry board from five part-time members to seven full-time ones; establishing a system of lifetime parole for some sex offenders; and a civil commitment system allowing the state to commit, for a period of time up to life, any imprisoned sex offender, scheduled for release, but determined by a jury to still be sexually dangerous. Supporters said the bill improves the sexual offender registry and addresses problems which were raised by the Supreme Judicial Court. They noted that the improved registry, lifetime parole and civil commitment provisions will protect society from these dangerous predators. Although no senators voted against the bill, some said the state should spend more time and money on treating these offenders rather than locking them up. They also noted the bill unfairly treats juvenile sex offenders the same as adults ones. The House has approved a different version of the bill and the differences must be worked out before the measure goes to the governor. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

Hot weather and composting

[A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by the Cohasset Recycling Committee]

Hot weather and composting — they go together like birds of a feather! The time when nature cries out for assistance ... in completing the cycle ... or She'll do it anyway. Might as well make use of the results; and it's a good feeling to be an integral part of the process.

Let's see ...we were talking about the challenge of containers to contain the process of composting at home [as well as the challenge of organizing man-made recyclables around the house] ... and that recycling is an attitude, a state of mind, a belief, an ethical belief [as well as financial common sense and a town-wide fiscal responsibility].

Cohasset RECYCLING TRANSFER Facility

Cohasset green to recycle everything

Hot weather is the perfect time to compost. It's easy to see, with food spoiling easily in hot weather, that organic matter breaks down better with warmth, providing constant fodder for compost.

So first, compost containers. Actually, the town in the past has offered home composting containers for sale for $20 each, and we hope to be able to do so again. These are durable, neat, patented and quite efficient.

A basic desirable quality of a compost container is aeration/breathability without access to animals. Worms, yes — we need earthworms to help turn over the soil and to enrich it with their own processing. In fact, some people even buy earthworms to hasten composting, just as some people buy ladybugs to avoid using poisons in their gardens. Unless meat scraps are added, not recommended for attracting the wrong crowd, home compost is not apt to be an attractive nuisance, nor should it smell. Earth, straw, hay, animal manure, moderate amounts of sawdust, even seaweed, when interspersed and layered, all help the breaking-down process without odor. [Remember, coffee grounds are natural deodorizers.]

But back to the container — this writer is currently using his own version of a compost bin seen advertised in L.L. Bean, one made from scrap slats with sides and hinged top spaced about 1/2 inch apart. This type of slatted box is usually about 20"x24"x48."

Lest we forget: the simplest home compost pile is just that, your own pile of organic debris, no container at all. Leaves left in a pile will break down, the time depending on the leaves [oak usually take a year]. Leaf-pile decomposition can be speeded up [and improved] considerably by merely adding some earth and making sure the pile is damp, but not soaking. Weeds, by the way, being naturally super-rich in nutrients, make excellent compost, but bury them to keep them from growing.

If you have access to seaweed, animal manure, hay [spoiled hay is excellent], rejoice! The end [organic breakdown] is near! And we're done for now. See you next time.

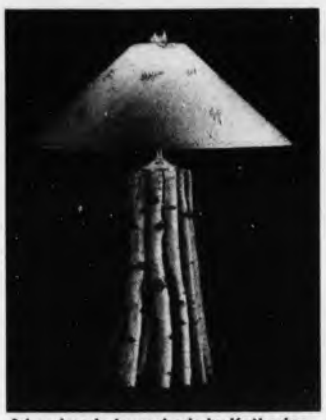
New summer workshop at Art Center

Have you ever wondered how to preserve the magnificent red leaf you picked up during a walk last fall? Or, if you are a nature lover, what to do with the pile of favorite beach stones, perfectly shaped twigs, unusual feathers and twisting vines, just waiting to be recycled in your home?

Katherine Ahern, founder of Birch & Willow, located in the Fort Point district of Boston, crafts handmade lamps and lampshades from all these materials. She gathers her raw materials on hunting and gathering expeditions to rocky beaches, overgrown woodlands and downed trees and then matches the natural materials with a sumptuous one-of-a kind handmade paper shade to create the ultimate in "natural light."



A handmade lampshade by Katherine Ahern

For the first time, Ahern will teach a two-part course in making paper lampshades Wednesday evenings, July 14 and 21, from 6:30-9:30 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center. She will instruct students on how to make and trim both a round shade and a panel shade. Ahern will also offer students tips on selecting appropriate papers for their lampshades, on determining correct lampshade proportions for a variety of lamp base styles and sizes and on incorporating their natural treasures into their home decor.

The cost of the two-part workshop is $80 for members and $90 for non-members, which includes a materials fee. Register either with a check or credit card by calling the South Shore Art Center, 383-2787.

Paint The Town Plein-air

The Christopher Gallery presents "Paint The Town Plein-air" at World's End in Hingham. Plein-air is a term used to describe paintings that are done outdoors. The public is invited to watch several New England artists paint the beautiful landscape Saturday, July 17, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is an admission fee of $4 per person to enter the park. The event will continue into Saturday evening at The Christopher Gallery, located on Route 3A in Cohasset, just a few short miles from World's End.

The public is invited to attend a casual dress, wine and cheese reception from 7 to 10 p.m. to view the artists' finished work and enjoy the gallery collection. All the paintings will be for sale and admission is free. A portion of the painting sales will be donated to The Trustees of Reservations. The show will be held from July 17 through Aug. 28.

Summer craft workshops

Buttonwood Books will hold craft workshops for children on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 1 p.m. in July at its stores in Hingham and Cohasset. COHASSET SPORTS

First swim meet kicks off with windy roar

By Barbara Orsini Linn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Swim Team kicked off its first meet of the season July 2 and what a meet it was. In case you didn't feel like swimming, no problem, the wind just pushed you right along. It was so windy that you could barely keep your balance as you cheered from the poolside. Just ask the swimmer who had a plastic lawn chair jump in, behind a gust of wind, to join the competition. Everyone was grateful that the threatening clouds, wanting to deluge the area, just remained threatening. All in all, it was fine meet weather.

What a week for this swim team, the end of the school year, the beginning of swim team practice, and the first meet of the season all rolled into one hectic and fabulous week. A week culminating with a huge win for Cohasset over the Eel River Swim Team of Plymouth. They're a terrific group of swimmers, and the Cohasset Swim Team was pleased to have them as their guests. The competition was in the very best spirit of the sport and everyone had a wonderful time competing.

In case you didn't feel like swimming, no problem, the wind just pushed you right along. It was so windy that you could barely keep your balance as you cheered from the poolside.

So what did the Cohasset Swim Team's "Lean/Mean/Swimming Machine" accomplish? Just for starters, Cohasset's first meet's overall score was Cohasset 472 to Eel River's 115. Ouch! And, "way to go" Cohasset. So, who were the "Lean/Mean Swimming Machines" for Cohasset at this meet? Here's the lineup:

AGE 13/14 BUTTERFLY/50

First place: Scott Faber, Melissa Orsini; second place: Craig Blackburn, Laura Kondrat; third place: Tess Foley.

Laura Kondrat and Tess Foley fought hard for second place. Congratulations Melissa Orsini in taking first place.

AGE 17 AND UNDER BUTTERFLY/50

First place: Chris Flynn (#1 star for this event. Great job.), Caroline Carter; second place: Nicole Needle.

Caroline Carter is one fast moving swimming machine.

AGE 8 AND UNDER BREASTROKE/25

First place boys: Ian Porter; second place: Ryan Daly; third place: Graham Stevenson.

This was a hotly sought after first place, these guys were neck and neck.

First place girls: Sam Lehr; second place: Kaley Madge.

Sam Lehr's first place is a proud win as she was the fastest overall between the boys and girls for this age. Kaley Madge had the second highest score between the boys and girls. Thomson Jaffe was fourth in a very nice swim.

AGE 9/10 BREASTROKE/25

First place: Nick Zappalo, Lindsay Durkin; second place: Colin Conway; third place: Corbin Farber, Abigail Markert.

What a dive for Lindsay Durkin, it made all the difference in this win. Samantha Fortin got fourth, wow!

AGE 11/12 BREASTROKE/50

First place boys: Zach Markert; second place: Kevin Roach; third place: Mike Pecca.

Zach Markert was truly a flying swimming machine in this event.

First place girls: Casey Anderson; second place: Jenna Larson; third place: Ashley Faber.

Casey Anderson flew across the lane with Jenna Larson and Ashley Faber in hot pursuit.

AGE 13/14 BREASTROKE/50

First place boys: Scott Faber; second place: Chuckie Kelly.

These guys were slugging it out for first place, but Scott Faber prevailed, great swim.

First place girls: Emily Simmons, second place: Yasmine Afshar; third place: Delia Regan.

Yasmine Afshar and Emily Simmons were neck and neck right to the end, it was exciting and D. Reagan was right behind challenging.

AGE 17 AND UNDER BREASTROKE/50

First place boys: Bryan Bilton.

Congratulations on first place, what a great swim.

First place girls: Alison Berg; second place: Nicole Needle; third place: Cara Foley.

Legion season hits homestretch, playoffs could follow

By Lou Molinari
CORRERSPONDENT

It's just possible the playoff future of the Cohasset-Scituate Legion baseball team will be decided Friday evening, 5:45 p.m. at Milliken Field, Cohasset.

At that time, according to coach Scott Arnold, the Cohasset-Scituate legion will be playing its fifth game in five days, the second time this week against Milton.

"We have to win at least three out of the five remaining games to have a shot at the playoffs.

"There are five spots available and four have already been settled. We, along with Randolph and Morrisette are trying to snag that remaining spot.

"As we go into the week, to be quite truthful, our chances don't look quite that good. We have to win at least three games and have to hope the other two teams play poorly.

"Speaking of playing poorly, we did just that last week, losing to Braintree and West Roxbury.

"We just couldn't get anything going in those two games. We were about as flat as I have seen the team this season."

The Cohasset-Scituate Legion team entered last week looking to sweep all three games and put the playoff issue to rest once and for all.

As for the third game last week, it never got off the ground.

There was no ground to be seen according to the coach, it was all under water.

"That third game was rained out for sure," said Arnold. "It poured so hard, we couldn't see the playing field. Everything was under water.

"We were looking to pull the week out with that game, but it just wasn't to be. A win in that game would have certainly taken the pressure off us for the upcoming five games. I'm just hoping the team can get back in the swing of things.

"Everybody should be well rested for our first game against Braintree Monday.

"We all had some nice time off over the Fourth of July vacation, and it came at a time when the kids were beginning to tighten up. Hopefully they will be a lot looser when things get rolling again.

"One thing about these kids, they have been giving it all they got. They show up for practice, they're always ready to play. It would be nice to see them make the playoffs.

"It looks like a tall order, but I'm hoping the kids can pull it off."

Tryout for Dash soccer team

The South Shore YMCA Dash soccer team U-13 is holding tryouts for boys under 12 and boys under-14 club soccer teams Tuesday, July 13 from 6 to 8 p.m. at Derby Academy. The tryouts will be a Derby Academy from 6 to 8 p.m. The YMCA is looking for a few more good players that are serious in developing their individual skills as well as competing as a team player. The boys will be enjoying the game of soccer at the highest level of competition in the state. The Y is committed to the players selected for an entire year and creating a supportive and motivating environment.

The YMCA Dash team completed its first year of competitive programs with a strong third-place finish in the boys under-13 Maple Developmental Division. Kevin Orcutt, a national B licensed coach trained the team which had some of the best soccer players from Hanover, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset, Dorchester, Pembroke, Marshfield, and Halifax. The team's emphasis was on technical and strategic soccer skills and fun.

The South Shore YMCA is a not-for-profit association of individuals dedicated to improving the quality of life for all through programs that promote a healthy body, mind and spirit. More information on the yearlong program, and YMCA will be available at the tryouts. If you have any questions, call Tamara Pisarkiewicz at 781-659-4712.

SPORTS BRIEFS

See the Sox in Action

The South Shore Community Center will be sponsoring an end-of-summer family outing to Fenway Park, Red Sox vs. Kansas City Royals on Monday, Aug. 30. Families will be provided with bus transportation to and from Fenway.

Meet at the community center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, at 5 p.m. for a pre-game hot dog and drink. The bus will leave the center at 5:45 p.m. Game time is 7:05 p.m.

The cost is $20 per person.

All seats are in the grandstands, on the first base line. There are a limited number of tickets, so reserve your spots early.

Mincolla earns lacrosse honor

Governor Dummer Academy junior Nick Mincolla recently was honored as a member of the Independent School League (ISL) All-League lacrosse team.

Mincolla was the leading scorer for this year's GDA team.

He is the son of Melinda Berry of Cohasset and Mark Mincolla of Scituate.

Sign up for ropes course

Via the auspices of Cohasset High School, Jack Buckley and Devin Buick, the Cohasset Recreation Department, will accept registrations for a summer ropes course.

The cost for this unique, 10-day, 20-hour experience is $80 per person and you may register by calling the recreation office at 383-4109.

Sessions will be available starting July 19 and Aug. 2, meeting two hours daily. Morning and afternoon sessions are available.

For further information and registration call 383-4109.

Cohasset Recreation

SUMMER BASKETBALL CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the South Shore Basketball School will sponsor a summer basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

The full-week camp, for boys and girls ages 12 through 15, will be held Monday, July 12 through Friday, July 16 at the Sullivan Gymnasium. The fee for the five day camp is $150.

Brochures and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Town Hall, Recreation Department office.

REGISTRATION FOR LACROSSE CLINIC '99

The Cohasset Recreation Department is now taking registrations for a full-contact boy's rules lacrosse clinic the week of July 19 through July 23. The clinic will be for grades 4 to 6 from 7:30 until 9 a.m. and grades 7 to 8 from 9 until 10:30 a.m. at Miliken Field. The fee per participant is $58 and checks can be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. The fee includes the tournament entry fee for Carver, Mass. Tournament on Saturday, July 24 and a Cohasset lacrosse T-shirt.

Mr. Chuck Jaffee will direct this unique lacrosse opportunity. Details regarding the lacrosse tournament in Carver on Saturday, July 24, will be forth coming. We will carpool to this tournament and signed forms permit participants to engage in both the week-long clinic and tournament/travel.

Registration forms can be obtained at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

ADULT EVENING TENNIS LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis classes for all levels of instruction by calling 383-4109.

Classes will be scheduled as follows: beginners, 6 to 7 p.m., Tuesday; intermediates, 7 to 8 p.m., Tuesday; advanced, 6 to 7 p.m., Thursday; beginners, 7 to 8 p.m., Thursday.

Other classes will be scheduled as demand indicates.

All sessions are four weeks in duration and will cost $40 per person, per session. Teaching, will be Amanda Gontarz of Cohasset Recreation Department's tennis staff. Participants who do not own or have access to a racquet, should indicate this at the time of registration. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis. Another evening will be made available should demand indicate.

gion baseball season will be played on July 14 with the playoff season scheduled to get underway on July 15.

Randolph was 5-7 going into this week, while Morrisette was 4-8. One of the teams Cohasset was scheduled to play this week, Canton, was 0-9, according to Arnold.

Looking back, coach Arnold thought the loss to Quincy was something that helped put the extra pressure on his team this week.

At the time of the loss to Quincy, the Quincy Legion team had a record of 1-9.

One person who should be well relaxed for the upcoming games is the coach. He made good use of the long Fourth of July playing with the triplets, his three nine-month old boys.

"Taking care of the boys is just real fun," said the coach, who was anxiously waiting to return to the backyard and more fun taking care of the boys.

THE DESIGNING WOMAN by Kathleen Fox ASID

THE ROAD TO DAMASK

Damask is a fabric that conjures up images of fine domestic trappings. In ancient times, this hand- woven silk from Damascus with the lustrous, satin-weave pattern could only be afforded by the rich. Fortunately, the invention of the Jacquard loom in 1803 decreased weaving time and made damask more affordable. The introduction of cotton, linen, and synthetics as fiber options cut prices even further. Today, damask still occupies a regal position as a favored fabric for fine upholstery and linens, however, the applications need not stop there. When used in such unexpected places as the trim on curtains in sleek living spaces or as the inset panels within wood moldings on den walls, damask catches the eye as no other fabric can.

Innovative interior design ideas often spring from the past. Damask fabric is an ancient, rich fabric once enjoyed only by a wealthy few. Today, it is both affordable and versatile. The interior design specialists of THE DESIGNING WOMAN can help you turn your house into a showplace. From the coordination of fabrics, wallpaper, furniture and window treatments to the selection of accessories, you can rely on us for trustworthy guidance. Call us at 781-383-6411 to arrange a convenient consultation.

HINT: In its classic form, damask features a large-scale pattern (usually showy flowers or leaves.)

Osgood students aid earthquake victims in Colombia

Third-graders ignite fundraising effort

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Inspired by a spirit of volunteerism fostered in them by their teachers, a small group of Osgood third-graders decided to organize an effort to help those in desperate need and started a campaign to raise money for earthquake victims in Colombia.

"We were doing a mitten project for the homeless in art class and we were talking about what we could do for the people in Colombia," said third-grader Samantha Williams, the impetus behind the campaign.

"Through the school council, we talked about creating a spirit of volunteerism," said Osgood principal Marilee Cantelmo. "Our librarian, Anne O'Leary found a book called the 'Mitten Tree,' which introduces kids to thinking about those less fortunate."

O'Leary showed the book to art teacher Betsy Ogden and the children made hand-sewn mittens in their art class.

"The children hung the mittens which they made on the tree, and then we gave them to shelters in the area," Cantelmo said.

Inspired by their art project, Samantha said she and a few of her classmates set out to do even more for those less fortunate.

"We went to Ms. Cantelmo and said that we wanted to do something," she said. "We decided to make posters and we put cans in every classroom and the teacher's room with labels saying that the money would go to earthquake victims."

Osgood students have raised $359.68 since fundraising began in late February, and a check will be sent to the Red Cross to aid the relief effort.

"A lot of math was involved, as well as a lot of rolling coins" said Jeanne Hanson, the teacher of the third-graders who spearheaded the project. "There were mainly pennies."

Hanson also noted the efforts of two first-grade students, Jennifer Spofford and Abigail Faulkner, who made significant contributions of their own toward the project.

"They collected 677 bottles," she said. "I think they raised $38 from those bottles."

Samantha said she was happy that the money raised by her and her classmates would help ease the suffering of others.

"I feel very proud," she said.

Noble and Greenough School graduates five Cohasset residents

Headmaster Richard H. Baker announces that the following Cohasset residents graduated Wednesday, June 9, from Noble and Greenough School in Dedham:

Margaret Goedecke, daughter of Peter and Jane Goedecke of Cohasset, graduated with High Academic Distinction and plans to attend Middlebury College in the fall. Goedecke was a member of the varsity field hockey and lacrosse teams. She had the honor of being chosen by her classmates to speak during the graduation ceremony. Her speech was entitled "Road Rage," in which she discussed how people need to slow down the fast pace of life, saying, "Life shouldn't be about getting there first - it's about enjoying the ride and about the manner in which we reach our individual successes."

William MacPherson, son of Russ and Susie MacPherson of Cohasset, plans to attend Colby College in the fall. MacPherson has been on the honor roll during his six years at Nobles, was a resident advisor for the five-day boarding community and played varsity lacrosse.

Stefanie Noering, daughter of Dick and Sabina Noering of Cohasset, graduated with Academic Distinction and plans to attend Williams College in the fall. Noering was co-captain of the varsity field hockey team and a member of the varsity lacrosse team.

Anne Elizabeth Bentley Palone, daughter of Michael and Margaret Palone of Cohasset, graduated with High Academic Distinction and plans to attend Stanford University in the fall. Palone was inducted into the Noble and Greenough Cum Laude Society, is a National Merit Scholarship Commended Student, and is this year's recipient of the Epes Sargent Dixwell Medal for Latin. She has volunteered as a teacher and supervisor at Fundacion Atenea, a home for abandoned and orphaned children in Caracas, Venezuela; as a supervisor at Nice Day Care in Jamaica Plain; and at the City Year Vacation Day Camp in South Boston.

Palone was a member of Shield, the admissions tour guide organization for four years, and was on the layout staff of the yearbook. She was photography co-editor of the award-winning, student-run school paper, the Nobleman, and was the curator for the Siblings at Nobles photography show in the fall of 1998. Palone was a resident advisor for the five-day boarding community, played junior varsity soccer and hockey, and was a coxswain on the boys' varsity rowing team.

Morgan Sandell, son of Jim and Nancy Sandell of Cohasset, plans to attend Trinity College of Connecticut in the fall. During his junior year, Sandell studied abroad for the spring semester at St. Stephen's School in Rome, Italy. While there, he studied art history, Italian history, and classical studies in addition to his regular subjects, and played soccer for a team that won the title of League Champions. During his four years at Nobles, Sandell volunteered at the Brantwood Camp as a counselor, working with underprivileged children, and he was a resident advisor for the five-day boarding community. He was an All-League varsity soccer player for all of his high school career at Nobles, as well as a two-

SmartBusiness.℠ Rockland Trust's flexible line of credit for small businesses with big ideas.

Ideas grow a business and maximize profits. But it takes money to implement them. And in today's competitive environment, when a great idea comes along, you want to be able to move on it. Now. The last thing you want is to fill out a raft of forms. And wait. And wait some more.

$50,000 HASSLE-FREE.

That's why Rockland Trust developed the no-hassle SmartBusiness Credit Line for small businesses. It offers just what you're looking for:

- Credit lines up to $50,000 let you think big–and make it happen.
- Affordability. The variable interest rate is just 2% over Rockland Trust's Base Rate. The annual fee is $35. (Please call for current rates.)
- Monthly payments are deducted directly from your checking account. (Minimum payment is 2% of the outstanding balance.)
- The option of using SmartBusiness as overdraft protection for your Rockland Trust Business Checking Account.

Summer clearance sale at the Consignment Shop

Bargains galore will attract shoppers from Brockton to Quincy/Milton for the Famous Annual Summer Sale of the Social Service League's Cohasset Consignment Shop to be held Sat. July 10 to July 24 located on Route 3A, Tedeschi Plaza.

Designer clothing for men, women, including items for larger women, children, and sport wear for all ages. In addition there is a wide selection of goblets, Lenox bowls, Hummell antiques, crystal punch bowls, French Howland gold rim china, marine paintings, wicker baskets, cookbooks, and linens.

Manager Andi Merrill said shop hours are Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday 12 noon to 4 p.m. For over four decades the proceeds from the consignment shop support the myriad of worthy programs including scholarship funds for towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate, and Cohasset. Merrill added that the show is staffed by volunteers and should you have questions call 383-0687.

The shop will be closed July 25-August 10 and Fall and Winter consigning start Wednesday Aug. 1 through Saturday, Aug. 14, from 10 a.m. to Noon.

Kentucky carillonneur in recital

John Courter, professor of music, college organist, and carillonneur at Berea College, Berea, Ky., will be the featured artist for the third in the current series of six summer recitals on the 57-bell Taylor carillon at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, Sunday, July 11, at 6 p.m. This recital is part of the 75th Anniversary Celebration of the Cohasset carillon. Mr. Courter will play a varied program, including pieces originally composed for carillon by Matthias Van den Gheyn, Ronald Barnes, Staf Nees, Kamiel Lefevere (St. Stephen's first carillonneur) and his own composition, "A Tribute to [Aaron] Copland." Also included will be transcriptions and arrangements from the works of Purcell, Handel, Gershwin (composed in 1924, the year the first 23 bells were installed), Victor Young and Richard Rodgers. The recital will be given regardless of weather conditions. In case of rain, the bells may be heard from parked cars. Printed programs, concert schedules and carillon brochures will be available, both on Cohasset Common and at prime listening areas suggested on the back of the program, and in a program stand by the church courtyard on Highland Avenue. Following the recital, listeners are invited to meet the artist, tour the tower and watch a demonstration of the carillon being played.

For more information, call Sally Slade Warner, St. Stephen's carillonneur, at (988) 475-2599; Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur at (781) 383-9599, or the church office at (781) 383-1083.

Sailing Club party

The Cohasset Sailing Club will be hold its annual opening party Saturday, July 10, from 8 p.m. to midnight — rain or shine. Members and guests are welcome. Dance music provided by the local band, "Bottom of the Fifth." Tickets are $5. You may bring your own refreshments. A shared appetizer or dessert is welcome.

Development moving ahead on Route 3A

Finalizing plans a long, slow process

By Brian Brennan and Mary Ford
STAFF WRITERS

If you've been one of the many people driving down Route 3A and wondering what is happening on the undeveloped lots and what is going on behind the scenes to bring new businesses and proposed medical offices to Cohasset, rest assured that plans are moving forward.

One of the proposed medical buildings is to be located up on the hill off Crocker Lane. Robert Schwandt, attorney and consultant for development for Crocker II Realty Trust, which owns the land on which the medical building is to be constructed, said that they plan to break ground soon.

"We're looking to begin in four to six weeks with site work, which we have to do because of the slope of the land." he said. "It's been a long process, but the planning board has been very fair with us."

Schwandt said that negotiations with prospective tenants, one of whom is a highly regarded Cohasset physician, are ongoing.

"We're in negotiations with certain tenants and we are seeking other tenants," he said while confirming that a lease is being executed with Healthcare South, whose president is Dr. Steven Golden. Golden operates Cohasset Family Practice at 12 Parkingway and was recently named 1999 Family Physician of the year by the Massachusetts Academy of Family Physicians.

The other proposed medical building is to be located at the former South Shore Chevy Geo site along with a proposed child-care center and a

Red Lion Inn gets smoking variance

Over objections from D&A committee

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

The bar at the newly renovated and expanded Red Lion Inn will not have to turn smokers away.

The board of health Tuesday voted to grant a variance to the town's smoking regulations that will allow smoking in the lounge area.

The area, which will seat 30 but have a capacity for about 50 people, will have its own, completely separate ventilation system from the rest of the restaurant and inn. The system is designed to create "negative pressure" so for example — if the pass-through, service window to the kitchen is open to the bar — the air from the bar will not pass into the kitchen.

Owner Gerde Ordelheide said requesting the variance is a business decision and pointed out that Hingham restaurants, which have suffered financially under that town's smoking ban, are now getting variances.

But Nancy Hurtig, who spoke for the drug & alcohol committee, said no matter what systems are installed the area is not safe if smoking is allowed.

Festival too circus-like

Some worry about carnival atmosphere

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

One of the inevitable facts of life in our changing society is that, no matter how some may yearn for the simple joys of days gone by, times change and it is often impossible to resurrect the past.

Some in the Cohasset community want to do just that, however, regarding the annual Festival on the Common. Festival organizers from the South Shore Art Center [SSAC] heard from concerned residents and selectmen Monday. At their meeting, selectmen suggested changes to the annual event designed to curb its commercialism and return it to its simpler days.

"It's only missing a Ferris wheel to make it a carnival," said Cohasset resident Peter Wood. "It's virtually impossible to park and I don't understand why the town allows this to mushroom. Fried dough on Cohasset Common is not necessary."

Selectman Diane Sullivan echoed Wood's feelings and said that the festival has become something other than an art exhibition.

"It's evolved into a circus atmosphere and it's become something that it wasn't intended to be," she said.

Dillon Bustin, executive director of the SSAC, told selectmen that festival organizers would make sure that the event remained tasteful.

"We've heard some of those same concerns and moved assertively to address those," he said. "We've disinvited some vendors but we still see it as an art exhibit. There's really not that mueh to do."

"It's only missing a Ferris wheel to make it a carnival."
—Cohasset resident Peter Wood.

Susan Redgate, president of the SSAC Board of Directors, said that the festival provided a number of services to Cohasset.

"We charge no admission and the festival is a great opportunity for

Warnings on smoking violations

The board of health issued warnings to Tedeschi's on South Main Street and Walgreens in Shaw's Plaza for selling cigarettes to a minor during a recent tobacco sting.

The South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative, a regional agency that includes Cohasset, conducts about four such stings a year to check that local businesses are in compliance with laws prohibiting the sale of tobacco products to anyone under the age of 18.

The board of health also required that the store employees undergo training.

Steve Bruni, manager at Walgreens, said the store's in-house policy is very tough. The employee who sold the cigarettes was fired, he said.

Laurie Nickerson, regional area manager at Tedeschi's, that the employee caught in the sting was warned but not let go. The individual had only been on the job 1-1/2 weeks, she said.

In addition to other in-house preventative measures, both stores require employees to sign a pamphlet stating they will not sell to minors.

Susan Cronin of the collaborative said if either store is caught selling tobacco to a minor again within a year, the store could lose its permit to sell tobacco products for up to seven days.

Privies at the marina

Cohasset Harbor Marina off Parker Avenue will be able to install two portable toilets as long as the structures meet town set back requirements, the health board said Tuesday.

In a letter to the board, the marina said the toilets would be removed by Oct. 15 and would probably not be needed next year because a hook-up to the town sewer line is expected.

No street lights complaints

Town Manager Mark Haddad reported that street lights were turned off on July 1 and that he had not received any complaints. Haddad did make a couple of changes to the original list based on recommendations from citizens.

"I turned off two lights on Hillside drive and left one light on in both Brewster Road and cedar acres lane," he said at the selectmen's meeting on Monday night.

Oceanside Bike Fest '99

Selectmen approved a request from the National Multiple Sclerosis Society for permission to go through Cohasset as part of its annual fundraising event known as the Oceanside Bike Fest. This year's event is scheduled to take place on Saturday, Sept. 18.

Petition on SPED sent to 351 towns

A petition asking for the reform of educational funding in the state has been circulated to 351 Massachusetts cities and towns and Town Manager Mark Haddad said the response has been outstanding.

"With something like this, we were hoping to maybe hear back from about 30 towns. I'm proud to say we've already gotten 66 responses, which is outstanding," he said.

The petition, drafted by Selectman Thomas Callahan, focuses on the inability of the state's schools to meet the needs of all of its students due to the unfunded state mandates on special education.

Haddad said that he would look into selectman Roseanne McMorris' idea of putting something concerning the petition into the Mass. Municipal Association bulletin.

Money from sale of Independence Building

In response to a letter from Peter and Rosalie Collins asking that $25,000 from the sale of the Independence Building be used to hire a director for the teen center, Town Manager Mark Haddad said that the money could not be given directly to the teen center because money from the sale of a town building can only be used on capital projects.

"That money can only be allocated by town meeting in November," Haddad said. "The teen center hopes to open in September."

Two vacancies on Elder Affairs

Selectman Roseanne McMorris reiterated at the selectmen's meeting on Monday night that two vacancies exist on the Council for Elder Affairs. Openings also exist on the Commission on Disabilities (4), Historical Commission (1), and Drug and alcohol Committee (4, including 2 student openings).

CHILD'S PLAY

If you think that back problems are limited to grownups, consider that a recent survey of 1,178 children of school age revealed that more than half of those surveyed experienced back pain. Those of adolescent age were most commonly afflicted with low back pain as a result of stresses endured during many athletic activities during the growth spurt. Other factors found to contribute to back pain among youngsters included previous back injury (such as would result from falling off a bike or skateboard), playing volleyball and watching TV. Girls were found to be more predisposed to back pain than boys. With this in mind, perhaps it makes sense to attend to our backs at earlier ages than previously thought by most parents.

Maybe your child could benefit from a professional, safe and gentle chiropractic exam. Through the use of conservative, non-surgical, drug-free care, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC provides chiropractic care from acute symptomatic relief to wellness care. We will only accept you as a patient if we sincerely feel we can help you. Chiropractic is a system of natural health care. Since you have only one life to live - why not live it in good health? Our "Mother's Morning Out" program will help you keep your children as healthy as possible. Call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. You have nothing to lose - and vibrant health to gain. Town history enters the tumultuous 60s

Book to tackle the last 50 years

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Jacqueline Dormitzer has had it with the 1950s. She's finished with that decade. Literally. For those not in the loop, Dormitzer is writing the latest volume of the history of Cohasset. She has just completed the first draft of the section of the book covering the 1950s.

The latest volume of the History of Cohasset won't be completed until sometime in 2001. But that doesn't mean the project will remain under wraps until it is completed. Dormitzer took a few minutes to talk about the 1950s section she's just completed, and to offer sneak peek at the next section, the tumultuous sixties.

"Actually, most history books agree that the seeds of discontent were planted in the 1960s and the 1970s were far more tumultuous," Dormitzer said. "Cohasset isn't a university town like Cambridge or Chicago, so it will be interesting to see how what effect the developments the Vietnam War and the politics of that time had on Cohasset."

The 1950s section of the book has turned into a work-in-progress, Dormitzer said. Although she has completed the first draft on the fifties, the information she's gathering on the 1960s is shedding new light on the developments of the previous decade. Gathering information on the 1950s and 1960s has been quite a challenge. Even though there were weekly newspapers in Cohasset at that time, like the Cohasset Cottager, no one thought to save hard copies or record the papers on microfiche. Fortunately, Dormitzer was able to find copies of the South Shore News and the South Shore Mirror on microfiche in Scituate. Both papers carried stories on South Shore communities like Cohasset, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, Hanover, Abington and Rockland.

Dormitzer rounded out the information she gathered on the fifties with interviews from 30 Cohasset residents who were living in town at that time.

"I have a lot of really interesting stories about them," she said. "Their stories will give the book a real oral history flavor."

Dormitzer's early research on the 1960s reveal a town still undergoing rapid residential growth. She said developers built many subdivisions in the 1960s. In 1961, consultant Alan Benjamin finished the town's first master plan, aptly titled "The Benjamin Report." The report detailed ways for the town to deal with rapid growth. It also presented a worst-case scenario in which the town would be built-out to its maximum capacity. But history has shown that the rapid growth of the fifties and sixties leveled of in the seventies.

"I've just started the 1960s, so there's nothing too startling to report yet," Dormitzer said. "St. Anthony's Church was built in the 1960s, the sailing club was founded, and Route 3A was developed further."

"It will be interesting to see how what effect the developments the Vietnam War and the politics of that time had on Cohasset."
— Jacqueline Dormitzer, author

Dormitzer said she is looking forward to moving through the decades of research and closing in on the modern era. She pointed out that there would be more research material available for the last two decades than from the 1950s through the 1970s.

"Right now, the material I have covers the biggest issues, because no one saved the old newspapers," Dormitzer said. "In 1978, the Historical Society began saving copies of The Cohasset Mariner (which was founded that year). The papers of the 1950s covered a lot of social events, but that changed with the news stories covered by The Cohasset Mariner. As I close in on the modern era, the research will be easier, but there will be a lot more information to deal with. That's going to take more time."

Dormitzer is writing the third of a three-volume history of Cohasset chronicling events from 1950 to the present. E. Victor Bigelow and Burt Pratt wrote the first two volumes, respectively. The third volume may also come in a CD-ROM version, although that option is still under consideration. The town is covering most of the book's publication costs. Town meeting approved $30,000 last year so work could begin on the book. The town will need to allocate another $30,000 at the fall town meeting to keep the project going. Sales of the book will offset the publication costs. The book is expected to sell for about $25-$30.

The Committee on Town History is always looking for photos and other material for inclusion in the book. Anyone wishing to submit material for the book can call committee Chairman Wigmore Pierson at 383-6940. Or send the items to the Committee on Town History in care of the selectmen's office at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Town manager to stay through 2002

Selectmen give Haddad an extension and raise

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Town Manager Mark Haddad was thrilled with the news that selectmen unanimously approved an extension which will keep him at the forefront of town affairs through 2002.

"I'm very pleased with the position and I have a fantastic group of department heads to work with, which makes it fun," he said. "It's challenging, but it's a great job."

Haddad, who has been Town Manager since August 1997, had requested the extension of his current contract, which pays him at $68,000 this year and was to expire next year.

"I wanted the extension for reasons of security and it seemed like the right time to do it. The board [of selectmen] was comfortable with it, so we decided to do it now rather than next year.

The new contract went into effect immediately and will pay Haddad $75,000 this year. The contract will expire on June 30, 2002 and its length ensures that Haddad will be around long enough to guide long-term projects through to their fruition.

"There are a lot of important projects to undertake in Cohasset and I want to make sure I'm here to see them completed," he said. "We need to consolidate town services with the schools and come up with a waste water management plan as well."

Selectman Roseanne McMorris praised Haddad's ability to oversee Cohasset's affairs.

"We are lucky to have such a great person in Mark," she said. "Initially, the board of selectmen were not entirely happy with the process by which we got a town manager. It takes a very special kind of personality to be able to work with so many different people and still get things done. He's done a terrific job."

Under the new contract, the town will pay Haddad an annual stipend of $1,800 for out-of-pocket expenses such as mileage and travel, the same stipend paid to the building inspector and the health agent.

The town will also pay $21.95 monthly for Haddad's internet connection, which he uses primarily for town business. The move is not unprecedented, as the town already pays for the internet connections of the town accountant and health agent.

Development moving ahead on Route 3A restaurant.

"I'm talking with three restaurant chains, three child-care centers and two different hospitals, said Donald Staszko of Cohasset Associates, owner of the 10-acre site.

Staszko explained that the interested hospitals wanted to provide satellite walk-in emergency care service, which would be housed in a building to be constructed, using the existing footprint of the former dealership showroom and offices.

The day care center would be housed in a new building to the left of the former dealership building, where Staszko had intended to build a bank but recent bank mergers sidelined that plan.

A proposed restaurant, likely a chain or theme restaurant, would be built to the right of the dealership where the foundation of the old Green Lantern restaurant remains.

Like many others involved in development, Staszko admitted some frustration with the amount of time that developing a site like his can take, but remained steadfast in his determination to complete the project.

"Yes, I'd like to see it happen now," he said. "But it will happen when it happens. I'm out there plugging every day."

There are still several vacancies at Tedeschi Plaza where Woolworth's was located.

Those working on the medical projects are not the only ones who find themselves burdened with the considerable tasks of finding tenants, adhering to regulations, and satisfying town boards and officials.

"Development is a long, slow process," said Bill Cavanaro, owner of Cohasset Collision, which will be moving from its current location behind the former South Shore Chevy Geo dealership to a new building on 3A at the site of the old golf driving range near Crocker Lane. "We've been working on this move for two years."

Planning board chairman Alfred Moore said that development these days is difficult, no matter what which town or city is in question.

"These are the 1990's and there is tremendous work involved in developing properties in this day and age," he said. "It's a lot more than a planning board hitting people over the head with regulations that have to be adhered to.

"There is the issue of nailing down tenants and there are engineering and legal problems that have to be worked out as well."

Cavanaro said that construction on the new Cohasset Collision building is slated to begin this fall and that he hoped the new site would be fully operational by spring, but said he was in no hurry because the project has taken so long already.

"We hope to have the building up by winter, because it's hard to do construction when it's really cold," he said. "It will be a slow transition between the two sites through the winter."

A slow transition is also taking place at Tedeschi Plaza, where The Video Scene, a video store with a location in Hanover, is slated to open in one of the spaces formerly occupied by Woolworth's.

"I still have a lease with them," said John Whalen, director of leasing for Tedeschi Realty. "I don't anticipate them opening anytime soon, however."

Whalen said that he also has a medium space available, which he said would be perfect for a fabric store or a quality furniture shop.

"I thought I had it leased to a fabric store," Whalen said of the vacancy, "but I've learned in this business that nothing is ever final until the ink is dry."

Moore said that Cohasset , unlike some other communities, consciously chose to zone the land along 3A as a business district, but insisted that the planning board would ensure that the look and feel of businesses fit the Cohasset mold.

"A number of towns wanted to see the land along 3A remain residential," he said. "Cohasset didn't see it that way. What we've tried to do is hold development to a higher standard, such as with the new Shaw's and Stop & Shop. We want new buildings to be better looking than what's been there before."

Health board to hold CHL site assignment hearings

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The town has moved one step closer to making sure the Cohasset Heights Limited landfill remains closed forever. The Cohasset Board of Health has scheduled site assignment hearings for the privately-owned CHL on Sept. 8 & 9. The site assignment is the primary approval that allows landfills to operate. Without a site assignment, CHL would not be able re-open its operation in Cohasset.

The local anti-landfill citizens' group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE) has been lobbying the board of health for years to conduct site assignment hearings on the landfill. SAFE initiated this latest request, which the board of health approved unanimously.

"We're very gratified that the board of health finally granted site assignment hearings," said SAFE member Mary Gainor, who spoke before the board of health on the matter recently. "We've been working on this for 11 years, and some of our members opposed the original site assignment in 1976 before SAFE was formed. The members of the board of health told us CHL might try to delay the hearings, but at least we have a tentative date."

Gainor said the members of the board of health listened to SAFE's presentation, then approved the hearings without discussion or comment.

The site assignment is the primary approval that allows landfills to operate. Without a site assignment, Cohasset Heights Limited landfill would not be able re-open its operation in Cohasset.

SAFE's latest push for site assignment hearings came about because of plans by state officials to lift a moratorium on new landfill sites. State officials say that more space is needed to accommodate increasing amounts of solid waste generated by Massachusetts residents. Gainor showed members of the health board magazine articles from Consumer Reports and Parade detailing a growing need nationwide for more landfill space. SAFE members fear that the owners of CHL could somehow overcome their current legal problems and somehow convince state officials to re-open the landfill.

"SAFE has repeatedly sought site assignment hearings with the hope of revocation so we can close the landfill permanently," Gainor said. "If DEP decided to approve additional landfill space for solid waste, CHL might find a way to re-open. Without a site assignment approval, there couldn't even be a request for CHL to re-open. That is what SAFE is hoping for — a revocation of the site assignment."

CHL shut down nearly a year ago for a number of reasons, among them the admission at that time by CHL-owner Paul Barry that there was no room left in the landfill. Since then, SAFE Vice President John K. McNabb Jr. discovered that CHL did not possess a legal special permit to stay open. That development, along with several legal losses by CHL, has created the hope among CHL opponents that the landfill is truly closed down permanently.

The town has been meeting with attorneys for CHL behind closed doors to negotiate a closure and post-closure plan. Members of the town's CHL subcommittee meet only in executive session and refuse to discuss details of the negotiations in public.

Last month, the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) agreed to hold a public hearing and offer a comment period to allow residents to discuss CHL's closure and post-closure plan. CHL presented the plan to DEP in May. Landfill opponents say the plan is inadequate and fails to address the long-term environmental and financial impacts of the landfill on the town.

Sprinkler system for ball field

Town manager Mark Haddad announced at the selectmen's meeting on Monday night that he has asked DPW Superintendent Harold Litchfield work with Little League representatives to determine the feasibility of instilling an underground sprinkler system at the Beechwood Ball Field. Haddad said he would keep the selectmen informed of Litchfield's progress.

Atlantic Ave. to get new sidewalk

Despite objections from Mitzi and Walter Railsback, in front of whose property most of it will go, Town Manager Mark Haddad said he will go ahead with a proposed sidewalk that will run from Cunningham Bridge to Beach Street along Atlantic Avenue. Selectmen deadlocked 2-2 on the sidewalk, leaving the decision to Haddad.

Power outage is discussion topic

Bob Noble, regional public relations director for Bell Atlantic, appeared before selectmen on Monday night to discuss ways to prevent another phone outage like the one that happened last month and disabled 911 service.

"911 is a very critical service for our citizens," Town Manager Mark Haddad told Noble. "We cannot afford to have it down."

Selectman Fred Koed said he wants to see steps taken to prevent an outage in the future.

"I want an agreed-upon solution to make sure this doesn't happen again. Our fire call boxes are gone now and we depend on our phone service," he said.

Koed also said he would like to talk to a Bell Atlantic engineer regarding a backup plan if a future outage should happen.

"I consider this very serious and I would like to see a proposal to beef up our backup plan should it happen again."

Beach, RTF stickers available

You will need vehicle registrations, or if not a Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease) to obtain beach and RTF stickers.. You are encouraged to purchase your sticker through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Stickers will be on sale on the following schedule: Monday and Wednesday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Thursday evening 5 to 7 p.m. and Friday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Stickers will be on sale at the DPW building Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Beach stickers are $7 per vehicle, and $3 per vehicle for elders over 60. RTF stickers are $80 per family, for senior citizens over 65 will now be $65 and for a single resident $40.

Permits now being issued will expire May 31, 2000.

Red Lion Inn gets smoking variance

favors by putting in a fancy ventilation system in," she said. "Someone will be puffing a cigarette next to you and that would be a danger to your health."

Ordelheide asked that anti-smokers not go overboard.

"I came here from Germany because I wanted freedom," he said. "Don't take it to an extreme that's all I am saying. I want a viable business."

After discussion about the lounge capacity versus the number of seats, health board member Stephen Bobo said the design that the applicant presented met the needs of the town.

"We have a regulation and this plan meets the regulation," Bobo said. "They don't have to do anymore to fulfill the regulation. Let's vote on it."

Bobo successfully argued that the lounge capacity is not the question. The town requires that no more than 25 percent of the total seats in a restaurant be set aside for a smoking area. The restaurant at the inn will have upwards of 150 seats, Ordelheide said.

"Don't tell us you're doing us any favors by putting in a fancy ventilation system in, someone will be puffing a cigarette next to you and that would be a danger to your health."

NANCY HURTIG, SPEAKER FOR THE DRUG & ALCOHOL COMMITTEE

Two other establishments in town, KoKo Island and Atlantica, have also been issued smoking variances.

During the discussion, Ordelheide presented a brief overview of the inn, which is slated to open by Thanksgiving. In the basement, a wine bar, which will have live jazz music on Friday and Saturday nights, is planned. There will also be a sauna in the basement along with wine cellar and storage areas. The main floor will feature the lounge, dining room and state-of-the-art kitchen. Upstairs, 15 luxury suites with four-poster beds and a Jacuzzi in every room are planned. Ordelheide plans to build a Vermont-style barn on the back of the site, which will include a big fireplace where guests can relax, he said. A swimming pool is also planned. Next door at the Lilac House, which he also owns, a bakery, bistro and old-fashioned retail store will be constructed. The upstairs of the Lilac House will include a function hall and office.

THE DESIGNING WOMAN
by Kathleen Fox ASID

BALANCING ACT

When arranging collections or individual pieces on mantels or shelves, it helps to strike a natural balance. When setting out to achieve a proper balance, start by assigning a visual "weight" to each object in relation to the objects that surround it. For instance, a small dark piece may actually appear to be visually heavier than a larger, light colored one, by virtue of its ability to draw attention to itself. With this in mind, arrange various objects so that their visual weights are evenly distributed across the length of a shelf or mantel. Within this context, asymmetrical balance may be used to achieve an informal feel, while symmetry can be utilized to achieve a more formal look.

THE DESIGNING WOMAN can take the mystery out of the interior design process. Our goal is to create beautiful, harmonius rooms that reflect your personal tastes. As interior design specialists, we remain on the forefront of fashion ideas and share those with our clients to achieve the best possible results. We work with you and your budget to create an environment that stimulates your imagination. Call us at 781-383-6411 to arrange a convenient consultation.

families to be exposed to a cultural event," she said. "We also give scholarships to students who want to study art and we'd be happy to make a donation to the town, in consideration of our budget, for the use of the common."

Redgate's offer of a donation to the town came as a result of a call by a number of selectmen that the SSAC give something back to the town for the use of the common.

"Is the art center going to give any money to the town to contribute to an underground sprinkler system for the common?" Selectman Merle Brown asked the SSAC officials at the meeting. "The town doesn't gain anything from it. Some downtown businesses may gain from it, but the town itself does not."

SSAC vice president Dick DeLima reiterated Redgate's pledge to make a donation of around $2,000 to the town, but said he was hamstrung by budgetary concerns.

"The art center has a projected deficit of $35,000 by the end of the fiscal year in September," DeLima said. "The festival brings in a positive cash flow of $20,000, but $18,000 of that comes from local businesses to underwrite the festival. We're not talking about a treasure trove or a gold mine here."

Selectman Roseanne McMorris said that she feels the festival is a wonderful event and told SSAC members at the meeting that the town will continue to support it.

"With any event that big, there will be some kid of little problems. Maybe some people don't like the character of it, but I know my family and I really enjoyed it. It's a wonderful event."

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he enjoyed the event as well, and thought its problems were minor in nature and could be easily solved.

"I thought Ronnie [McMorris] summed it up very well at the meeting," Haddad said. "My family and I had a great time. I did sit down with Dillon and [event organizer] Juliana Lovell and express some concerns about the parking situation on North Main Street and Highland Avenue as well as the need for more portable toilets. But I was extremely pleased with the event overall."

McMorris said that people should remember that other town groups benefit from the event in addition to the art center.

"A lot of groups in town piggyback on the success of the festival," she said. "The Second Congregational Church has the Strawberry Festival, the Little League has a raffle there, and the First Parish has their gospel concert as well."

LIBRARY CORNER

Artist of the Month

Betty Archer, a local watercolorist, is the featured artist for July and August at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. After years of working with oils and pastels, Archer experienced the feeling of "freedom, fluidity and light" in watercolors that is evident in her display.

Archer studied at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and at the University of New Hampshire. Her original vocation was as an occupational therapist, but during her college years she was urged by a mentor to convert her studies to art.

Archer has studied under a number of well-known local artists like Charles Mahoney, Constance Flavell Pratt and Virginia Avery. She has exhibited at the South Shore Art Center, The Duxbury Art Show, the North River Arts Society and many others.

Archer is an award-winning watercolorist whose most recent accomplishment was second place in Watercolor at the South Shore Art Festival for her painting of "The Girls." This painting and many others are on display in the reading room at the library.

The Children's Room

Kindergarten and younger readers who read with their families are eligible to earn mini erasers for books read. These cute miniature erasers include a penguin, a koala bear, panda, lion and a zebra. Collect them all!

Parents and their children can come to the Children's Room to pick up their reading logs: Call Mrs. Terry, children's librarian, for more information on all children's programs at 383-1348.

DOUBLE ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Britt Covell is not only a member of the '99 graduating class from Cohasset High School, she also completed her freshman year of college at Johnson and Wales University in the same year. Britt was admitted last fall at J&W in their Access program. With the cooperation of Cohasset High School's faculty and staff, J&W provided Britt with a curriculum that satisfied both her freshman year college requirements and her senior year high school requirements. Britt is a business marketing and management major at J&W with a concentration in retail fashion merchandizing. She made J&W's dean's list for all three trimesters. Britt has recently been accepted by Nordstrom's, the nation's premier fashion retailer, to begin training with them at their new Providence, R.I., location while she continues to work on her four-year degree at J&W.

Needless to say, we are all very proud of you, Britt!

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Backtracking on Greenbush

Gov. Paul Cellucci opened the door last week to the prospect of sidelining Greenbush for good. The red flag that he is holding up is the beleaguered rail spur's price tag, which is now running anywhere from $285 to $400 million.

How much is too much? We won't be kept in suspense for long because the MBTA is hiring a consultant to the tune of $50,000 who will have the answer in just a matter of weeks.

The new State Secretary of Transportation Kevin Sullivan — who also heads up the MBTA — took a field trip two weeks ago to see for himself what all the fuss is about along the Greenbush right-of-way. In a nutshell, he toured the proposed layover site on the Driftway in Scituate, heard about flooding concerns on Ripley Road in Cohasset Village and looked at antique buildings in Hingham Square that are only feet from the tracks.

He listened, learned and then obviously beat a path to the governor's office.

Over the "Greenbush decade," we've written dozens of editorials about the train. As a newspaper company, we have always believed that the railroad would provide the safest, fastest, most convenient method of public transit for the largest number of commuters in the towns we represent on the South Shore. And with the overwhelming success of its sister spurs to Plymouth and Middleboro, few could argue that Greenbush would not be as popular.

But today, the debate has gone well beyond the numbers who would benefit from the option of train travel in our towns. It's gone beyond grandstanding and popularity contests at town meetings or at the polls.

The big picture is now clouded with legitimate environmental concerns, which range from pollution of the North River to diesel pollutants in the atmosphere. Some of those concerns have landed the MBTA in court. To their credit, Greenbush rail detractors have spent innumerable hours lobbying officials and doing their homework on a range of fronts. Their hard work appears to be paying off.

But now the governor's backtracking on the train begs the question, what now?

What if there is no Greenbush line?

What are the transportation alternatives for our traffic-clogged towns?

Is the MBTA just going to pack its bags and go home?

While we can't say for sure what the future of the Greenbush line holds, it is clear the train is on life support. Without an influx of cash and unflagging commitment from the governor, the plug will be pulled.

But there should be no doubt, no matter which side of the Greenbush tracks you're on, our region is in desperate need of public transportation. And that need only continues to become more critical as our towns grow. To that end, we call on the governor and the legislature to commit equivalent resources to transportation alternatives if Greenbush is derailed once and for all.

We will continue to use the bully pulpit of our editorial page to cry out for fast, clean and efficient public transportation for the residents of our towns. We hope the anti-Greenbush crowd will join in this effort.

Playhouse Associates' support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the students at Cohasset High School and the Arts Boosters, I would like to thank the South Shore Playhouse Associates for their generous grant this year.

We try to use the funds raised for the arts in a judicious way. We help with some extra curriculum items for the art teachers to enhance the already rich program. Also, if there is a need which is not included in the school budget, we try to see if we can provide some assistance. This year, together with the Parent School Organization, we purchased a new black curtain for the auditorium stage. We also helped to repair some instruments for the instrumental music program and provide some of the entry fees for competitions for drama, choral and instrumental music. So you can see, this grant money is greatly appreciated.

The South Shore Playhouse Associates and the South Shore Music Circus are true assets to the town of Cohasset. The members of the Arts Boosters send our sincerest wishes for the best season yet in 1999.

Relay for Life support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the American Cancer Society, I want to thank everyone in the community who took part in the Relay for Life at Cohasset High School May 21 and 22. Your participation demonstrates your commitment to the American Cancer Society's mission of eliminating cancer as a major health problem.

A special thanks goes to the Relay for Life committee, the team captains, the team members and all the volunteers who helped us almost double the number of teams and the money raised this year.

Thanks to the efforts of this community, we raised more than $75,000 to help maintain the American Cancer Society's programs of research, education and services to local patients and their families. In addition to this financial support, approximately 500 local residents gave a vote of confidence to the American Cancer Society by taking part in the Relay for Life.

Although cancer continues to touch so many of us, the Relay for Life was a strong and positive statement of our hope that, soon, this disease will be conquered. I am grateful to all of you who took part. Your American Cancer Society is here in your community, ready to help. Please call 24 hours a day, 7 days a week at (800) ACS-2345 if you need information on cancer or patient services. You can also visit the American Cancer Society's online information Web site at www.cancer.org, or call the Survivorship Hotline, (877) 333-HOPE, for detailed discussion on cancer topics.

Mortgage banker to head Cohasset GOP

Janet Fogarty of 114 Elm St. has been elected to head the Cohasset Republican Town Committee as increased business commitments forced John Flanagan, an investment consultant, to resign.

A graduate of the University of Southern California, London School of Economics, Oxford University and Moscow State University, Fogarty is senior loan consultant with a Seattle, Washington bank with offices in Quincy.

Fogarty also is a member of the Massachusetts Mortgage Bankers Association, South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the University of Southern California Northeast Alumni Organization and Liaison Recruitment for Northeast. She also received the prestigious President Club Award that recognizes top performers nationwide from Washington Mutual, the largest savings and loan in the country and the eighth largest overall bank with $165 billion in assets.

Fogarty will hold a meeting of the Cohasset Town Committee July 27 at 7:30 p.m. to plan the annual Cohasset Cookout to be held at the seaside estate of Ted and Julie Guild, from 4:30 to 7 p.m. with recently elected state GOP chair, Rep. Brian Crest and minority leader Rep. Fran Marini along with other state, county and local officials who will be invited as well as Sen. Bob Hedlund and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

Thursday, July 22, all South Shore residents can meet with Gov. Paul Cellucci at a reception to be held at Plimouth Plantation from 6 to 8 p.m. Tickets are $25 and are to help GOP candidates. For more information, call Janet Fogarty at 383-3036 or Polly Logan, 383-0031.

Edmundson may seek Hedlund's seat

Joins two other likely candidates

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

A 41-year-old Hingham businessman is planning to throw his hat into the ring for the state senate race.

Philip Edmundson of Cottage Street joins fellow democrats, former Marshfield selectman James Cantwell, now of Weymouth, and Ted LeClair, a Marshfield resident and cranberry farmer, as likely rivals for their party's nomination for the Plymouth-Norfolk seat held by Sen. Robert L. Hedlund.

Hedlund, a Weymouth republican with Hingham roots, will surrender his seat if he wins the Weymouth mayoral race in January.

Edmundson, who is in his seventh year the Hingham School Committee, said he had his eye on the seat before Hedlund announced his mayoral plans last month and will go ahead regardless of what happens in Weymouth. (If Hedlund, who is considered one of the front runners for mayor should win, there would be a special election to fill his unexpired term. If he loses, the senator, whose term expires in January 2001, has said he will seek reelection).

"I plan to run in either event," said Edmundson, who is married with three children. "Whether there is a special election in 2000 or one on the normal schedule."

Meanwhile local republicans are mum on who in their party might try to succeed the popular senator who ran unopposed in the last election. Although they are developing a list of possible candidates, there won't likely be any announcements until Hedlund's fate is known.

Republicans don't see this as a disadvantage, said Cohasset's Polly Logan, who is vice-chairman of the state Republican Party.

"Although Hedlund is a favorite to win, he will still be in the senate until January regardless of how the contest comes out in Weymouth," she said. "Potential Republican candidates will be prepared to run if he should win."

Among Edmundson's priorities are education, stronger gun control laws, transportation and affordable, accessible health care.

He explained that the state is holding up the funding mechanism for cities and towns while it argues over the definition of special education.

"The problem needs to be solved and I don't see Bob Hedlund doing anything on that issue," said Edmundson.

He thinks restoration of the Greenbush railroad line is dead. But Edmundson said, if he were state senator, he would be talking about how the South Shore is going to get the $250 million slated for Greenbush. The area needs the money for transportation alternatives and infrastructure such as road projects like Rt. 228, Fore River Bridge improvements, water transportation, harbor dredging and sea walls.

"The problem needs to be solved and I don't see Bob Hedlund doing anything on that issue."

— Philip Edmundson on special education funding

"I don't see any next step," he said.

Edmundson said he is still in the learning stages about the proposed access road to the former Naval Air Station which is opposed by a large group of neighbors in south Hingham and therefore, hasn't formulated a position on that issue yet.

He feels utilizing regional airports is a better solution than expanding Logan. The proposed expansion would send more planes over Hingham, local opponents say.

"A regional solution makes more sense than stuffing another runway into Logan," he said. "It's crowded enough there."

In 1983 Edmundson co-founded William Gallagher Associates, a commercial insurance brokerage firm that has 75 employees. The company is primarily based in Boston but also has offices in Maryland near Washington, DC and in Paris, France and specializes in insurance for biotechnology, computer software and Internet companies.

If elected, Edmundson, who graduated from Amherst College in 1980 and earned his master's degree in entrepreneurial studies at Babson in 1993, said he would work full-time as a senator. He said his business is such that he can have a senior professional step in and assume his responsibilities at Gallagher.

Edmundson said he is willing to put some of his own money into the race.

"Like most candidates for public office, I am willing to commit some of my personal resources to my campaign," he said.

"I have had a very successful business career and I understand that I will need to leverage my prior successes in order to get my message out to voters."

Cantwell, 32, an aide to Congressman William Delahunt and a former Norfolk County assistant district attorney, is also a potential candidate. He is married and expecting a child in October and recently moved to Weymouth from Marshfield. The Plymouth-Norfolk District stretches from Weymouth to Duxbury.

Philip Edmundson

Cantwell stops short of declaring he is a candidate.

"It's frankly so early. It's time to enjoy the summertime," he said. "But it is something I am very interested in and I will be making that decision (to run or not) with my wife."

LeClair is a Scituate native who lives in Marshfield. He has already formed a campaign committee with the state's Office of Campaign and Political Finance. He is founder and president of LeClair Brothers Cranberry Co., is part owner and vice president of Webster Cranberry Co., and is a former Navy officer.

The 30-year-old bachelor said although he hasn't officially announced, he is in the race.

"I'm definitely going to run," he said.

LeClair isn't deterred by the competition.

"The more the merrier," he said.

MBTA to hire Greenbush cost consultant

Third party will do a cost analysis of the project

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

The message from the MBTA concerning the controversial Greenbush commuter rail line seems clear. The state transportation authority wants to know whether the project makes financial sense with a tunnel under Hingham Square, and they want to know as soon as possible.

"We will hire a consultant in the next couple of weeks," said Jon Carlisle, spokesman for Massachusetts Secretary of Transportation and MBTA chairman Kevin Sullivan. "We want to get this done as expediently as possible."

Carlisle could not confirm published reports that the consultant would cost $50,000, saying instead that the $50,000 figure was merely a rough estimate of what a consultant might cost.

He did, however, say that the attraction to the idea of hiring a consultant was to gain an angle of objectivity that may have been missing in previous studies of the project's cost.

"We really want a third party evaluation of the project's cost," he said. "Everything we've done so far has been in house. We want to see if a tunnel underneath Hingham Square is cost prohibitive as we think it is."

Sullivan has previously mentioned that the total cost of the Greenbush project needs to remain below $400 million for the MBTA to reasonably consider it. With a projected price tag of $285 million without a tunnel, the tunnel would have to be constructed for $115 million or less for the project to come in under Sullivan's declared ceiling of $400 million.

"We have estimates of four tunnel options, with the least expensive being $95 million and the most expensive being $210 million," said Andrew Brennan, MBTA Secretary of Environmental Affairs, at the Greenbush site visit on June 30, which was attended by MBTA and town officials alike.

Those estimates will be redone by the consultant which the MBTA hires, but Hingham selectman Katherine Reardon has no problem with the MBTA's decision to revisit the projected costs.

"I'm pleased to see the openness on the part of the MBTA to take a fresh look," she said.

"I've seen more open minded statements from them in the last month than I had in the last eight years."

Cohasset Mitigation Committee chairman Tom Gruber said he hoped that this latest development would finally lead the project to some sort of completion.

"If they're going to put in the train, then I wish they'd just put in the train," he said. "If they're not going to put in the train, then I wish they'd say that."

Carlisle made it clear that the MBTA still plans to forge ahead with Greenbush, but said that, by virtue of a previous agreement with the federal government, South Shore transportation needs would still have to be met.

"We still feel that Greenbush is the best and the most cost effective way to improve transportation in the South Shore," he said. "If Greenbush doesn't go through, we'd have to get some cars off the road in the South Shore as mitigation for the Central Artery project."

The number of cars that must be taken off the road to satisfy the Central Artery mitigation is unclear, but what is crystal clear to everyone involved is that some sort of improved transportation is imperative if Greenbush doesn't come.

Reardon wants the MBTA to fully explore all transportation options for the South Shore should Greenbush be dropped, but said she isn't sure the project will be scrapped, as so many are now predicting.

"I've been involved with this for so many years that I'm not going to jump to any conclusions about the project being dropped," she said. "If it is dropped, there should not be any excuses [from the MBTA] for not looking at all the options. They could do a lot for the cost of the project without the tunnel."

Reardon added that a halfhearted approach on the part of the MBTA would not solve the transportation ills of South Shore commuters.

"Running a couple of extra buses won't be enough," she said. "It is my hope that they will continue to consider any potential boat transportation, which works in Hingham because they run enough boats. Perhaps with the access road to the Weymouth Naval Base, there can be more parking potential for the other two commuter rail lines."

QUESTIONS

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from the week of July 5-9. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

HMOs (H 4509) House 154-0, gave near final approval to a bill regulating health maintenance organizations (HMOs). A key provision creates a managed care oversight board to license, regulate and oversee HMOs. The bill also requires HMOs to cover emergency room treatment for a patient if the patient's symptoms meet the "prudent layperson" standard. That standard is one under which a person with average knowledge of health and medicine would feel his symptoms require emergency care. The measure requires coverage of the care, if the standard is met, even if it is determined that the person did not need it. Other provisions include allowing women to obtain OB/GYN services without the approval of a primary care physician; codifying into law a consumer's rights to appeal any denial of care including the right to outside reviews; and easier access to information by consumers. Supporters said the bill strikes a reasonable balance between patients, doctors and HMOs and is the result of months of input from all sides. They noted that while most Massachusetts residents are generally pleased with their HMOs, the bill will strengthen patients' rights, protect their interests and provide quality medical care without overregulating the industry. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

Senator: Y

PEDIATRIC SPECIALISTS(H 4509) House 150-0, approved an amendment requiring HMOs to cover the services of pediatric care specialists for children who need such services. Amendment supporters said this will ensure quality health care for children by simply ensuring that HMOs cover the costs of doctors who specialize in various areas of treating children. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment).

Senator: Y

SUSPEND RULES House 123-25, suspended rules to allow immediate consideration of the bill regulating HMOs. Supporters of rule suspension said the legislature has been working on this bill for months and urged speedy consideration in order to approve it and protect consumers. Opponents of rule suspension said this new version of the bill has only been in print for a day and noted members have not even had time to read it. They argued it is unfair and anti-democratic to constantly suspend rules to allow quick approval of bills which members have not had time to read. (A "Yea" vote is for rule suspension. A "Nay" vote is against it).

No summertime blues for Cohasset kids

Opportunities abound for recreation and fun

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

For many parents, the summer months are viewed with a mixture of excitement and anxiety. While happy to have their kids around all day, many struggle with what to do with the youngsters all day. As any parent knows, idle hands are apt to be mischievous ones as well, and so Cohasset parents are finding a variety of activities to occupy their children during the lazy, hazy days of summer.

"My theory is that kids just want to play during the summer," said Lucia Flibotte, mother of four children ranging in age from four to nine years old. "We live in this beautiful town with this great beach and so we mainly beach it and swim it. We don't want to sign them up for a ton of stuff and schedule them to death."

Trisha Leahy takes a different approach with her six children, who fly about in a flurry of activity, going to various practices, jobs, and other activities.

"Our kids do everything: sailing, soccer, tennis, baseball, swimming, you name it," Leahy said. "They've hardly been home since school got out. I'm always running around with the kids but that's better than them being idle or getting into trouble."

Leahy said the biggest problem with having six kids who all have practices and places to be is to organize transportation and keep track of all of them.

"My oldest daughter, Megan, has her driver's license now and so she helps out a lot, shuttling the kids to different places," she said.

"But the other day, I needed to go to the store and I had to ride around on the bicycle because the kids had the car," she laughed.

Budding millionaires Andrew and Marcus Barrett proudly display the advertising campaign for their lemonade stand at 42 Sohier St. Andrew is at left.

While helping her kids build sand castles at Sandy Beach, Heidi Binney said that she enjoyed the fact that Cohasset offered both the opportunity to head out to the beach as well as more structured activities.

"I love bringing the kids to the beach, but it's nice to also be able to take them to swimming lessons and tennis lessons," she said.

While the recreational activities are nice, some kids in town are budding entrepreneurs and are using the summer months to make some serious cash, such as eight-year old Marcus Barrett and his four year-old brother Andrew, who operate a thriving lemonade stand in front of their home at 42 Sohier St.

Twenty-five cents will buy you a paper cup full of one of the best lemonades money can buy, expertly poured by Marcus. Young Andrew is the ice man, and his skill at pulling apart ice cubes is legendary.

"Sometimes the ice cubes clump together," he said. "But I know how to break them apart."

What will the Barrett boys do with their earnings? Invest in an internet stock and make a lifetime's worth of allowance, perhaps?

Not so, says Marcus. "We owe our mom five bucks," he said.

Elder affairs needs volunteer drivers

CEA volunteer van driver June Hubbard picks up Jackie Moore at the senior housing complex off Elm Street.

Commitment of only three hours a month

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

How often have you looked at the beautiful town in which you reside and say, "I wish I could do something to give back to Cohasset?" Prospective volunteers are often so overwhelmed at the variety of opportunities to serve the community that they cannot decide which to pursue. Though good-intentioned, they often end up doing nothing.

Cohasset Elder Affairs [CEA] is encouraging such well-intentioned citizens to volunteer as drivers for senior citizens who can no longer drive themselves, but need transportation to get to grocery stores, do local errands, go to shopping malls, or go to medical appointments.

"Volunteers only need to commit for 3 hours once a month or every two months," said Kathy Bryanton, director of CEA. "Those three hours can be in the morning or the afternoon, and we work with volunteers to meet their time frame. It isn't a long time commitment and volunteers are giving a wonderful service."

For those who do volunteer as drivers, the experience can be as beneficial to them as it is to the seniors.

"I like to do it, and I know there's a need," Mitzy Railsback said of driving the shuttle. "I meet a lot of great seniors that I wouldn't meet otherwise. It's a fun commitment and I thoroughly enjoy it."

June Hubbard, who brings a group of seniors to South Shore Plaza in Braintree once a month, echoed Railsback's positive feelings regarding her volunteer experiences.

"I've been doing it for 25 or 30 years," she said. "Volunteering gives me a great deal of pleasure and the seniors that I drive are a great group of people, and always very appreciative. We're kind of like 'The Braintree Club'."

Anna Abbruzzese, chairman of CEA and a volunteer driver herself, said the service which the volunteers provide genuinely helps the town's seniors enjoy a better quality of life.

"The shuttle gives seniors freedom and independence as well as an opportunity to go out and be social," she said.

"Volunteering gives me a great deal of pleasure and the seniors that I drive are a great group of people, and always very appreciative."
— June Hubbard

"The seniors expound on how much they enjoy the service and we're extremely lucky to have such wonderful volunteers."

One such volunteer is Joe Kelly of Scituate, who jumped at the chance to help out 10 years ago and has continued to do so for a decade.

"In Scituate, the drivers got paid and I wanted to do something that was strictly volunteer," he said. "I take people to shopping centers, doctors, hairdressers, whatever they want. It gives me a great feeling of helping other people."

Most of the volunteer drivers are seniors themselves, and as some of them have gotten older and become unable to drive the vans which CEA uses to transport the seniors, the number of volunteers has dwindled to an alarmingly low figure.

"We've gone from 53 drivers to 30 in one year," Bryanton said. "Cohasset has had this volunteer shuttle system for 20 years and we want to make sure it continues."

Railsback thinks an infusion of younger volunteers would greatly benefit the program.

"Frankly, I feel we should be trying to lure younger people into the group," she said. "I think that the seniors and the younger people would learn from each other."

Prospective volunteers must be licensed drivers who are at least 18 years of age, have sensitivity to the elderly, and must pass a criminal background check. Volunteers are then interviewed and CEA staff members work with their schedules to give them a designated day on which to drive.

"Being an older person, I like a scheduled thing," Hubbard said. "I drive to Braintree on the first Monday of every month, unless there's a holiday, and then I go the next Monday. It's become part of my routine."

Seniors are also alerted in advance regarding the shuttle's schedule. The schedule for the month is printed in the CEA newsletter and seniors must call24 hours in advance to reserve space in the van.

"This is one of the last volunteer shuttle services for seniors that is still around," Bryanton said. "The town takes great pride in the fact that it is volunteer. It's really a case of neighbor helping neighbor."

CEA also provides vans for purposes other than the shuttle service, which allows them to better serve the transportation needs of the town's seniors.

"We now have a medical van, which takes people within a 15-mile radius to doctors appointments," Bryanton said. "We also have a contracted service for transportation to Boston hospitals as well as a wheelchair accessible van which we share with Hingham and which we use on Tuesdays and Wednesdays."

Bryanton added that volunteer drivers are needed for both the medical van and the special needs van. For those who are not the behind-the-wheel type, escorts are also needed for both vehicles.

A mandatory training session for drivers of the special needs and medical vans will be held from 9:00 to 1:00 on August 14 at CEA, which is located at 3 North Main St.

Those wishing to serve as a volunteer driver for one of the vans should contact Kathy Bryanton at CEA at 383-9112.

Beechwood Bell Choir a ringing success

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

If you're looking to find a church service complete with bells and whistles, the Beechwood Congregational Church, located on Church St., can get you halfway there.

Featured in services there is the Beechwood Bell Choir, a group of six congregation members who also happen to be handbell ringers and which performs about once a month and always plays on Christmas and Easter.

"We mostly play church music, but we do have a couple of lighter tunes as well," said bell choir member Rebecca Bates-McArthur.

Not just any bells are sufficient for making beautiful music, however.

"The bells which the choir uses are tuned English handbells, which have a rigid clapper and members hold the bells with the mouths facing upwards," said bell choir director Barry Bartlett.

The Beechwood Bell Choir was the brainchild of the Rev. Stephen Hall, a former minister at the church and an avid lover of handbell ringers.

"Steve taught at American University in Paris and the cathedral over there had bell ringers," Bates-McArthur said. "He brought the idea to Beechwood."

Hall not only brought the idea of handbell ringing to Beechwood, but he quite literally brought the handbells as well, donating an entire two-octave set of bells to the church.

Bartlett said that Rev. Hall contacted him while he was directing another bell choir and asked him to help out at Beechwood.

"I had directed bell choirs at St. Luke's in Scituate for about five years and Steve asked me if I would direct the bell choir at Beechwood, temporarily. That was five or six years ago," Bartlett laughed.

For those interested in seeing what handbell ringing is all about, the Beechwood Bell Choir will join a number of other groups of handbell ringers on Oct. 2 at St. Christina's Church in Marshfield at the Jubilee Baby Shower, a benefit for the Massachusetts Association for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

"The Jubilee Baby Shower has been highly successful in the past, and we've had to keep moving it to bigger halls," Bartlett said. "The show will run from 2 to 4 in the afternoon and it is a great couple of hours of handbell ringing, refreshments, and talking with one another."

"The bells which the choir uses are tuned English handbells, which have a rigid clapper and members hold the bells with the mouths facing upwards."
— bell choir director Barry Bartlett.

Admission to the Jubilee Baby Shower is an unwrapped, new toy or blanket for a child ranging from infants to 3 year-olds.

Bell choir director Barry Bartlett said that he hopes the group will continue to bring its music to those outside of Beechwood.

"We're a very young group, in that we've only been around for five years," he said. "Playing to audiences outside of the church is certainly a goal we have for the future."

The group took a step in that direction by participating in the 1999 American Guild of Handbell Ringers in Orono, Maine, which Bates-McArthur said was a great learning experience.

"There were 850 bell ringers there, from all over New England," she said. "There were classes on how to hold and ring the bells as well as how to coordinate them into worship. It was a really good time."

Bartlett said the reason his "temporary" position as director of the bell choir has lasted for so long has been the enjoyment he gets from working with the people involved.

"It's a warm congregation and just a wonderful group of people," he said.

Summer band concert July 20

The Cohasset Recreation Department's next concert on the common for the 1999 season will be Tuesday evening, July 20, at 7:30 p.m., Town Common.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

The final concert is scheduled for Tuesday evening Aug. 3, at 7:30 p.m., on the Cohasset Common.

Concerts are available via the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. of Cohasset and a matching fund grant from the American Federation of Musicians of New York City, N.Y.

Concerts are free of charge and the public is invited to attend.

Bring your own lawn chair or blanket to sit on and from time to time insect repellent can be a good item to have available.

Olympic efforts on and off the field

By Barry McGurn
CORRESPONDENT

Jay Nothnagle, left and his father Jeff, competed in the Special Olympics World Summer Games in Raleigh, NC this summer.

At the annual Scituate H.S. football banquet in 1993, coach Phil Pisano spoke about each of his players - starting with the freshman - to the players and their proud parents in the crowd. Giving out letters, jackets and the appropriate awards, Pisano talked about each player, without naming that player until the last sentence.

As Pisano continued, he began talking about a player who never missed a practice, was always eager to help other people and always had a positive, uplifting approach.

Then the name.

"Jay Nothnagle, our manager."

"The entire team stood up and applauded," remembers Nothnagle's father, Jeff Sr. "It still blows me away."

Geoffrey Nothnagle Jr. or "Jay" - as he is affectionately known around Cohasset and Scituate - has Down Syndrome.

But as Jay's father - and many others in the area - can attest, this disability has done little to slow down this 25-year old. In fact, Jay Nothnagle has more on his resume than many 25-year-olds with more abilities.

"This was the kid we were told to institutionalize and that he would spend his life sitting in a corner, sucking his thumb," recalls Jeff Sr. who admits knowledge of Down Syndrome has come a long way, noting that "Jay was very fortunate that he was born 25 years ago and not 30 or 35 or 50. If he had been institutionalized, it would have cost the state far more a year - and it's like a college education price - to have someone institutionalized and doing nothing as opposed to working, paying taxes and leading a life."

Leading a life is exactly what Jay is doing. He has his driver's license, is an Eagle Scout, has his own personal "landscape business", works five mornings a week at VERC's Mobil Mart, works 35-plus hours at Super Stop & Shop in Cohasset, and is a member at Fitness First, a local fitness center.

"Whether we're in Cohasset (where Jay's family lives) or Scituate, people just come up and say 'Hi, Jay.'" notes Jeff Sr, a banker. "Kids, adults. Everybody knows Jay, but relatively few know us.

"We met people (on Saturday night) at a beach party. They didn't know who we were but they knew Jay."

Possibly Jay's most notable achievement has not yet been mentioned. Since he was eight years old, Jay has been involved in the Special Olympics, participating in seven different sports at the state level, while winning two gold medals at the Special Olympics World Games - one for power-lifting in 1995 in New Haven, Conn. and one (sharing the gold) for sailing at this year's event in Raleigh-Durham, N.C.

In 1995, the 130 pound. Nothnagle bench-pressed 170 pounds. and dead-lifted 290 pounds.

"He said 'Dad. You know, I could bench you.'" chuckled Jeff Sr., "And I said, 'Yeah, if I was silly enough to let you do it.'"

It seems Jay was always accepted by his peers as a kid who was no different than they were. Jay's mother, Taffy Nothnagle, put together and ran a program called Understanding Differences in Cohasset when Jay was in the first grade. Children went through exercises to see what it was like to have some of the disabilities covered in the program, such as blindness, deafness, physical disabilities and retardation, among others.

One day, while Jay was away in a private session, his mom covered retardation, explaining that these people learn more slowly than others, making it harder for them to do certain things. Then she asked the question.

"Who do you know that's retarded? Does anybody know anybody?"

Silence.

After some more probing questions, Taffy said to the group, 'Well, you guys know Jay.' The kids responded with 'Yeah, what about Jay?' 'Well, he's retarded,' replied his mother to a disbelieving group.

"That's just kind of a message about how well he was received by the kids," said his father. "It's a

Anticipation of a 'win' for Cohasset's second swim meet

By Barbara Orsini Linn
CORRESPONDENT

There was anticipation of a "win" in the air as the Cohasset swim team and the Knights of Columbus (K of C) swim team readied themselves for the start.

Thirty-four point separate the swim teams, points standing between a win or loss! The final score for this meet: Cohasset swim team 329 vs. K of C swim team 295! Congratulations, Cohasset, on an outstanding win!

The excitement was intense as the crowds cheered on the swimmers in each race. And, the swimmers, each determined to win from race to race, swam as if going from idle to full revved engines, swimming to burnout trying to capture that "win." A win which sometimes proved elusive, but never leaving our team undaunted!

These races were so close, that two-thirds into the meet it was decided to announce the current score — everyone waited with bated breath to find out which team was winning! Whew! It was Cohasset!

This meet had it all — a great weather day, cool at the start, with a beautiful sunny afternoon that heated up in temperature, it seemed, simultaneously, with the competition and excitement of the meet! It was an invigorating day with its fine elements of healthy competition and enthusiastic anticipation in capturing that brass ring!

And, this meet was not without a dash of "Greek Tragedy," as I discovered myself standing next to Caitlin Hurley — hysterical. She was crying her little eyes out and being consoled by her mother. Upon inquiry, Caitlin, in between sobs and rubbing her eyes, explained that she had missed her race because of standing in the wrong place while another swimmer took her place! Oh boy! Her brother, Patrick, and another thoughtful swimmer, Abbey Foley, were right there to help in the efforts of Caitlin Hurley's consolation! Coach Allison Hughes helped resolve this dismay by placing Caitlin in a freestyle 25 race.

Cohasset was proud to compete with, and to "out-swim" such a fine team as the K of C's, and appreciated the opportunity of being their host. K of C showed their fine sportsmanship at the end of the meet by gathering together to give the shouts of "A Cheer of Congratulations" to Cohasset. K of C team — a terrific competitor!

Athletes head to Bay State Games

The Bay State Games will kick off on Thursday, July 15 with the opening ceremonies at the FleetCenter at 7:30 p.m.

WBZ-TV's Bob Lobel will be the master of ceremonies, while Lt. Governor Jane Swift will welcome the athletes.

Cohasset will be represented in the games by Carlie Carter, gymnastics, Lydia Crafts, soccer, Siobhan Hart, gymnastics and Eileen Ridge, soccer. (The list of athletes is provided by the Bay State Games).

Noble and Greenough varsity girls rowing team

The Noble and Greenough School varsity girls rowing team ended off their season strongly at New England championships at the end of May, when the girls' third boat won the varsity third four with Cox. The third boat had an undefeated season and beat Deerfield in the grand final by four seconds.
The girls rowing at New England championships in third boat this year were: Meghan O'Sullivan '01, daughter of Jere and Betty O'Sullivan of Cohasset, at stroke; Loi Sessions '01, daughter of John Sessions and Pat Fairchild of Newton, at three seat; Sarah Swett '01, daughter of Laurie Swett of Newton, at two seat; Megan Chapman '00, daughter of Ted and Beverly Chapman of Newton, at bow; and Liz Beedy '01, daughter of Gregory and Helen Beedy of Medfield, as coxswain.

How to reach us

Youth league representatives are encouraged to call in their results by Monday at noon to the Mariner at 837-4571. Recaps can be left on the voice mail system if the sports department is unavailable.

Information can also be FAX to 1-781-837-4577 or emailed to mariner. Sports @cnc. com.

Results, photos and stories can also be mailed to the Mariner sports department, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, 02050.

combination of the kids and the parents and Jay's personality that make that."

Through the sixth grade, Jay attended public schools in his hometown of Cohasset before shifting to Scituate public schools. In both towns he was manager of both the hockey and football teams.

And now he gets up five days a week to arrive at VERC's Mobil Mart by 7 a.m., where he cleans, packs shelves and then, depending on the season, mows the grass, rakes the leaves or shovels the snow. He works there a couple hours a day before going to the Super Stop & Shop, where he has worked for seven years. He is a member of the union there, receiving full medical and dental benefits as well as being a stockholder in the company.

"In each of these places, clearly the companies could hire people for about the same price that had higher capabilities, but they don't. That says a lot about both Stop & Shop and VERC's Mobil," said Jeff Sr.

But in between all his jobs and other extracurricular activities over the years, Jay has found time to train for the Special Olympics. Track and field, speed skating, bowling, swimming, basketball, power lifting and - most recently - sailing. Oh, and when he was eight years old, the minimum age for the Special Olympics (which just celebrated its 30-year anniversary), Jay carried the torch.

Although power-lifting was his favorite event, according to his father, sailing may have required the most training. Jay, with the help of others, including his father, practiced all spring on a 15-foot centerboard after it was decided by a committee late last year that the 19-foot keel b[illegible] with which Jay had become familiar, would no longer be used.

So, after a lot of hard work this spring - and tipping over while navigating a new boat - Jay participated in the most recent Special Olympics World Games - which take place only every four years - from June 25 through July 4 at St. Mary's River at St. Mary's College in Maryland, an off-site location chosen away from the Raleigh-Durham location. After ten medal races, Jay came away with the gold, tying with a woman from Rhode Island.

Now, he has his sites on the winter games in 2001 in Alaska, where he wants to ski. Four years from now he is looking forward to sailing in Ireland, the first time that has taken place outside the U.S.

Working man

But now, it's back to work for Jay Nothnagle. Working three jobs, spending time with his family, which includes brother Jeff and sister Melissa, and training for the next Special Olympics.

When Jay came back from the World Games in 1995, Fitness First presented him with a power-lifting jacket with his name and the words "Power Lifting" on it.

"People really go out of their way for Jay," said his proud father. "It's really wonderful."

Oliva comes up a double winner at 13th Lipton Cup

By Bob Buckley
CORRESPONDENT

It has emerged as one of new England's more prestigious yachting events in a relatively short period of time.

The 13th annual Lipton Cup hosted by the Squantum Yacht Club is steep in tradition dating back to the tea magnate Thomas Lipton, who awarded his trophy to the best sailors in the Massachusetts Bay in the 1930s. Today, the majestic trophy is housed at the Squantum Yacht Club and many local sailors were able to put themselves not only onto the trophy but also into history.

Marshfield's Cindy Oliva was a double winner on Sunday and came away with the respect of many people associated with the Lipton. Oliva won the N10 Red Fleet division edging out Caitlyn Russell of Hull and Patrick Brome of Marshfield. But the award that drew the praise of national N10 officials was the sportsmanship Oliva walked away with.

"She showed what is good about this competition," said David McGilvray, the Lipton Cup director. "She certainly impressed all of the people associated with this race with the way she handled herself throughout the Lipton Cup."

The Lipton was revived in the mid 1980s through the hard work and dedication of McGilvray and other people associated with the boating in the area. The Lipton has given many sailors young and old alike the opportunity to compete at a high level.

Three of those sailors from Hingham dominated the Optimist Green Fleet as Finley Merrill won the division followed by Teddy Mellors and Stephen Morris. The Mellors family was well represented at the Lipton as Jane Mellors finished third in the N10 White Fleet.

Adam J. Traina was another Hingham sailor who excelled as he finished third in the Optimist Red Fleet. The Hingham flavor extended to the 210s as Richard Partridge and Bob Reis finished second and third respectively.

Ben Proctor of Scituate is quickly establishing himself as an outstanding young sailor as he won the Optimist Blue Fleet edging out Robbie Dolbec of Quincy and Meaghan Morrissey of Wollaston.

The big boys took over the ocean on Saturday and again there was a strong Hingham flavor. Bill Collins won the PHRF D Fleet race followed by fellow Hingham Yacht Club member Larry Tomilson.

IT'S HAPPENING

Hull Secret Garden Tour

In cooperation with the Hull/Nantasket Chamber of Commerce, the Hull Beautification Committee will sponsor the first garden tour on the peninsular. The tour will consist of 10 gardens, each individually tended reflecting the owner's personal tastes. Some of the gardens come with ocean views, some with ocean backyards, all with a gorgeous array of flowers, shrubs, grasses and interesting garden pieces. The tour roadway will also be a viewing experience, as the drive through scenic Hull will be highlighted by garden porches, window boxes and other greenery.

The secret garden tour, which weaves in and out of Hull's most scenic and sometimes, least visible sites, will be held Sunday, July 25 from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. The $10 ticket price comes with a map of the garden sites, descriptions of each site and refreshments served from a newly decorated Paragon Park Tea Cup. Tickets are sold in advance and can be purchased at the Chamber of Commerce Visitor Booth located across from the Mary Jeanette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Avenue (aka, The Studio at the Beach) or by sending a check by mail to Secret Garden Tours, P.O. Box 100, Hull 02045. Tickets purchased the day of the tour will be $12 and can be picked up at the Chamber Visitor Center Booth.

If you would like further information, interviews or photographs, please contact Marianne Buckley Curran at Locale Color at (781) 925-1920.

Lighthouse artist Donna Elias

The Hull Life Saving Museum will present the artwork of acclaimed maritime artist Donna Elias Saturday and Sunday, July 17 and 18, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The museum is located at 1117 Nantasket Ave., Hull. The artist will be on hand to sign prints and discuss her work with those attending. The weekend-long show is part of the museum's Sea and Sky Show which will feature work from several local and national artists.

Elias has gained national recognition for her extensive body of work celebrating American lighthouses. Since 1988, the artist has completed more than 200 lighthouse paintings as part of a series titled "Great American Lighthouses." Elias' fine art prints are sold worldwide and her work adorns a variety of licensed gift items, textiles, apparel and home accessories. In 1997, Elias began a sister series to her lighthouse collection entitled "Heroes of the American Coast," a tribute to the United States Life Saving Service. The series depicts the unique coastal architecture of 19th and 20th century life saving stations.

The Hull showing is a benefit for the host museum. Elias and her publisher Resort Graphics are donating 50 percent of the show's sales to Hull Station.

For more information, call the Hull Life Saving Museum at (781) 925-5433.

Concert series welcomes jazz vocalist

With the New Black Eagle concert moving to July 24 as a spectacular double bill with Herb Pomeroy and the New England Jazz All Stars, South Shore Conservatory welcomes popular jazz vocalist Donna Byrne to the Jane Carr Amphitheater in Hingham on Saturday, July 17, 7 p.m., as the third performance in the Evenings Under the Stars concert series.

A Boston-based performer, Byrne delights audiences with her "Great American Songbook" program which includes selections from artists such as George Gershwin, Cole Porter and Stevie Wonder.

Byrne's style is in keeping with the tradition of jazz greats such as Ella Fitzgerald, Irene Kral, Billie Holiday and Anita O'Day. Her ability to singers alike.

Proceeds from all Evenings Under the Stars concerts benefit the South Shore Conservatory Scholarship Fund which awards tuition assistance to deserving students who demonstrate financial need as well as talent. The school also underwrites master classes and outreach programs to area public schools, libraries and elderly housing facilities.

Tickets to the Donna Byrne concert are $15 for pavilion seats and $6 for lawn seats. For more information, call 781-749-7565, ext. 14.

Mother brings children's classic to Loring Hall

'Secret Garden' to be shown July 17

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

A Hingham mother has her way, then there will be a little more culture in town for children.

Signe McCullough of Water Street has decided to take matters into her own hands. She's rented Loring Hall and made arrangements with the owners for a one-time, special showing of "The Secret Garden" there on July 17.

"The idea of quality films is important to me," said McCullough, a mother of three children ages one, three and five.

"We are all dealing with what's happening in the schools," she said referring to the shootings in Colorado, "with computer and video games and TV.

"And here we are in this beautiful town with a perfectly beautiful little theater that is not being used at all for children."

David Scott of the Loring Theater, which has been in his family's hands since the early 1960s, is enthusiastic about McCullough's idea.

"It's great for the community," said Scott, who did the legwork to get the Warner Brothers' production.

Scott said the theater, which built up a nice base by showing primarily alternative art films for the past five years, can't offer family films on a regular basis because of contractual obligations.

"..here we are in this beautiful town with a perfectly beautiful little theater that is not being used at all for children."
—Signe McCullough, Water Street

But the theater is rented out privately from time to time for special movie showings mostly to local school groups, Scott said.

McCullough said there are some great films for children and Scott has provided her with a list of children's classics such as "Charlotte's Web" and "Treasure Island." She's not interested in animated films.

She hopes the idea of a children's movie at the Loring will catch on enough to be able to have one a month.

McCullough said she tried to figure out some good, quality things for children to do in Hingham and then realized the Loring was staring her right in the face.

"The Scotts couldn't have been nicer," she said about approaching them with the idea.

Although there's no formal arrangement, McCullough hopes if the event catches on that the local bookstores will offer books based on the movies.

"I hope children will be inspired to read the book," she said.

"The Secret Garden," which is the 1993 version, lasts one hour and 40 minutes. It is based on the children's book by Frances Hodgson Burnett.

Tickets for the showing are $4 and are available at Bookport and Buttonwood Books and Toys in Hingham Square and Buttonwood Books in Cohasset.

McCullough, said there will be tickets available at the theater before the film but she hopes most parents will buy them in advance. If there are any proceeds from the movie, they will be donated to the schools or Hingham Public Library, she said.

HMS Rose returns to Hingham Shipyard

The "HMS" Rose, a magnificent, revolutionary war, tall ship will return to Hingham Shipyard Aug. 24 to 28.

Sponsored by Sea Chain Marine, the "HMS" Rose will be open for a public tour on Saturday, Aug. 28 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The "HMS" Rose crew will be on board to answer questions about the ship and the history she represents. Representatives from the International Knot Tying Society have been invited to demonstrate their art. A small fee of $2 per adult will be charged with the proceeds being donated to The Hingham Food Pantry.

The "HMS" Rose will host day sails for Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, and Boston middle school students on Aug. 25, 26, and 27. Any middle school student interested in participating on these four-hour day sails should contact Sea Chain Marine at (781) 749-2222.

During the evenings of the ship's visit, The South Shore Chamber of Commerce, The Medical Foundation, Southeastern Massachusetts Vision 2020 Task Force, and the South Shore Health and Educational Foundation will utilize the "HMS" Rose for networking and fund raising events.

OBITUARIES

Earl W. Foell

Earl W. Foell, 69, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist formerly of Black Horse Lane in Cohasset, who interviewed every U.S. president since Eisenhower administration during his 29-year career with the Christian Science Monitor, died Saturday in the MIT Medical Department inpatient unit in Cambridge after a long battle with cancer.

After graduating from Principia College in Illinois with honors in 1949 with a math degree, Mr. Foell began his career in journalism as a copy boy with the Christian Science Monitor in 1954.

In the later 1950s, he was a reporter in Boston covering the State House and City Hall. In the years between 1963 and 1970, he was a UN correspondent for both the Christian Science Monitor and the Los Angeles Times. He traveled extensively, interviewing such leaders as China's Deng Xiaopeng and Vaclav Havel of Czechoslovakia. During those years, he won a Pulitzer Prize for international coverage.

At the Christian Science Monitor, Mr. Foell held many posts, including editorial writer, editor-in-chief, chief editorial writer, and contributing editor.

He wrote a column "Making Sense of the World," and in 1988 became the editor-in-chief of the World Monitor magazine.

He later became the editor of the Christian Science Monitor's editorial page and last year took the post of contributing editor.

Mr. Foell was also a Pulitzer Prize juror for many years. After judging a 1986 contest called "How Peace Came to the World," he became trustee of the World Peace Foundation. He headed a committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, where he coordinated shipments of U.S. newspapers to Third World countries. He was also a member of the Boston Economic Club, a board member of the Hiriri Foundation in Washington, and a trustee for Loomis Sayles Funds, and the Loomis Sayles Investment Trust.

Mr. Foell leaves his wife, Cordelia (Treanor) and three sons, David of New York City, Jonathan of Alamo, Calif., and Hayden of Oakland, Calif.

A memorial service is scheduled for 11 a.m. on Sept. 10 at the First and Second Church in Boston.

Beverly Ann Glodgett

Beverly Ann (Ferreira) Glodgett, 59, of Scituate, a homemaker, died June 22 at her home after a brief illness.

Mrs. Glodgett was born in Hanover and educated in Cohasset. She lived in Cohasset for 44 years before moving to Scituate 15 years ago.

She leaves a daughter, Kathleen A. Bruce of Scituate; a brother, Robert Ferreira of Cohasset; a sister, Carolyn Sargent of Cohasset; two grandchildren, and beloved friend Richard Delboy of Scituate.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham 01701.

Robert C. Jordan

Robert C. Jordan

Robert C. Jordan of Cohasset and Delray Beach, Fla., died in Delray Beach. He was 79.

Mr. Jordan retired as vice chairman of the board of directors of New England Life in 1983. Prior to this, he had been executive vice president-finance, chief financial officer, chairman of the finance committee and a member of the board of directors, as well as chief executive officer of the eight mutual funds sponsored by New England Life. In addition, he was a director of Loomis, Sayles and Company and Copley Real Estate Advisors. He was senior vice president at John Hancock prior to joining New England Life.

A native of Forth Worth, Texas, Mr. Jordan graduated from Texas Technological University in 1941, also completing the advanced management program at Harvard Business School in 1958.

He entered the United States Air Force in February 1942, serving until his discharge in June 1946, with a rank of major. Mr. Jordan saw significant action in Southeast Asia and was wounded while serving in India in 1944. He was awarded the Soldier's Medal of Valor.

He was a lifetime trustee of the Museum of Science, an honorary trustee of Mass. Eye and Ear and a trustee emeritas of Derby Academy in Hingham. He has also served as a trustee of Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates and Mt. Holyoke College.

Mr. Jordan loved boating and sailing. He cruised the waters of New England for more than 40 years.

He leaves his wife, Alison (Smith) of Cohasset and Delray Beach, Fla.; and three children, Julia Jordan Catlin of Cohasset and Delray Beach, Fla., Robert C. Jordan Jr. and Lindsay Jordan Guild, both of Cohasset, and four grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held Monday, July 26, at 4 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

Donations in Mr. Jordan's memory may be made to the Robert C. Jordan Fund, c/o Museum of Science, Science Park, Boston, MA 02114.

Youth faces charges following crash

Police arrested a 16-year-old Hull boy after he allegedly sped off following a traffic stop in a stolen car and crashed into a tree on Lamberts Lane early Sunday morning.

Sgt. Robert Jackson said Officer William Quigley observed the vehicle operating erratically on North Main and lower King streets.

"The vehicle pulled over and when the officer approached the vehicle on foot, the driver took off going northbound on Rt. 3A in speeds in excess of 80 miles per hour onto Rt. 228 in Hingham and crashed into a tree on Lamberts Lane," Jackson said.

A two-hour search ensued that included assistance from the Hingham K-9 unit. The driver was found hiding under a pile of brush about five feet from the road, police said. Two passengers also fled the vehicle and were not apprehended.

The boy was charged with car theft, leaving the scene of an accident after property damage, malicious destruction of property over $250, operating recklessly as to endanger, failure to stop for a police officer, operating a MV without a license, red light violation, speeding in violation of special regulations, failure to stay within marked lanes, failure to drive in lane nearest to the right and failure to use caution at an intersection.

Jackson said the youth, whose name was not released because he is a juvenile, was arraigned on the charges Monday in Quincy District Court and was being held on $5,000 bail at a state Department of Social Services facility. A court return date is set for July 28.

Real estate market continues to expand

Million-dollar home sales on the rise

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Living in Cohasset has never been an inexpensive proposition. Local real estate prices have always hovered well above state averages. But real estate prices have risen so dramatically in the past year that people might think local homes are insulated with platinum. The median home value has soared from about $310,000 last year to it current level of $358,460, according to Deputy Assessor Cheryl Pooler. And the selling prices for new homes are even higher. Virtually all of the local real estate agents interviewed for this article agreed that the median sale price of a home in Cohasset is hovering close to the $400,000 mark.

Nowhere is the increase in home values more evident than in the million dollar-plus range. Chris Ford of Hunneman & Company and Prudential Prime Properties said he expects more sales in excess of $1 million than ever before.

"Last year blew me out of the water and we should exceed last year in terms of million dollar homes."
— Chris Ford, Realtor

In 1997, one $1 million home sold in Cohasset. Last year, eight homes sold for more than $1 million and two sold for more than $995,000. This year, there have been three million dollar-plus sales with five more expected to close soon. And it's only July. Ford said he expects at least 14 million dollar-plus sales in Cohasset this year.

"Last year blew me out of the water and we should exceed last year in terms of million dollar homes," Ford said.

Landfill submits plans to reopen

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset Heights Limited (landfill) closed down last July, and since that time opponents of the facility have declared it dead without hope of resurrection. CHL opponents may have to dust off their weapons again. CHL appears to be back from the dead. Last week, CHL's engineer, Raymond Quinn of Sitec Environmental, submitted a proposal to the state asking permission to use a previously unused portion of the facility for dumping.

In the proposal, Quinn asked Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Durand to approve the project without further environmental review. If Durand accepts CHL's assertion that the project does not require additional environmental review, he has 10 days to approve the project.

The new plan also raises doubts about the ongoing negotiations between CHL and the town's CHL subcommittee. The CHL subcommittee has been meeting with landfill officials behind closed doors for more than a year in an effort to work out a closure plan for the facility. CHL subcommittee Chairman Kevin Ulmer said the group has been meeting once a month or once every other month recently to negotiate. He said the latest move by CHL could affect the CHL sub-committee (see sidebar). CHL-attorney Anton Moehrke was contacted by telephone, but he said he could not comment on the Schools to take private money

Funds will be used to restore programs

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

Faced with the knowledge that it is unlikely to receive private donations for all of the programs which have been eliminated in the last year, the Cohasset school committee voted unanimously on Thursday night to accept donations from those wishing to restore specific programs.

"There has been discussion in the community and among public officials on this issue and I know this is not an easy decision to make," Supt. Edward 'Ted' Malvey told the school committee. "There may be support for some programs and not for others."

School Committee members recognized that fact, but acknowledged that they would be foolish to dissuade potential donors from restoring at least some programs.

"If someone offers money, you

P.E. teaching position restored at CHS

The school committee voted unanimously on Thursday night to allocate $15,000 to restore a physical education position to full-time status.

Supt. Edward 'Ted' Malvey said that the money was available due to new teachers taking over from existing teachers at lower salaries.

Cooperative swim team fielded

The school committee voted to approve Cohasset Middle-High School principal Curtis Collins' request for a cooperative Scituate-Cohasset swim team on Thursday night.

"We'll save $2,800 because the costs will be split down the middle and it gives us an opportunity to stabilize a program on the edge, like we did with Norwell for gymnastics," he said.

Collins said that Cohasset would be the host team because they have an established program while Scituate has never had a swim team.

School committee meetings moved

Future meetings of the school committee will take place in the CMHS library, rather than in the A/V room as in the past, a move which school committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo said was made to improve the look of the meetings on television.

"The library is more conducive to cable and we are working with Media One to make things even better for all our viewers out there," he said.

Technology coordinator sought for K-12

Supt. Edward 'Ted' Malvey said on Thursday night that the school district has readvertised for a technology coordinator.

The coordinator would have K-12 responsibility and would ensure that technology is integrated into the curriculum at all levels.

Next school committee meeting Aug. 12

The next school meeting of the Cohasset school committee will take place at 6:30 p.m. in the library at CMHS.

The spotlight issues will be regionalization and cooperation. Regionalization means exploring the possibility of Cohasset merging with other towns into a regional school district, which school committee chairman Mark DeGiacomo said was highly unlikely.

Beach, RTF stickers available

You will need vehicle registrations, or if not a Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease) to obtain beach and RTF stickers.. You are encouraged to purchase your sticker through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Stickers will be on sale on the following schedule: Monday and Wednesday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Thursday evening 5 to 7 p.m. and Friday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Stickers will be on sale at the DPW building Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Beach stickers are $7 per vehicle, and $3 per vehicle for elders over 60. RTF stickers are $80 per family, for senior citizens over 65 will now be $65 and for a single resident $40.

Permits now being issued will expire May 31, 2000.

Ground-breaking for Lightkeepers' Memorial

A ceremony was held last week at Government Island to celebrate the beginning of work on the Lightkeepers Memorial.

Herb Jason, who is spearheading the project, said that a hole 12 feet in diameter and 4 feet deep has been dug and that large, reinforcing stones will be lowered into that hole.

"We had a nice turnout, with some of the selectmen and Nan Roth and others involved in the project," Jason said. "I'm definitely excited."

Two vacancies on Elder Affairs

Selectman Roseanne McMorris reiterated at the selectmen's meeting on Monday night that two vacancies exist on the Council for Elder Affairs. Openings also exist on the Commission on Disabilities (4), Historical Commission (1), and Drug and alcohol Committee (4, including 2 student openings).

Ten minutes for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays.

The next selectmen's meeting is Tuesday, July 27.

D & A drug hotline

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee operates a Drug and Alcohol Information and Referral Hotline on Tuesdays. Persons needing help with a drug or alcohol problem may call 383-4120. All calls are confidential, and staffed by a trained drug and alcoholism counselor on Tuesdays between 6 and 10 p.m.. On other days and at other times callers may leave a message.

A refuge for all creatures great and small

Clinic turns no wounded wildlife away

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Half a dozen baby chimney swifts washed from their nest with the recent rain make a racket not far from two newborn squirrels that suffered a similar fate and require round-the-clock care.

Then there's a wounded turtle, a group of screech owls and some young opossums along with bunnies, baby ducks and a resident iguana named Casey.

And that's not to mention dozens of other wounded or orphaned feathered and furry friends, which have all found refuge at the New England Wildlife Center off Fort Hill Street in Hingham.

"It's been busy," said Matt Laing, clinic director. "We're about 400 animals short of our total number for the entire year last year."

Laing said the mild winter meant more animals ate well and survived.

"There's more of everything out there," he said. "But the predators are happy — like the coyotes, foxes and hawks."

All variety of hurting animals are welcome at the center, which has been known to cure everything from sick coyotes to seagulls with broken wings.

The clinic's veterinarians and staff try to save them all, without exception.

Laing has even accepted insects for treatment — specifically, a praying mantis and a daddy longlegs that were brought in by youngsters.

He feels that children need to learn the value of life.

"Once they learn the lesson that some things are disposable, they can go from squashing bugs to hurting the cat," Laing said. He explained that "bio-diversity" in the environment is an important lesson to get across to the public.

The center, which is non-profit and is in its 15th year, has been located off Fort Hill Street in Bare Cove Park for 10 years. The center treats up to 4,000 animals a year on a budget of about $230,000 paid for through membership revenues, donations, private grants and bequests. The center does not charge anyone to treat or rehabilitate a wild animal but does suggest a donation.

The center treats up to 4,000 animals a year on a budget of about $230,000 paid for through membership revenues, donations, private grants and bequests.

Every animal is given an accession number upon admission so those bringing animals in can call for patient updates.

Right now the clinic is home to two fawns. One, which was found in a marsh in Dracut and was likely hit by a car, is orphaned and has an eye orbit injury. The eye will be operated on once the fawn is stronger. The other, which had its rear hooves injured when it got caught up in a piece of farm machinery, underwent surgery this week.

The fawn with the eye injury will be returned to the wild, but the other fawn will have to be placed in a zoo somewhere.

Laing said the staff limits human handling of the animals as much as possible, because the goal is to return them to the wild.

One of the most interesting cases at the clinic this year was the swans that overwhelmed a pond in Scituate. A total of about 40 "bachelors and bachelorettes" which had not broken up into mating pairs descended on the pond, which couldn't support the numbers. Seven were brought into the center suffering from starvation, Laing said.

Some animals are released in a week or so while others can stay as long as four-to-six months. The younger the animal is, the more dependent it becomes on human care. The clinic tries to return the animals to the habitat where they were found if possible.

Some species of birds like the yellow shafted flickers come back around for a free meal every so often, Laing said. Clinic staff tries to follow up on those newly released to the wild to make sure they are fully integrated. That could involve providing a feeding station for a few days, for example.

The center's animal population averages 65-70 percent birds with the remainder split between mammals and reptiles.

The clinic conducts an internship program with 75 different colleges through which 50-75 students a year from all over the country come to Hingham to help out and learn. They work at the clinic for one-to-three months.

Some want to get their feet wet in the veterinary field, others are often biology or education majors and some are undecided.

Laing pointed out that this week was "Canada geese" week at the center, which is currently housing geese with injuries incurred from a dog attack, fishing line and even a gunshot.

Outside, on the clinic grounds, are handfuls of baby ducks, several of which were rescued from the 30th floor of a Boston apartment building. Their mother made a nest in a protected, secluded area on the garden roof but then couldn't get her ducklings to water and was scared off.

But no matter what the species, Laing cares about them all.

"I get attached," he says. "I worry about them, but you do the best you can."

For more information on the wildlife center, call 749-1248.

Real estate market continues to expand

Tom Hamilton of Dean and Hamilton — a real estate firm that has been in Cohasset for 30 years — agrees that prices are soaring in Cohasset. Hamilton has two sales in excess of $1 million under agreement. One of those homes is a new house built at 124 Atlantic Ave. to replace a home that burned down last year (see related story). Hamilton said a number of couples have expressed interest in buying the new home when it is finished. The asking price: $1.9 million.

Damian Grozier of Jack Conway Company —with real estate offices in town since 1957 — said his company has sold many homes in the $700,000-$900,000 range this year.

"The high-end market is moving quite well," Grozier said. "It's amazing the number of people who will make multiple offers on homes in the $700,000-$900,000 range."

Hamilton and Ford both pointed to the Jerusalem Road/Atlantic Avenue area as the focal point for high-priced homes. Ford said even homes without a year-round ocean view are selling in the million-dollar range if the houses are close to the water. His company recently closed a deal for $1.3 million for a home that has an ocean view only after trees shed their leaves in the autumn. Hamilton said homes on Sandy Beach, Little Harbor and the Gulf River are definitely the most expensive in town.

All three Realtors agree that business is good, even though sales slow down in July and August while people are on vacation. Although it's a seller's market, there are some negative aspects to higher prices. There are fewer homes available for sale because sellers are receiving the prices they want for their homes. Ford said there are 60 licensed Realtors in town, but he doesn't think there have been 60 transactions this year.

"In order to survive as an agent in Cohasset, you have to sell in other communities," Ford said. "That's why I opened an office in Hull a few years ago. The median-value in Hull has also risen over the last two years from $108,000 to $160,000. But many more people can afford to buy in Hull. Still, there are many Cohasset agents who hang in there because they know they have the potential to make a big sale."

Grozier said some homes aren't selling because owners are testing the high-end of the market and overpricing their properties. He said overpriced homes don't attract buyers until the asking prices fall to realistic levels.

But the most prevalent effect of the current market is the overall effect on all home values. Pooler said increasing home values mean higher valuations. That's great for home sellers, but residents staying in town will have to pay higher taxes on their more valuable homes.

Ford said his figures show that the median selling price over the last 180 days is $378,000, while the average sale price is $457,000. Recently, Ford showed homes to a couple interested in buying in Cohasset. The couple wanted to spend about $300,000. After several weeks of searching with no success, Ford advised the couple to search in Scituate or Marshfield.

"These people grew up in Cohasset and they really wanted to live here," Ford said. "There just wasn't anything in that price range."

Grozier said he can find a few homes in the $300,000 range if people are willing to buy a property that needs some work. But people who want a home they can move into without renovations need at least $400,000, Grozier said.

Despite the lack of affordable starter homes, the outlook for the future is good, all three agents agreed.

Unlike the real estate speculation that dragged down the national economy in the 1980s, the current economy is technology based and more secure. Ford said many people bought real estate in the 1980s hoping to resell the property quickly for a tidy profit. He said people who are buying now are looking for a home for their families.

Hamilton said he doesn't expect a real estate crash like the one in the late eighties, although he does see the current market leveling off soon.

"We're benefiting from the good business atmosphere in Boston, which is based on technology, investment, medicine, education and the Big Dig," Hamilton said. "The market always fluctuates, but the long-term outlook is great."

Median values rise again

The median value of a home — the mid-point between the highest and lowest price — is often used to describe the impacts of tax increases on homeowners. The official assessed values lag behind actual real estate prices because the assessors are a year behind market values so they can accurately reflect real prices. That's why the official median price the assessors use is currently lower than the median selling price.

One of the most striking phenomena of the current real estate boom is the willingness of buyers to pay a lot more for homes than assessed values. Fortunately for buyers, they still pay taxes based on the assessed value of the properties. But there is an indirect effect on valuations when houses sell for far more than their assessed values.

Deputy Assessor Cheryl Pooler said people who pay a lot more than the assessed values for properties can accelerate the rate of valuation increases beyond market forces. One exception was the sale of Michael Kennedy's house at 181 Atlantic Ave. last year. The assessed value of that property was $1.37 million, but the new owner paid $2.3 million. The new owner will pay taxes only on the assessed value. Pooler said the town did not factor in that sale during last year's revaluation because it was considered a "notoriety sale."

"That house probably wouldn't have sold for as much last year if it had not been owned by Michael Kennedy," Pooler said. "It wasn't indicative of the market."

But homes have been selling for prices 20-30 percent higher than last year, and that is indicative of the market. Pooler said assessors will have to make an adjustment this year to reflect the increasing home values in town. That's bad news for home owners tired of paying high taxes. Of course, they'll benefit from higher-valued homes if they choose to sell. And you won't hear any complaints from cash-strapped town officials seeking additional tax revenue.

Victorian house to be rebuilt and sold

Atlantic Ave. home to rise from the ashes

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

The stone foundation of the 19th-century Victorian house at 124 Atlantic Ave. still remains, a proud reminder of its storied history.

Sadly, the foundation is all that is left of the magnificent old home, which was consumed with flames on the night of August 28, 1998. The fire started on the first-floor porch when a candle came in contact with the combustible cushion of a wicker chair. The flames were able to spread upward very quickly due to the home's "balloon frame structure, which provided numerous open channels for the fire to travel.

Tom Hamilton of Dean and Hamilton Realtors, who is selling the home for owners Susan and Russell MacPherson and overseeing the plans to rebuild it, said the new home would be completely safe and would be up to date with the latest in fire safety advances.

"The house will be built on top of the existing stone foundation, but will be built to today's standards," Hamilton said.

Just like the old house, the new house will be 6,000 square feet and Hamilton said the look and feel of an old New England home will be retained.

"It's going to be a shingle-style home and has been approved for seven bedrooms," Hamilton said.

The old home was on both the local and the Mass. Historical commission surveys and was built in 1895 by Richard Lothrup, grandson of sea captain John Jacob Lothrup.

Local historian David Wadsworth has said that "balloon frame" houses were common because it was not possible to create such sprawling homes with the hand-hewn posts and beams used previously.

"It was lighter construction and made it possible to make multiple shapes," he said. "They could do things never done before and be guided by their taste, whether they wanted Italian-style villas and English country cottages."

The new home is for sale for $1.9 million, according to Hamilton, and he said he has been contacted by interested parties since the day the 'For Sale' sign went up.

Preliminary plans for the new home also include a screen porch, a sitting room, a roof deck, and a view room in the attic.

Hamilton said that the Axiom architectural firm of Hanover was hired to draw up the plans. Those preliminary plans are available to the public and can be seen at Dean and Hamilton.

"The exterior elevations and floor plans have just been approved and we hope to be getting a building permit within a week," Hamilton said.

Building inspector Bob Egan said following the blaze that he felt the home could be rebuilt on top of the existing stone foundation.

"The way I look at it, if it weren't such a unique house, such a beautiful house, there would be no question it would be a total loss," he said. "But with this house it may be worth it to at least explore salvaging (what's left) and rebuilding from the first floor up."

Landfill submits plans to reopen

proposal.

The area CHL is proposing as a stand-alone dump is a 14 acre parcel known as Area V. Previously, CHL asked the town and state officials for permission to use Area V as an expansion to the main landfill. The board of health rejected the Area V expansion. CHL appealed the decision in court, but a judge upheld the town's ruling on two points: traffic and ground water impact. CHL is asserting that the change in scope will mitigate the health board's objections to the project.

Quinn submitted the new proposal to the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) on July 15. In the letter to EOEA, Quinn described the proposal as a project change that would not require environmental review because it would not produce additional environmental impacts. According to Quinn, the new plan for Area V would allow CHL to accept 299 tons of construction debris per day, the same amount the landfill historically accepted before it closed down. The previous plan to expand Area V asked the town to allow CHL to accept 900 tons per day. Quinn said that the reduction from 900 tons per day in Area V to 299 tons per day represents a reduction in scope of the project.

John K. McNabb Jr., vice president of the anti-landfill group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE), and the most vocal opponent of CHL, scoffed at the plan.

"They're misconstruing everything," McNabb said. "They're not going from 900 tons per day to 299 tons. CHL is closed. They're going from zero tons per day to 299. Procedurally, it's ludicrous. They're trying to squeak this thing through without public scrutiny. This thing doesn't have a snowball's chance in hell of passing."

McNabb said he believes CHL is trying to take advantage of plans by the state to partially lift a moratorium on landfills. McNabb said the partial lift on the ban does not apply to the type of landfill CHL is proposing.

"I predicted they would try to take advantage of the lifting of the moratorium," McNabb said. "This is one of the main reasons I have been pushing for site assignment hearings. I knew we had to shut them down before the moratorium was lifted."

Ulmer said CHL recently exhausted all appeals on the original Area V expansion. The only way for CHL to resurrect the expansion plan is through a change in proposal for the project.

McNabb said the proposal is riddled with inconsistencies beyond the assertion that the project represents a reduction in scope. McNabb pointed out that CHL does not possess a valid special permit for the landfill. Last year, McNabb discovered that original landfill owner James Tyeryar had never filed the special permit needed to operate the facility with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. The owners of CHL also failed to file the permit after purchasing the facility on 1986. Failing to file the permit meant CHL had never operated legally and was therefore in violation of the town's Water Resource Protection District, which prohibits landfills in the Lily Pond Watershed. A large portion of CHL sits squarely in the Lily Pond Watershed.

Quinn also asserts that the change in project scope will result in less environmental damage because the physical conditions of the land around the landfill have not changed since the original Area V proposal. But McNabb pointed to a study last year confirming the existence of water-bearing fractures under the landfill that could carry sediment and contaminants from CHL to the Lily Pond Watershed. Previously, CHL denied the existence of any bedrock fractures that could carry contaminants to Lily Pond.

McNabb said the proposal does not contain provisions for a 25 percent recycling requirement imposed on landfills by the Department of Environmental Protection.

Also, Quinn said zoning restrictions could reduce the size of the proposed Area V landfill to 10 acres because of the facility's proximity to "unused" water wells at Sohier Street and Elms Meadow. McNabb said a new study has shown that those wells contain drinkable water and could easily be rehabilitated by the town.

McNabb said town officials are adamantly opposed to any plan to reopen CHL in any way. He said the selectmen, the water commission and SAFE have already sent letters of opposition to Secretary Durand at EOEA. There are also aesthetic reasons to oppose the new proposal, McNabb said.

"I doubt very much that the people who bought homes at Rose Hill that cost more than $400,000 will be thrilled to find out that they would have a clear, direct view of the Area V landfill," McNabb said.

McNabb said CHL should be required to list the project in the Environmental Monitor and conduct a 20-day public comment period. CHL should also be required to send the notice of change to the more than 500 people who commented on the original Area V proposal. He said town officials also support requiring CHL to perform a full Environmental Impact Report for the project.

CHL sub-committee woes

Members of the CHL sub-committee are facing a dilemma. The committee has been negotiating a closure plan with CHL for more than the year under the assumption that the facility would stay closed forever. But with CHL's latest proposal to open the landfill again utilizing a previously unused area, the future of the CHL sub-committee is uncertain. CHL sub-committee Chairman Kevin Ulmer it is not yet certain what it means to the CHL sub-committee.

"We're trying to determine whether we're going to continue," Ulmer said.

Ulmer said the committee is not privy to every detail of CHL-owner Paul Barry's plans for the landfill so he is not completely surprised by the latest development.

John K. McNabb Jr., a member of the committee, believes the latest proposal signals the end of negotiations between the CHL sub-committee and the owners of the landfill.

"I think we could say unofficially that the negotiations are over," McNabb said. "This is beyond the pale... I would say the negotiations are way past being over. They were almost dead anyway."

Town Manager Mark Haddad would not comment on the CHL sub-committee except to say he agreed with McNabb's assessment.

McNabb urges CHL opposition to rally

John K. McNabb Jr., vice president of the anti-landfill group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE) is urging residents to formally rally against plans by the owners of the Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill to reopen part of the dump. McNabb said residents who oppose the plan to reopen should fax letters of opposition to Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Demand at the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs no later than tomorrow, Friday, July 23, 1999. McNabb said Durand could approve CHL's plan on Monday if he agrees with the reasoning behind the proposal to reopen the landfill. The fax number at EOEA is 1-617-727-2754. People sending faxes should ask Durand to require a public comment period, publication in the Environmental Monitor, and an Environmental Impact Report (EIR). McNabb all faxes should reference the following: Notice of Project Change 7223 Cohasset Heights Limited.

PLUMBING MUSINGS

BULL MARKET

A good friend of mine whom I have known since childhood, has been very successful in the financial world, and is now the chief financial officer at one of the largest banks in the region. His job today consists of overseeing a few subordinates, giving speeches, being interviewed on TV and playing golf. Not a bad life, but I know the pressures in a high profile job like that must be intolerable. One of the topics my friend touches upon in his speeches is his friendship with the 'local plumber' who occasionally calls for advice on investing. Recently I phoned him to inquire about an Asian steel company that I had read an article about. He used this conversation in a speech as an example that even the smallest of investors in today's world of telecommunications is aware of the global economy, and that perhaps the American Stock Market has run its numbers beyond its actual worth. At a meeting in England a short time ago my friend used his 'plumber' as an example, again. The next morning the headlines in Reuters was, "PLUMBER PREDICTS FALL OF GREAT BULL MARKET." Which goes to prove once again, "Don't believe everything you read in the papers."

Former Cohasset resident takes MBTA to court

Judge won't dismiss diesel emissions suit

By Brian Brennan
STAFF WRITER

A federal district court judge denied motions for dismissal last week in a civil case brought against the MBTA, setting the stage for a legal battle in the months ahead.

The suit also names contractors Sverdrup Corporation and Cambridge Systematics and was initiated by former Cohasset resident Kevin O'Keeffe.

O'Keeffe, who now lives in Milton, is a graduate of MIT and co-founder and president of Technical Resources for Environmental Quality [TREQ], a non-profit organization whose purposes include legal and educational activities in support of the natural environment and the environmental rights of citizens.

He claims that the defendants made false statements regarding the air quality benefits that would be derived from building the Plymouth and Middleborough lines of the Old Colony commuter rail project.

"The law suit alleges that the MBTA and the two sets of engineers left diesel locomotive exhaust emissions out of environmental impact reports for the purpose of securing $400 million in Federal project funding," said O'Keeffe, who filed under the Federal False Claims Act.

While the lawsuit concerns only the Plymouth and Middleborough lines of the Old Colony project, Hingham Greenbush Coordinator Alexander Macmillan said that those involved in the Greenbush debate should be paying attention to the lawsuit.

"The fact that there is a lawsuit speaks volumes about the believability of MBTA and Sverdrup studies."

Scituate Selectman Joseph Norton recently commented on the suit and it's probable impact to the rail restoration project.

"Now that the court will hear the case, I just see more problems for the T," Norton said. "This (lawsuit) could drag it out for years and cost even more money."

The MBTA has hired the law firm of Baker, Donnelson, Bearman, and Caldwell to represent it in this matter, the same firm that has previously represented tobacco companies in cases regarding public health issues. One of the firm's partners is none other than Howard Baker, the former Senate minority leader.

The legal action which O'Keeffe has brought is called a qui tam lawsuit, which means it is made in the name of the United States of America, which is named as the plaintiff in the case. O'Keeffe is acting as relator, which means that he is the one bringing the action.

The diesel emissions which O'Keeffe claims the MBTA and the engineers purposely left out of the 1990 and 1992 Environmental Impact Reports [EIRs] include nitrogen oxides (NOx), sulfur oxides (SOx), and particulate matter (PM).

Andrew Brennan, director of environmental affairs for the MBTA, said that O'Keeffe's claims that the MBTA purposely misrepresented its environmental quality studies were unfounded because the dangers of such pollutants were not as clearly recognized by the scientific community in the early 1990s as they are today.

"In the early 1990s, we identified that diesel emissions were less harmful than volatile organic compounds, which are emitted by automobiles," Brennan said. "That was completely in line with the scientific knowledge at the time. He's saying we should have seen this in 1990."

Brennan also takes issue with the O'Keeffe's contention that the MBTA omitted diesel emissions.

"We have pointed directly to places in the EIR where we discuss diesel emissions. We indicated that there was NOx emitted. He says we are minimizing the impacts of those emissions but we used the proper science and adhered to the proper regulations at the time. The Environmental Protection Agency didn't recognize those dangers either in the early 1990s.

"As science advances, you have to keep up with those advances and the way you review an environmental project in 1999 is different than the way you did in 1990."

O'Keeffe vehemently disagreed with Brennan's stance, saying that some of the dangers of diesel locomotives were known back in 1990.

"Do you think that, in 1990, the world believed in zero-emission diesel locomotives?" he asked. NOx has been implicated in ozone for decades. They had to leave the [diesel] emissions out and they left the emissions out. Of course, these are only allegations unless they are proven in a court of law."

O'Keeffe went on to say that as long as agencies looking to build projects and the consultants hired to work on those projects are doing the environmental impact studies, there will inherently be conflicts of interests.

"The project engineers are the ones doing the EIR. If there's a problem, they're out of work. It's like having a fox doing perimeter security for a henhouse. It makes more sense to hire an independent firm."

O'Keeffe said that he feels he has been broadly painted by the MBTA as a train foe, but says he simply has a problem with diesel locomotives.

"I don't think the idea of public transportation is a bad one, it just needs to be done cleanly," he said. "It probably needs to be electric, which wouldn't create noise, vibration, or air emissions issues.

"Boston Edison is talking with third-world countries that have electric transit. If the MBTA proposed something like that, I think more people would be able to get behind it. They want to do it the quick and dirty way."

Brennan said that O'Keeffe could be awarded as much as $135 million were he successful in the lawsuit, because as the relator of the qui tam lawsuit, O'Keeffe would be entitled to as much as 30 percent of the damages, which Brennan said could be as much as $450 million.

O'Keeffe said he did not bring the lawsuit to reap monetary rewards.

"I haven't received a nickel from TREQ in four years. I've devoted that time to get information out to people about environmental concerns. The only way I can prevail and get any money is if I can prove that the MBTA defrauded the United States."

"Boston Edison is talking with third-world countries that have electric transit. If the MBTA proposed something like that, I think more people would be able to get behind it. They want to do it the quick and dirty way."

VISIT THE FARMER'S MARKET

May we begin by reminding you that the Farmer's Market is in full swing now, and that all of the produce, homemade relishes, vinegars, breads, etc. are outstanding! Plus the fact that there is such a nice atmosphere, with things for children and adults, you really must go! So much to see, do, buy; under the direction of Anna Abbruzzese, how can it be anything but the best?

GET-WELL WISHES

Next, we have to do our very best to send Laura Marks huge get-well wishes — Laura had her appendix removed last week, and we know that she is making a rapid recovery — she is the best!

Laura is a special gal with the best parents and friends in the world, she'll probably be back on her rollerblades as this goes to press!

Right, Laura?!

GO TO FENWAY!

All we have seen in the press and on television is about baseball — most of us weren't lucky enough to go to the All-Star game, perhaps one of the last big events at Fenway — here's good news from the South Shore Community Center, you can go to Fenway! They are calling it the "Last Hurrah of Summer," a Red Sox Family Outing! To be held Aug. 30, you can go to the SSCC for a hot dog, then jump on the bus to the game! The Red Sox are playing the Kansas City Royals (game time 7:05 p.m.) with all seats in the same section on 1st Base Line in the grandstands. The cost is $20 per person, includes bus to and from park, plus pre-game dog at the center at 5 p.m. Bus departs at 5:45 p.m. More details to follow, but be sure to call the center for information at 383-0088.

IT'S HAPPENING

Farmer's Market open for summer

The Fourth Annual Cohasset Village Farmers' Market starts at 2:30 p.m. Thursdays on beautiful Cohasset Common.

Fresh, locally grown produce, herbs, bedding plants, perennials, wreaths, baked goodies and breads, jams and jellies, flowers and handcrafted soaps will be available every Thursday all summer long through the middle of October.

Anyone interested in helping to sponsor the Farmers' Market, and local growers and crafters interested in participating in the market are welcome to call Jennifer Warshaw at (781) 383-6992 for more information.

Cohasset Youth Baseball

Cohasset Little League announced the lucky winner of its Bermuda Getaway.

The winning raffle ticket was drawn and announced at the CYBA's fundraiser held June 26 at the South Shore Community Center.

Local resident Debbie Coleman learned she'll be packing her bags and heading to Bermuda with a companion on Delta airlines for four days of sun and fun. Congratulations Debbie.

Seiji and Yo-Yo at Tanglewood

There are still a few seats left for South Shore Conservatory's annual trip to Tanglewood Sunday, Aug. 1. This is a wonderful opportunity to see Seiji Ozawa conduct the Tanglewood Music Center Orchestra in a performance that also features the Gustav Mahler Youth Orchestra. The program features Yo-Yo Ma and Yuri Bashmet, along with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus. These illustrious musicians will perform Bartok's "The Miraculous Mandarin" and Strauss' "Don Quixote."

The listenin' is easy as South Shore Conservatory handles all the details. Enjoy a comfortable ride in an air-conditioned motorcoach while a conservatory representative provides enlightening commentary on the program and musicians you will be hearing. You will arrive in plenty of time to enjoy a gourmet box lunch and the spectacular Berkshire Mountain scenery on the beautifully-landscaped grounds of Tanglewood.

The conservatory provides tickets, transportation, commentary, box lunch and wine and cheese refreshments for the return trip, all for $98 per person. The bus leaves from The Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury at 8:30 a.m. and the commuter parking lot at Route 3 and Route 228 in Rockland, across from Home Depot at 9 a.m., and will return by 8:30 p.m.

Call Laura Carleton at (781) 934-2731, Ext. 14, to make reservations.

Musical tribute to abuse survivors

As South Shore Conservatory's Summer Wind Ensemble performs its final concert Thursday, July 22, 7 p.m. in the Jane Carr Amphitheater, the Senior Wind Ensemble students feature a very poignant piece written as a tribute to survivors of violence against children.

"As painful and stressful as the subject (of child abuse) can be, so does the music carry us through these emotions," explains SWE music director and conductor Malcolm W. Rowell Jr. "It's a piece of music that can speak to everyone at some level. It creates emotion through sound."

Composer Mark Camphouse wrote the piece entitled "Watchman, Tell Us Of The Night," in 1944 in hopes of opening society's eyes to the atrocities of child abuse. Portraying the anguishing aloneness, lost innocence, yet hope of the child survivor are the principal dramatic goals of this 14-minute single movement work — a hymn for all children, according to Camphouse. "The strength in the music is its orchestration," says Rowell. It has some extraordinarily intense moments, and can be as delicate as a single breath at others."

Summer Wind Ensemble is South Shore Conservatory's popular music camp for brass, woodwind and percussion students. Every year it attracts more than 120 junior and senior high school musicians.

Additional compositions to be performed include Frank Ticheli's exquisite arrangement of "Shenandoah," and John Philip Souza's little known "Easter Monday on the White House Lawn."

Under the direction of conductor Beth Bryant, the Young Performers Ensemble performs Bill Holcombe's arrangement of "Amazing Grace," plus works by John Tatgenhorst, Paul Desmond, F.E. Bigelow and Robert Jager.

Admission to the concert is free. Concertgoers must park at the Hingham bus depot at 19 Fort Hill St. and take the shuttle bus to the amphitheater. Handicapped parking is available on the conservatory grounds.

For more information, call (781) 749-7565, Ext. 16.

Register for 'Cinderella'

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold Music Circus registrations for Cinderella Thursday, July 22. The Music Circus children's show registrations will be open to children in the playground program and the show date for Cinderella is Thursday, Aug. 5.

Music Circus registrations are held at the recreation office, 1st floor, Town Hall. Registrations will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and again from 1 to 7 p.m. All tickets for the Music Circus are $6.

Registrations are held each Thursday according to the above times, two weeks prior to the actual show date. The final registration, for "The Incredible Magic Circus" will be held Thursday, July 29.

Smoking variances

While not a popular decision with anti-smokers, the health board made the right decision to award the Red Lion Inn a variance to the town's 100 percent smoking ban.

The bar will have a separate ventilation system, which will protect people in the kitchen and dining room from breathing the smoky air.

As owner, Mr. Gerde Ordelheide, pointed out, the decision to provide an area for smoking was a business one.

Neighboring Hingham is now considering variances to its tough no-smoking regulations. But the change of heart there was too late for McArthur's on Whiting Street that had to close its doors when its lounge crowd went down the road to Norwell, Rockland and Weymouth — towns that have not banned smoking.

Someday smoking will be history. But until that day arrives, we think permitting smoking areas that meet the standards set by the board of health are a good compromise between the needs of public health and those of business.

The art festival

At the festival this year, we had a great time gazing at the works of art and enjoying a lobster lunch right on the common.

We thought the fiddlers were great. We'll admit to resisting the temptation of fried dough. The strawberry shortcake and whipped cream at the Second Congregational Church was enough for us.

We ran into some old friends and did lots of window shopping at the vendors.

So we have trouble understanding what all the fuss was about last week at the selectmen's meeting where several citizens said the festival was too circus-like.

The art festival really adds to Cohasset and brings so many people in to see our lovely town. We look forward to the festival every year and can't imagine June without it.

Anonymous calls

TO THE EDITOR:

Is there any lower form of life than the person who writes anonymous letters or makes anonymous telephone calls? They are right down there with dog-kickers, nose-pickers and litterers!

Anyone who has one of those telephone company gadgets that are supposed to display and record the telephone numbers of incoming calls has to be astonished at how many are not displayed, and are labeled as "anonymous" or "not available."

Anyone who wants to make calls without his or her number being displayed need only pay a small monthly fee to the telephone company. Apparently, there is legislation requiring the telephone companies to provide such anonymity!

Could some public spirited legislator introduce a bill forbidding the telephone companies from providing, rather than encouraging, cowardly anonymity?

Sure, many of the calls connect, and the caller identifies himself or herself. But if the caller is on the up and up, why should the originating telephone number be concealed?

Of course, a mischievous coward still could call from a pay phone or write an anonymous letter, but why should legislation make it more convenient to call from home or office?

Thanks for Little League support

TO THE EDITOR:

The balloons have burst, the decorations are down and the D.J. has gone home. The regular Little League season has come to an end while summer travel continues.

On behalf of the CYBA Board of Directors, we would like to recognize those individuals and businesses who tirelessly put in a major league effort.

Despite 100 degree heat, families and friends of the Little League came out to support this organization with enthusiasm and their never-ending ability to have fun. As a result of their generosity, Little League will be able to maintain the fields, replace and upgrade equipment and uniforms, train umpires and coaches, and award scholarships to Little League high school graduates.

As most of you know, Little League eventually touches us all. Whether as parent, sibling or player, the game pulls you in and all too quickly becomes a sweet memory.

To all of you—coaches, parents, friends and neighbors, we express our gratitude. Thanks to your support our children once again were "kids of summer" learning the game and life's valuable lessons:

Alternatives to Greenbush

TO THE EDITOR:

Your editorial of July 15, 1999 asks the question "What are the transportation alternatives if there were no Greenbush."

From my vantage point, those who have been supportive of improved and efficient transportation on the South Shore but who have opposed Greenbush, have, for many years made positive and creditable proposals which answer your question. Linked multimodal solutions such as improved commuter boat and bus services, effective connections, better HOV use and Red Line extension are some. Meaningful discussions of these methods were summarily dismissed by the MBTA and sometimes by the media as unworkable without reasonable review.

Indeed, for awhile, the efforts of the MBTA have been counterproductive to making even modest improvements to transportation on the South Shore. The limitation of HOV use to three passengers in a car, the reluctance to fund improvements in the Hingham Commuter Boat facilities and the reduction of bus service are but a few examples of their will to further Greenbush as the "preferred alternative" at the expense of our commuting public.

Concerns raised about pollution, safety, environmental and economic damage as well as adverse impacts on quality of life and, of course, cost were

New at the R.T.F.!

[A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by the Cohasset Recycling Committee]

Missed you last week. Sorry, computer problems.

In the meantime, some exciting developments at our favorite hangout! First of all, naturally, what gem have you selected from the Boutique lately? More than one column could easily be written just about prizes that we all [or most of us, whether we'll admit it or not] have picked up at the R.T.F. In exchange for a brand-new/unused steel safety ladder [for child's second-floor window] and my collection of braided rug materials [great colors, expensive needle and thread] that I left last week, I picked up a terrific coffee table that merely needed a leg glued [thanks, Citizen, for leaving the leg, otherwise...].

Also certainly more than one column could be written about what people have done with finds from the R.T.F. How about the fellow who converted the old large TV console to an aquarium with light connected to the on/off switch? David told us about that one....

Back to business. It was reassuring that many residents personally complimented our security officer Saturday—for helping to maintain fairness, discouraging scofflaws and out-of-towners who might want to take advantage of us without paying what we pay! Mr. Security Guard remarked on the widespread decency of our citizenry. How much more pleasant life is when we're courteous!

For several weeks now the R.T.F. has enjoyed our newly-hired worker, Paul Simons, Bossman Dickie Poland's right-hand man.

Merle Brown spoke to the new Third Grade Class at Osgood about recycling recently. These people will be the class responsible for recycling at Osgood School.

Also new—paint on some of our R.T.F. buildings, courtesy of the sheriff! While one of the painters was a bit disappointed that I couldn't offer him a cigarette, he appeared glad to be out in the open doing something constructive.

And—we have purchased a [used] roll-off trailer from Vermont. The roll-off will be saving the town money because we can haul the roll-off containers ourselves.

Hoorah! Your compost bins are on the way! Jean, who has been working on this project, says they will be available soon at a very reasonable price. Watch this newsletter for more news on the new bins.

Also! Collapse those waxed OJ and milk cartons and drop same in JUNK MAIL.

So you see, not everything at the R.T.F. is old. See you next time.

HEALTH NOTES

Risks associated with raw sprouts

A newsletter created by a volunteer staff and issued periodically by S.Bobo of the Board of Health.

Because of reports of increasing numbers of illnesses associated with consumption of raw sprouts, the Food and Drug Administration has advised all persons to be aware of the risks associated with eating raw sprouts (e.g., alfalfa, clover, radish).

Those persons who wish to reduce the risk of foodborne illness from sprouts are advised not to eat raw sprouts. This advice is particularly important for children, the elderly, and persons with weakened immune systems, all of whom are at high risk of developing serious illness due to foodborne disease. People in high risk categories should not eat raw sprouts.

Since 1995, raw sprouts have emerged as a recognized source of foodborne illness for hundreds of people in the United States. These illnesses have involved the pathogenic bacteria Salmonella and E.coli O157. Alfalfa and clover sprouts have been involved most often, but all raw sprouts may pose a risk.

Although infections with Salmonella and E.coli O157 can cause serious illness, the illness is generally self-limiting in most healthy adults. However, an E.coli O157 infection can lead to hemolytic uremic syndrome with resultant kidney failure or death in children, and equally serious complications in the elderly. Salmonella infections can cause serious illness in children, the elderly and the immune compromised. Healthy persons infected with these bacteria experience diarrhea, nausea, abdominal cramping and fever for several days.

Despite efforts by industry to make raw sprouts safer, the FDA continues to receive reports of illnesses associated with raw sprouts. According to Jane E. Henney, MD, FDA Commissioner, "the best way to control this risk is not to eat raw sprouts"

Sprouts grown in the home also present a risk if eaten raw. Many outbreaks have been attributed to contaminated seed. If pathogenic bacteria are present in or on seed, they can grow to high levels during sprouting even under clean conditions.

Alternatives to Greenbush

largely ignored or downplayed.

Greenbush may well be found to be cost-prohibitive — a situation recognized years ago. But we cannot waste any more time. We must begin right now developing the process and strategy by which a practical and comprehensive plan, using our linked multimodal resources which are more cost-effective and environmentally and locally preferable, can be used to solve the current and future transportation needs of our entire region from Boston to Southeastern Massachusetts.

Such a plan should factor in current conditions and also proposed changes such as the Hingham Shipyard and South Weymouth Naval Air Station which would have profound impacts.

I would propose that we could redirect and energize the efforts of the Citizens Advisory Committee with the cooperation of the MBTA, state agencies and local authorities to begin this process under the direction of Secretary of Transportation Kevin Sullivan.
